The U.S. Communist Party said flatly last week that Henry Wallace's third party, platform and all, was strictly a Communist idea. The statement was made in a resolution prepared for the Communist Party's convention, and published in The Worker. Chicago, Ill.

After the usual run of epithets about the "bipartisan war coalition" and the "reactionary, imperialist essence of the Marshall Plan," the resolution declared that, as soon as the war ended, the Communist Party had "boldly proclaimed the need . . . for a new people's party." The resolution added modestly: "Because of its correct line, the Party was able to carry on effective mass work and make significant contributions . . . to the forging of the new political alignment and people's coalition." Mon.

The resolution admitted that Henry Wallace's party was not all that could be desired. Certain ideological faults would have to be corrected. "It is necessary to expose the illusion that the abolition of monopoly rule . . . will usher in a system of 'progressive capitalism'" (a pet idea of Henry Wallace's). But that was minor. "The central immediate task of the Communists," the resolution declared, "is to help the people's coalition to realize its immediate tasks." 6-7-48

Wallace's Address Accepting Nomination

PHILADELPHIA, July 24 (UP).—Following is the text of Henry A. Wallace's speech accepting the Progressive party's nomination for President:

Four years and four days ago, as Vice-President of the United States and head of the Iowa delegation to the Democratic convention, I rose to second the nomination of Franklin Roosevelt, and said:

"The future belongs to those who go down the line unswervingly for the liberal principles of both political democracy and economic democracy regardless of race, color, or religion . . . Roosevelt can and will lead the United States, in co-operation with the rest of the world, toward that type of peace which will prevent World War III."

That was four years ago. Do you remember that summer of casualty lists, and the wreckage still smoldering on the beaches of Normandy? A time of dying, and, destruction . . . and yet, something more.

For in that time, you remember, every one of us held a dream. At the lathe, in the fields in early morning, at the kitchen window, sweating out a barrage in the line, every one of us dreamed of a time when the sound of peace would come back to the land—and there would be no more fear, and men would begin to build again.

And in that dark time, you remember, Franklin Roosevelt looked beyond the horizon and gave us a vision of peace, an economic bill of rights; the right to work, for every man willing. The right of every family to a decent home. The right to protection from the fears of old age and sickness. The right to a good education. All the rights which spell security for every man, woman and child, from the cradle to the grave.

It was the dream that all of us had, and Roosevelt put it into words, and we loved him for it.

Two years later the war was over, and Franklin Roosevelt was dead.

And what followed was the great betrayal.

Instead of the dream, we have inherited disillusion.

Instead of the promised years of harvest, the years of the locust are upon us.

In Hyde Park they buried our President—and in Washington they buried our dreams.

One day after Roosevelt died, Harry Truman entered the White House.

And forty-six days later, Herbert Hoover was there.

It was a time of comings and goings.

Into the government came the ghosts of the great depression, the banking-house boys and the oil-well diplomats.

Exodus of the Planners

In marched the generals—and out went the men who had built the T. V. A. and the Grand Coulee, the men who had planned Social Security and built Federal housing, the men who had dug the farmer out of the dust bowl, and the workman out of the sweatshop.

A time of comings and goings . . . the shadows of the past coming in fast—and the lights going out slowly—the exodus of the torchbearers of the New Deal.

I was still in the Cabinet—hoping that we might yet return, somehow, to the course Franklin Roosevelt had charted for the nation in peace. And in that great hope, two years ago this month, I wrote to the President.

I warned him that we had fallen upon cynical counsel, that the bankers and the brokers and the big brass had launched us upon a dangerous policy—the "get tough policy."

I said then that "our post-war actions have not yet been adjusted to the lessons gained from experience of Allied co-operation during the war and the facts of the atomic age."

I said that it would be fruitless to seek solutions for specific problems without establishing an atmosphere of mutual trust and confidence—and I warned that our "get tough" policy would only produce a "get tougher" policy. That warning was before the crises in Greece, in Italy, in Palestine, in Czechoslovakia. That warning was two years ago—two years before Berlin.

Cites Changes in Period

You have read your papers. In the two years since the people who planned for living were eased out of Washington, and the ghosts who plan for destruction were invited in—in those two short years during which the Department of State has been subtly annexed to the Pentagon, and the hand of military has come to guide the pen of the diplomat—we have ricocheted from crisis to crisis.

The "get tough policy" has spawned its inevitable breed—the "get tougher policy."

And what harvest do we have of all our hoping, what fruits of the hard-won victory? Not peace—but the sword; not an economic bill of rights—but a mounting bill of wrongs.

Not life—but tens of thousands of deaths, on unnecessary battlefields in Greece—in Palestine—in China.

One world, yes—frozen in one fear.

The world's eyes today focus upon the burning spot of the cold war—Berlin.

Berlin need not have happened. Berlin did not happen. Berlin was caused.

When we were set on the road of "get tough" policy I warned that its end was inevitable. Berlin is becoming that end.

Agreement Held Possible

There is no reason why the peace of a world should hang on the actions of a handful of military men stationed in Germany!

In all earnestness, I assure you that if I were President, there would be no crisis in Berlin today. I assure you that without sacrificing a single American principle or public interest, we would have found agreement long before now with the Soviet government, and with our other war-time allies.

Long before now we could have embarked upon a policy for Germany upon which a sound foundation could be built for peace throughout Europe.

It is not by accident that Germany has become, once again, the heart of a crisis.

Germany will be the core of every world crisis until we have come to an agreement with the Soviet Union. We have been maneuvered into a policy whose specific purpose has been this, and only this: to revive the power of the industrialists and cartelists who heiled Hitler and financed his fascism, and who were the wellspring of his war chest.

Questions Western "Peace"

In the Western zone of Germany today, we are told, there is enjoyed "peace with justice."

This so-called just peace is not just. It is a peace which rebuilds the war-making potential of German industry in the Western zone.

This justice is being dispensed by local judges, of whom 70 per cent are former Nazi officials. German war industry is on the rise again—and its managers are the same Krupp and I. G. Farben men who made Germany into Hitlerland.

There is no peace, no justice—for either Allies or former enemies in our German policy. It is a child born of lust for power and profit.

With a Germany groomed and muscled as the easternmost outpost of another war, we cannot make a peace. Nor can the world which watches helplessly.

I repeat. If I were President, there would be no crisis in Berlin. Do you remember when—only two months ago—our Ambassador to Moscow sent a note to the Kremlin? It was a note which seemed to be an invitation to sit around the table of reason—an invitation to talk over the problems which have created this continued state of crisis. Do you remember how the Russians responded with what seemed like real eagerness? You remember that day.

Recalls Letter to Stalin

It was as if somebody had suddenly declared peace. Sit down and talk it over, we said—that's the way. But what happened?

Within twenty-four hours, our Administration, having consulted its carbon-copy opposite party, slammed the door it had itself swung open.

On that day, I addressed an open letter to Premier Stalin. I detailed a program which would have safeguarded the interest of both nations and preserved the peace. Ten days later, when Stalin responded to that open letter, the "get tough" boys slammed the door again. Since that time, there have been no more approaches—except toward conflict. There are two sides to every curtain.

And so, Germany still festers at the heart of all peace-making—yet, by closing the door to peace talks with Russian leaders, nothing remains but the fruitless discussions of minor officials in Berlin.

I say the peace of the world is far too fragile to be shuttled back and forth through a narrow air corridor in freighter planes.

I say the lives of our children, and our children's parents, are far too precious to be left to the tempers of second lieutenants at road barriers where zone meets zone—or to the generals who are quoted calmly as favoring a "show of strength."

I say that if reasonable men, men without special interests, peace-loving men—if Franklin Roosevelt were in Washington today—there would be no crisis in Berlin. Long before this, the leaders of both nations would have rooted out the causes for conflict.

We hear it said that we should have a showdown at Berlin. But what is the showdown about? What is the American public interest which will be served by a showdown? There may be some private interests . . . some interests of Dillon Read and international bankers. But there is no public interest. Dillon Read's distinguished alumni, Secretary Forrestal and General Draper and Dewey's Wall Street lawyer, John F. Dulles, are major advisers on this issue, but I have yet to meet the American in shop or field or college or independent business who wants to give up his life to defend Dillon Read.

I think we should look coldly at some of the facts which confront us if the cold war developed into a hot war:

There is not a single nation on the European continent prepared to put an army into the field to defend Anglo-Saxon, that is, British and American policies. N.Y. N.Y.

We can buy generals with dollars, but we can't buy wartime armies. These generals won't die in battle. Soldiers would. We can support—and we are supporting—armies during this time of cold war, but we can't purchase suicide. We can buy governments, but we can't buy people.

It is said that we must have a showdown or lose prestige. Truman may lose prestige. Dulles may lose prestige. But the American people won't lose prestige by demanding fundamental discussions looking to peace. Our prestige in Germany went sinking when we divided Germany and established the Western sector as an American and British Puerto Rico—as a colony. When we did that we gave up Berlin politically and we can't lose any thing by giving up militarily in a search for peace.

We who are met here tonight—who are met here at a time of crisis—are talking to the people of the United States and the world on behalf of the everlasting principles of the founding fathers of our country.

Tells of Jefferson's New Party

We who are gathered here tonight, recall the crisis of 150 years ago when Thomas Jefferson was attacked here in the city of Philadelphia—attacked because he spoke courageously for the peaceful settlement of alleged differences between the United States and France.

It was a time of terror unsurpassed till now.

Thomas Jefferson was slandered as the tool of French revolutionaries bought with French gold.

One hundred and fifty years ago Thomas Jefferson took leadership in forming a new party—a successful new party which overcame the odds of a hostile press, of wealth and vested interests arrayed against it; and of a government which sought to undermine the new movement by jailing its leaders.

The party Jefferson founded 150 years ago was buried here in Philadelphia last week. It could not survive the Pawleys, the Hagues, the Crumps, the racists and bigots, the generals, the admirals, the Wall Street alumni. A party founded by a Jefferson died in the arms of a Truman.

But the spirit which animated that party in the days of Jefferson has been captured anew. It has been captured by those who have met here this week end with a firm resolve to keep our tradition of freedom that we may fulfill the promises of an abundant, peaceful life for all men.

Four score and seven years ago, the successful candidate of another new party took office in Washington.

Fulfilled Party's Promise

Lincoln, with the Emancipation Proclamation, fulfilled the promise of the new party which he led to victory. He headed a government of the people, by the people and for the people. In the generations which followed his party became a party of the corporations, by the corporations and for the corporations. The party of a Lincoln has been reduced to the party of a Dewey.

But we here tonight—we of the Progressive party—we here dedicate ourselves to the complete fulfillment of Lincoln's promise; we consecrate ourselves to a second emancipation; an emancipation that will achieve for the Negro and all Americans of every race, creed and national origina full, free and complete citizenship everywhere in these United States.

We ally ourselves against those who turn to nightmares the peoples' dreams of peace and equality.

We ally ourselves to stand against the kings of privilege who own the old parties—the corrupted parties, the parties whose founders rebelled in times past, even as we do today, against those whose private greed jeopardizes the general welfare.

We stand against their cold war and their Red smear, under cover of which they steal our resources, strike terror into our hearts, and attempt to control our thoughts and dominate the life of man everywhere in the world.

We stand together to stop the disasters—economic, political and military, which their policies must breed.

Present-Day Application Needed

Only those who take the spirit of Jefferson and Lincoln and apply it to the present world situation can bring the peace and security which will end fear and unleash creative force beyond the power of man to imagine.

It was in the spirit of Jefferson and Lincoln that Roosevelt challenged the money changers in his first inaugural address fifteen years ago. It was in the spirit of Jefferson and Lincoln that he told the Wall Street crowd that they had met their master. In the spirit of Jefferson and Lincoln he outlined the Four Freedoms and the economic bill of rights.

It was in the spirit of Jefferson and Lincoln that he addressed that great Senator, George Norris, and said: "I go along with you because it is my honest belief that you follow in their footsteps — radical like Jefferson, idealist like Lincoln, wild like Theodore Roosevelt, theorist like Wilson—dare to be all of these as you have in bygone years."

Franklin Roosevelt did not fear; he reveled in the names hurled by those who feared the shape of his vision. We of the new party — the Progressive party—shall cherish the adjectives and mound of hate thrown at us. They are a measure of the fear in the temples of the money changers and the clubs of the military. The base metal of vituperation cannot withstand the attack of truth.

Herald Tribune

We of the Progressive party must—and will—carry on where Roosevelt and Norris and La Guardia left off. They preserved for us all that was most precious, the old-fashioned Americanism that was built for us by Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson.

A New American "Wilderness"

There are some who say they agree with our objectives, but we are ahead of our times. But we are the land of pioneers and trail blazers. Though we have reached the end of old trails to the West; a new wilderness rises before us. The wilderness of poverty and sickness and fear. Once again America has need of frontiersmen. A new frontier awaits us—no longer West to the Pacific—but forward across the wilderness of poverty, and sickness, and fear. We move, as the Pilgrim ships moved, as the Conestoga wagons moved, not ahead of our time, but in the very tide. And always before us, the bright star, the dream of the promised land, of what this nation might be.

But the American dream is no Utopian vision. We do not plan rocket ships for week-end trips to Mars. The dream is the hard and simple truth of what can be done. In one fleet of heavy bombers lies wealth and skill that could have saved Vanport from the flood waters, that could have taken a million veterans out of trailer camps and chicken coops. We can build new schools to rescue our children from the firetraps where they now crowd two at a desk. We can end the murderous tyranny of sickness and disease. The dream is nothing but the facts. The facts are that we spend $20,000,000,000 a year for cold war. The facts are that world health authorities, given one-tenth of this sum, could in one year with two billion dollars—wipe from the face of the earth tuberculosis, typhoid, malaria and cholera!

The cold war has already brought death to millions of Americans.

Look at your friends. Read the papers. Here are casualty lists. Millions—sick of cancer, tuberculosis, of pellagra, of heart disease and polio. We can prevent and cure not only these diseases but a vast host of others by devoting our science as enthusiastically to peace as to war.

Must Conquer Nature's Forces

A nation that is shaped for life, not death, can save these lives—your lives, the lives of your families. Together we must rise up and write an end to the casualty lists of the cold war. This is the American way—to conquer the forces of nature—not our fellow men.

Within the past month other men, candidates of the graveyard parties, have stood in this city, have flexed their muscles, and have declared their intention to continue the cold war whose heaviest tolls have been taken here at home. Both have said that "partisan politics must stop at the water's edge."

They have declare their agreement. It is an agreement which would doom the nation and the world.

It is the policies which operate beyond the water's edge; the policies which demand heavy arms, and draft acts, and the waste of resources and skills in producing for disaster—it is those policies which determine the real wages for American workers, prices for American consumers, and the life span of all the people of the world.

Yes, other candidates have stood before the American people to declare that they have made no commitments to obtain their nominations. But they have committed themselves; they have committed themselves to the poliices of the big brass and big gold; to their policies of militarization and imperialism; to the policies which cast a shroud over the life-giving, life-saving course Franklin Roosevelt had charted for this postwar world.

Admits His "Commitments"

I tell you frankly that in obtaining the nomination of the Progressive party—a nomination I accept with pride — I have made commitments. I have made them in great halls and sports arenas, in huge open-air meetings and in small gatherings. I have made commitments in the basement of a Negro church and in union halls and on picket lines. I have made commitments. I have made them freely. I shall abide by them. I repeat them with pride:

I am committed to the policy of placing human rights above property rights.

I am committed to using the power of our democracy to control rigorously and, wherever necessary, to remove from private to public hands the power of huge corporate monopolies and international big business.

I am committed to peaceful negotiations with the Soviet government. I am committed to do everything I can through the new party to save the lives of those who are now to be drafted through the establishment of peace without sacrificing any American principle or public interest.

New York, N.Y.

I am committed to appointing to positions in the Cabinet and Administration men whose training and private interests cannot conflict with their public responsibilities.

I am committed to building and strengthening the United Nations as an instrument which can peacefully resolve differences between nations.

I am committed to using the power and prestige of the United States to help the peoples of the world, not their exploiters and rulers; to help the suffering, frustrated people in the colonial areas of the world even as we help older civilizations which have felt the full destructive force of war.

I am committed to planning as carefully and thoroughly for production for peace as the militarists and bankers plan and plot for war. For many of today's 60,000,000 jobs are cold-war jobs, unstable jobs, suicide jobs. I am committed to making 60,000,000 —and more—jobs of producing for peace—house-building jobs, school-building jobs, the jobs of building dams and power plants and highways and clinics.

I am committed to a program of progressive capitalism—a program which will protect from the tentacles of monopolists the initiative and creative and productive powers of truly independent enterprise.

I am committed to fighting, with everything I have, the ugly practice of stifling with Taft-Hartley injunctions and the power of government the free trade union organizations of our workers. I am committed to rooting out the causes of industrial conflict and anti-labor practices; to returning us to the basic principles of the national labor relations act and to strengthening the democratic organizations which give our workers safeguards against economic and political injustice.

I am pledged to fight the murderers who block, impede and stifle legislation and appropriations which would eliminate segregation and provide health and education facilities to bridge the gap of ten years life expectancy between a negro child and a white child born this day.

I am pledged to licking inflation by stopping the cold war, the ruthless profiteering of monopolies and the waste of resources which could give us an abundance of the goods of peace.

I am committed to helping lift the heavy hand of fear from our elder citizens, whose minds and bodies have served to build this America and whose reward must be the economic security which will enable them to spend their days with the peace of mind that comes from work well done and appreciated. And I am committed to those programs—principally the program for peace, which will lift from our young people the dread of war and drafts and unemployment and which will replace these fears with hope born of security and the equal opportunity to develop fully their individual talents and careers.

N.Y. N.Y.

I am committed—as I have been my whole life through—to advancing those programs for agriculture which will increase the productivity of our land and better the lives of our farmers and their families.

I am committed to stopping the creation of fear, to using all my powers to prevent the fearmakers from clogging the minds of the people with the "Red issue. The American people want and deserve fewer red issues and more red meat. Millions know and millions more must see that it is not the Kremlin, not the Communists who have sent milk to 24 cents a quart and meat to $1.30 a pound; that it is the red issue, not the Reds, who did this to us.

Yes, I am committed and I am confident the new party will commit itself to the principle of using our democratic process to the end that all men may joy the benefits made possible by modern science.

And I am committed and do renounce the support of those who practice hate and preach prejudice; of those who would limit the civil rights of others; of those who would restrict the use of the ballot; of those who advocate force and violence; and I am committed to accept and do accept the support of those who favor the program for peace I have outlined here; the support of all those who truly believe in democracy.

Wallace's candidacy presents the opportunity for a new emancipation

The Worker New York, N.Y.

By Benjamin J. Davis

(34d) Third Party

HENRY WALLACE'S announcement of his candidacy was a political bombshell, the impact of which was hardly lessened by the fact that the country anticipated it. The full force of his great crusading call to action last Monday has still to be felt.

Sun. 1-4-48

It has already jarred the smug and reactionary leaderships of both major parties. Truman, it seems, was so unnerved that he mislaid the so-called anti-inflation bill which he denounced only to sign, and which has as much value to the hard-pressed consumers as one of the numerous collar buttons that Truman must have dropped under the counter when he was a haberdasher.

A bad conscience induces clumsiness. Truman had a similar attack when, several months ago, he endorsed every word of Wallace's speech for American-Soviet friendship, and then fired him from the cabinet for making it. But if Truman is nervous now, he should wait a while.

THE REPUBLICAN HOPEFULS pretend pure ecstasy over Wallace's action. But they doth protest their happiness too much. In fact they give the impression of whistling to keep up their courage as they walk through the graveyard of the decadent two-party system. The editorial comment of the Republican Herald Tribune the morning after was much more sober when it declared that Wallace "will cut into all parties to an extent. . . ."

But the real joy is to be found among the American people—the women and youth who want peace, the breadwinners backed against the wall by monopoly-high prices, the Negroes, Jews and other minorities for whom American democracy is getting to be an illusion, the organized workers who want freedom from Taft-Hartley chains, the millions of Americans who despise and want to prevent fascism at home. The Worker New York, N.Y.

Through the candidacy of Henry Wallace the American people have spoken in terms that will be heard around the world. The people on every continent and in every country will know more confidently than ever that the American people share with them a deep longing for peace and freedom—and that the American people will fight for it. The colonials, the Greeks, the Chinese, the Porto Ricans will see that the Truman Doctrine and the Marshall Plan, the "anti-Communist" camouflage for Wall Street's imperialist slavery, are not the doctrines or the plans of liberty-loving Americans. Sun 1-4-48

THE NEGRO PEOPLE can well regard this as an historic opportunity for a second emancipation—emancipation from the political slavery of the two-party system. For 85 years since the Civil War, the Negro people have seen their hopes for enforcement of their constitutional rights dashed by successive Republican and Democratic Administrations, except for the all-too-brief Roosevelt era.

Negro citizens have been fed demagogy, lies, hypocritical and empty promises for so long that they now realize that Wall Street has no intention of permitting its two major parties to fulfill them.

The situation for Negro, as well as white Americans, was beginning to deteriorate to such an extent that it appeared futile to large sections of the voters to cast their votes, since they had either tweedledee Republicans or tweedledum Democrats to choose from.

In the crucial 1948 Presidential elections, that situation no longer exists. It will be possible in '48 to vote for freedom, equality and peace, for a progressive America—and for the man who has spoken out for these principles in Alabama as well as in Madison Square Garden. The Worker New York, N.Y.

But hard work lies ahead, and, above all, organization and struggle against the powerful imperialist forces who will stop at nothing to kill off this healthy new-born babe upon whom history has placed so much destiny and responsibility. Sun. 1-4-48

I am confident that the Negro people will be in the forefront in building Wallace-for-President clubs, in organizing expressions of support, in joining and getting the third parties on the ballot, in hastening the progressive political realignment which alone can establish peace, progress and freedom for our country. In such struggle, we can look forward to a Happy New Year!

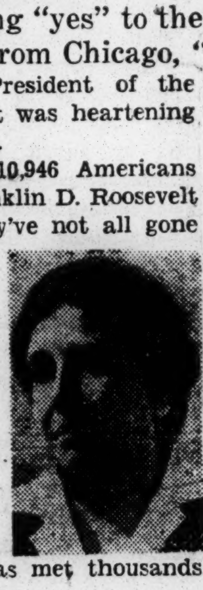
The American People Are Eager for Third Party

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Fri. 1-2-48 34d

By Elizabeth Gurley Flynn

LEAP YEAR 1948 is off to a good start with Henry Wallace saying "yes" to the American people, in announcing Monday from Chicago, "I shall run as an independent candidate for President of the U. S. in 1948." It was heartening news to millions.

After all, 25,610,946 Americans did vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1944 and they've not all gone deaf, dumb and blind. Mr. Wallace did not act on the spur of the moment. He's been around our big country, West, South, Mid-west, New England, and has met thousands of these people.



They had their ears glued to the radio, the little people in the small houses, all over the land, waiting for his word on Monday. They want a people's party—a place to go in '48. They want a candidate who will unite the forward-looking forces—the union members, the farmers, the Negro people, the women who want peace and bread for their families, the eager youth who want security for a future.

WHAT A BIG "Whoopee!" went up in Oklahoma, West Virginia, Texas, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Connecticut, California and elsewhere (places PM apparently never heard of. Nor do they know PM). 1-2-48

People want to vote for what they want and fight to get it, not vote for what they don't want and know darned well they will get it. They're tired of the shadow-boxing between "Waste-less Truman and Eat-less Taft." They don't prefer either Tweele-Dem or Tweedle-Rep for another four years, with war and depression a certainty. Daily Worker

Chicago was a good place for Mr. Wallace to speak. Two big states have recently launched third-party movements—Illinois and California. New York, N.Y.

"The wind that swept Chicago on Nov. 4 was a political one, leaving in its wake two badly jarred political machines and a new political party that is here to stay," Gil Green writes in Political Affairs for December.

The top candidates of this newly established party won 313,000 out of 700,000 votes cast. The old-party politicians were sure that only 300,000 would turn out to vote. It might have been so, if the people had no place else to go but to accept their slate.

The Progressive Party qualified for its place on the ballot in Cook County (which represents more than half the voters of Illinois) after a whirlwind three weeks peitition drive in August, which secured 122,000 signatures. A bound book with 100,000 more signatures collected by the Progressive Party, was presented to Henry Wallace, urging him to be their candidate. 1-2-48

IN CALIFORNIA, a tremendous petition campaign is going on right now to secure the 275,000 signatures necessary to put a new party on the ballot in that state. They must collect at least 450,000 to ensure the required valid signatures. Daily Worker

They are off to an early start because the filing date is earlier than in other states—Feb. 26. Their party's name is "The Independent Progressive Party of California," and they are determined to be in the field this year.

That a Californian, Gen. John C. Fremont, was the nation's first third party candidate in 1856, representing a new progressive anti-slavery party called the Republican Party, that he was defeated, "but in 1860 they elected Abraham Lincoln President of the United States," we are reminded, in this party's excellent pamphlet, "Of the People."

They do have history in California. Gold was discovered in "them thar hills" in 1848. New York, N.Y.

THEY POINT OUT: Our country is the only one in the world in which the common people have not long ago developed their own political party, independent of monopoly and machine control. Our state is one of the most progressive in the country and we think it is fitting that California take the lead in this historic step forward." Fri.

They are not children of pioneers who crossed the plains in covered wagons or sailed around the horn for nothing, as you can see. They are making fresh discoveries from San Diego to Eureka—in 1948. 1-2-48

I suppose if Max Lerner of PM had been around in 1856, he'd have called "Fremont's candidacy "an adventurist move," as he now calls Wallace's. He tells PAC leaders that "their" conclusion is the same as the Communists and their reasoning is the same." So if a Communist states that two plus two equals four it cannot be, to Mr. Lerner. PM would rather be wrong than agree with a Communist.

THE CHAPLINS AT WALLACE RALLY†

California was not like the Middle West.

"In the Interests of Peace"

Henry Wallace was at station KGO in San Francisco last week when the news was brought to him that Joseph Stalin thought his suggestion for a U.S.-Soviet meeting (TIME, May 24) was a fine idea. He looked astonished. Flushed, in a choked voice he said: "If I have done anything that moves the world further toward peace . . . my whole campaign has been tremendously worthwhile." Mon.

It was a high point of his West Coast campaign, which had begun in Los Angeles, carried him into Oakland, San Francisco, San Diego, Seattle, Spokane, and would carry him 9,000 miles. 5-31-48

One from Oona. He had flown into Los Angeles saying, "I have come in the interests of peace." California was not like the Middle West, which had received its native Iowan for the most part with austere interest. In Hollywood, pink-hued stars turned out to welcome him with huzzas. Film Director William Wyler entertained him. A capacity crowd of 30,000 filled Gilmore Stadium to cheer him. Contributions rolled in. Charlie Chaplin's wife Oona signed a check for $1,000.

In a week of speechmaking and money-raising, he took in an estimated $147,000.

He learned that Secretary George Marshall did not share Joe Stalin's enthusiasm for a U.S.-Soviet meeting, at least not on the terms that Wallace had laid down. To 8,000 University of California students he cried: "I have no doubt that many of you felt, on reading Stalin's reply, that there was a new ray of hope in the world." Then he bitterly denounced Marshall and the U.S. State Department. Time

Stain of Blood. Almost everything else he said was denunciatory. Chicago, Ill

To a Mexican audience in Los Angeles he cried: "I wish I could say that you Mexican-Americans have been rewarded for everything you have contributed to California. But it is a shame upon your country that you have not. This . . . is one of the many disgraces which has made necessary a new political party." Mon.

To 6,400 in Seattle: "The policies of Truman, Vandenberg, Marshall and Forrestal have stained the world with blood and have laid the foundation for the greatest bloodshed the world has ever seen . . . We must have . . . an understanding [with Russia]." 5-31-48

Young High School Liberal Kidnaped By Pontiac Trio

PONTIAC, Mich.—(ANP)—A trio of thugs riding in an automobile last week picked up and slugged Eerl O'Brien, 18, young liberal active in high school youth movements and the Wallace third party.

Young O'Brien escaped with his life by breaking the hold of one of his kidnappers and from a spot off the road, ran to the Telegraph road. There he was picked up by Earl Becker of Royal Oak and taken home.

It is believed that the high school senior was picked up because of his political views. He told police that one of the men who beat him kept calling him a n......r lover."

A $2,000 cash award has been offered by the Pontiac City commission for information leading to the capture of O'Brein's attackers. Also according to James Frazier of the commission, a business man has offered to donate a lot as part of the reward for the captor of the kidnappers.

The commission also passed a resolution condemning the flogging of the high school senior.

Ohio Refuses Wallace Party Spot On Ballot

The Courier Journal Louisville, Ky.

Group to Carry Fight To State Supreme Court

Sat. 6-5-48

By the United Press.

Columbus, Ohio, June 4. — Henry A. Wallace's new party was banned from the Ohio ballot today and the party immediately announced it would carry the fight to the State Supreme Court.

Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel announced he would not place the party on the 1948 presidential ballots because he said, it violates a section of the Ohio election laws barring political parties or groups engaged in un-American activity.

Declines to Tell Reason.

Sat. 6-5-48

Hummel wrote Nathan R. Zahm, administrative director of the Wallace-for-President Committee, that an investigation showed the party was not entitled to a place on the ballot. The secretary of state's office declined to specify the exact reason for barring the party.

The section of law under which the ruling was made says in part that "No political party or group which advocates, either directly or indirectly, the overthrow, by force or violence of our local, State, or National Government or which carries on a program of sedition or treason by radio, speech, or press or which has in any manner any connection with any foreign Government or power or which in any manner has any connection with any group or organization so connected or so advocating the overthrow . . . shall be recognized . . . in the State of Ohio."

Won't Disclose 'Evidence.'

The Courier-Journal

"We don't want to disclose what evidence we have now," the secretary of state said.

The Wallace committee in Cleveland said attorneys now were considering the ruling, but in New York a spokesman for the national committee said the decision would be appealed in the Ohio Supreme Court as provided by the law.

The letter to Zahm pointed out that an original Wallace affidavit filed April 2, 1948, did not include a passage stating the third party has no connection with a foreign Government or power. Such a passage is required by law.

A second affidavit including the passage was filed on April 6. The secretary of state conducted his investigation and barred the party within the 60-day deadline provided by the law.

Louisville, Ky.

Didn't File In Primary.

Sat. 6-5-48

The third-party movement also may be banned from the Ohio ballot under a provision of the election law enacted last year that stipulated the presidential candidates must be nominated by a national convention to which delegates and alternates are elected at a primary.

Wallace did not file delegate candidates in the May 4 state primary. To qualify such candidates he would have had to file an affidavit six months earlier under the anti-un-American-activities provision under which the party was barred.

Fired, He Says

JAMES BARFOOT (above), the Wallace party's proposed gubernatorial candidate in Georgia, says he has been fired from his teaching job at the University of Georgia effective June 1. Barfoot, 35-year-old professor of education at the university said he would fight the ouster on the principle of academic freedom. He was selected tentatively as a gubernatorial candidate at a Wallace-for-president convention in Macon, Ga., last week, but had not accepted the nomination. (AP photo.) 5-14-48

The Record

The Wallace Third Party

Columbia, S.C.
Mon. 1-12-48

Editors, in very large majority, view Henry Wallace's presidential candidacy as a sincere, but mystically misguided, desire to save the world—this strangely blended in large, but indeterminate, part with a personal desire to "get" Harry Truman. Majority opinion is that Wallace's net effect on the Democratic vote will depend principally on whether over-confident Republicans go overly conservative, driving enough of their support to the Democrats to more than offset the leftist votes the Democrats will lose to Wallace. Many editors see Wallace's strategy as the wrecking of the Democratic party by a "reactionary" Republican victory—with a swing back to "liberalism" and Wallace in 1952. Others think he only wants to prove the total vote for "peace."

Miami (Fla.) Herald (Ind.): "Mr. Wallace's purposes . . . are a mixture of a messiah complex with the will to sabotage President Truman's chances for re-election. . . . He thinks that by disorganizing the Democrats he will help elect the Republicans, that the GOP being so hidebound in its conservatism the American people will become so fed up that they will boot out both houses and bring Henry and his liberal cohorts to Washington in 1952." Mon. 1-12-48

St. Joseph (Mo.) News-Press (Ind.): "It was Harry Truman who edged Hank out as vice president in 1944 and by the gift of the gods kept Hank from being president in April, 1945. It was Harry Truman who fired his gabby cabinet member when James F. Byrnes found squawk of a jealous rival is music to my ears!"...Damon said that. Wallace was undermining the American mission in its international commitments. . . . The tragedy of the Wallace announcement is twofold. It means the Republicans will feel they can nominate any old candidate and that he can win. In this they may be right. . . . It will give aid and comfort to Russia, when our relations with that country are such that it is highly important this country present a united front." 1-12-48

New York Times (Ind.-Dem.): "It is easy to see why Mr. Wallace's position in these matters (Russo-American relations) delights the Communists. It is more difficult to see how it can reassure any thoughtful American who remembers the circumstances and the consequences of Mr. Chamberlain's visit to Munich in September, 1938."

The Record

Shreveport (La.) Times (Ind.-Dem.): "If Mr. Truman tries to become too conservative, he may lose a lot of the labor vote. If he tries to out-socialist Wallace, his goose is cooked. If he tries to straddle the fence, he may fall off as he has done on so many occasions in lesser matters since becoming President. . . . And, on the other hand, Mr. Wallace's candidacy may turn out to be one of those Louisiana affairs in which he would suddenly find that welfare of the nation rests in election of someone other than himself, with his consequent withdrawal—for a few 'perquisites'." Columbia, S.C. Mon 1-12-48

Cincinnati (Ohio) Enquirer (Ind.): ". . . we shall not attempt to probe the mystic mentality which prompted the latest declaration of this Don Quixote of American politics. . . . One could hardly suspect so untainted a knight in shining armor of thinking of possible trading at the height of the presidential tourney. We suspect, rather, that he fancies himself doing the cavalierly thing—committing political suicide for an Ideal."

Wallace Names 6 Men To Run His Third Party Campaign

PM New York, N.Y. 34d Thurs. 1-29-48

Henry Wallace has named a six-man "brain trust" to direct his Third Party campaign for President as leaders of a National Wallace for President Committee with New York headquarters in the Hotel McAlpin. They are:

¶ C. B. Baldwin, executive vice-chairman of the Progressive Citizens of America, who will act as campaign manager. Baldwin, who served as Wallace's personal assistant in the Agriculture Dept. for two years, was formerly Farm Security Administrator. 1-29-48

¶ Elmer Benson, as committee chairman, a former U. S. Senator, a leader of the Farmer Labor Party in Minnesota, defeated for Governor in 1939 by Harold Stassen.

¶ Paul Robeson, Negro singer and actor, who announced last year he would abandon the treater and concert stage to "talk up and down the Nation against race hatred and prejudice." PM New York, N.Y.

¶ Jo Davidson, sculptor, ardent admirer of FDR, organizer of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, honorary chairman of PCA. Thurs 1-29-48

¶ Rexford G. Tugwell, a pioneer New Dealer, former Under Secretary of Agriculture and Governor of Puerto Rico, now a law professor at the University of Chicago.

RUNNING MATE NOT PICKED

'Fine,' He Comments as Taylor Is Mentioned—Fight to Rule ALP Is Intensified

Henry A. Wallace, who announced that he would run for President on a third party ticket in a radio speech in Chicago Monday night, returned late yesterday afternoon from Milwaukee. He will go to his country home in South Salem, N. Y., to rest for a month before resuming his campaign.

Mr. Wallace arrived by plane at La Guardia Field at 5:35. The plane, which originally had been due to arrive at 1:44 P. M., was delayed by a storm in arriving at Milwaukee from Seattle. Flying conditions were good between Milwaukee and New York City.

Mr. Wallace was accompanied by Harold Young, his personal political adviser; C. B. Baldwin, executive vice president of the Progressive Citizens of America, the organization that started the movement to nominate him for President, and Theodore Peck and Ralph Shikes of the local PCA staff. Thurs 1-1-48

He was met at La Guardia Field by Miss Viola Scott, his personal secretary. After a brief interview he left by bus for Grand Central terminal, where he boarded a train for Katonah, which is near South Salem.

Hopes 'People' Will Help

Asked how he expected to finance his campaign, Mr. Wallace replied that this was "up to the people." He indicated that he expected no difficulty in getting adequate contributions from workers, professional persons, housewives and others. The Times

"I certainly don't know any other way," he said. "I don't think the corporations will finance it."

Asked whether his running mate had been selected, Mr. Wallace said there had been no decision on whom the proposed third party would nominate for Vice President. He added that he expected that his nomination and that of a candidate for Vice President would be made at a national convention next spring. New York, N.Y.

"Would Senator Glen H. Taylor, Idaho Democrat, be a satisfactory candidate for Vice President?" Mr. Wallace was asked. 1-1-48

"That would be fine," he replied.

Mr. Wallace said he did not know when headquarters would be set up in New York City. Mr. Baldwin said that Wallace headquarters would be established in the near future, but it was not made definite as to whether they would be separate from the present headquarters of the PCA.

Publication that pressure was being brought on leaders of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, who are opposed to Mr. Wallace's third party candidacy, to make a fight for control of the State Committee of the American Labor party to prevent that party's nomination of Mr. Wallace brought immediate reaction from that party's left wing. New York N.Y.

A spokesman for the group of Mr. Wallace's Labor party supporters said that the possibility of a fight for Labor party control had been under consideration and that a canvass of the situation had convinced the left wing party leaders that they could win control.

Under the rules of the Labor party, its candidates for Presidential electors will be named by the 750 members of its State committee, sitting as delegates to a State convention. These members of the State committee will be elected, five for each Assembly district in the State, at the primary election in April. The Times

The Communistic or left wing of the Labor party now controls the party organization in Manhattan and Brooklyn, with the right wing in control of the Bronx organization and with the situation in Queens doubtful. To keep control of the party organization, the right wing would have to elect much more than a majority of the State committee members up-State.

Reported Ready to Quit

Hyman Blumberg, State Chairman of the Labor party and a vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and Jacob S. Potofsky, its president, have been reported to be in favor of quitting the Labor party because of its supposed domination of certain county organizations by Communistic elements. The decision of the Amalgamated to fight for control of the Labor party or to abandon it is expected to be made at a conference of its leaders. A spokesman for that group said he could not at this time even make a guess as to what the decision would be. The Times

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, in her syndicated column, wrote that she was sorry that Mr. Wallace had listened to "people as inept politically as he is himself."

Mrs. Roosevelt said that she wanted Mr. Wallace in 1945 to leave active politics to become the leader of independents of the country but that Mr. Wallace then said he believed it his duty to remain in the Democratic party. She added that Mr. Wallace never had been a good politician.

City Councilman Michael J. Quill, international president of the Transport Workers Union, said he had been quoted incorrectly by certain Philadelphia and New York newspapers in connection with the candidacy of Mr. Wallace.

"We have made no statement whatever concerning Mr. Wallace or the third party," Mr. Quill said.

Algernon Lee, national chairman of the Social Democratic Federation, declared that Mr. Wallace had offered himself as "a messiah" to the American people but that only the Communists, fellow-travelers and pseudo-liberals swayed by illusions and wishful thinking would follow him and even these not very far. New York, N.Y.

Norman Thomas, chairman of the national action committee of the Socialist party, declared that Mr. Wallace's attack on the Marshall plan for the economic recovery of Western Europe put him in the company of the Communist Daily Worker and Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of The Chicago Tribune. Thurs.

James P. Cannon, national secretary of the Socialist Workers party, declared that organized labor should enter the political field and set up its own party and "not clutter up the field with another splinter capitalist party like the Wallace movement." 1-1-48

Mayor O'Dwyer said he was too busy with snow removal problems to comment on the third party candidacy of Mr. Wallace.

"I am not interested in such matters," the Mayor said. "I have only one thing on my mind — snow."

Henry Wallace---Behind the Grant

The Constitution

They tell me that during my recent journey to Europe, a number of persons gave me the back of their hand and the rough side of their tongues at the time of the Henry Wallace meeting in Atlanta. Fri. 1-2-48

I learned about it on my return, and I was not surprised or hurt. I took refuge with Voltaire in the fact that while you may cure ignorance, there is no cure for stupidity, nor is there any immediate cure for the sly boys on the make. It is comforting to know that, finally, time heals all wounds. Atlanta, Ga.

All I had been saying was that Henry Wallace was a good fellow, even though disastrously mistaken and, in my opinion, dangerously exploited by many persons and groups in this country who long had been without any front man behind whom to operate.

So, since I didn't even know I was getting the back of a hand, I never felt it.

Wallace Fri. Now, let us examine the Wallace position and analyze it as best we can on the basis of the evidence.

A man with a cause is in a difficult position. Wallace has been, and is, in a most dangerous one, insofar as he himself is concerned.

Not even the traditional screaming fishwives can make as much clamor as the left-wing radical groups. And the Communists, who do not give a damn about anybody or anything save the Soviet Union, will use a man until there is nothing left in him to use and will keep the applause ringing in his ears all the while. 1-2-48

Also, his attacks on Truman brought him the applause of the politically disgruntled, and it is quite possible, listening to all this thunder on the left, he thought it was a message from God, thundering for him to put on his armor. But in time he will find that it wasn't God, but just the radicals who sometimes like to play God. And, apparently, sometimes think they sound like Him.

Thinking I certainly do not know the mental processes by which Mr. Wallace arrived at his present status. He certainly is not a Communist, but he has allowed himself to be badgered into becoming the Soviet Union's mouthpiece and best friend in this country.. The Constitution

Whatever his mental processes, the strategy of those who are working behind the Wallace front is obvious. His own following was never large enough to win for him the convention nomination. By accepting the support of the various Communists and Communist-front organizations, he has made himself a symbol and target. I don't think he realizes this at all. But those who manipulate him do. Atlanta, Ga. Fri 1-2-48

Strategy The strategists who are managing him, as a front for their own strategy, are seeking to line up all possible dissident and disgruntled groups. Fri. 1-2-48

At a time when Americans were being asked to support their foreign policy, a bipartisan policy, he was seeking to weaken it by applauding and speaking for every single Soviet policy.

The strategists behind him have this one objective—and they care nothing at all for Wallace—except to use him.

They want to bring about the election of a Republican so reactionary that in 1952 the country will react so strongly against Republican stupidity that it will go far to the left politically.

So let's see what has happened.

Flight Properly alarmed over the possible results of Wallace's party, liberals are in full flight from the Wallace third party. The Constitution

Name some of them? Certainly.

The CIO Political Action Committee turned its back on a third party. Atlanta, Ga

Dr. Frank Kingdon, Cochairman of Mr. Wallace's own Progressive Citizens of America, resigned.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, chief unit in the American Party in New York, have indiced they will not go along with the ALP. Fri. 1-2-48

The left-wing newspaper PM said "No."

Americans for Democratic Action have rebelled.

Even the staff of Mr. Wallace's own magazine, the New Republic, was disrupted so badly that Mr. Wallace felt himself compelled to resign.

Commies William Z. Foster, the leader of the Communists in this country, has informed his people in New York they must become so active in support of the third party that the people will know "the real champions of the third party are the Communists." Fri. 1-2-48

Whether he wishes it or not, Mr. Wallace, in becoming a candidate of a third party, is, in effect, becoming the Communist candidate for President of the United States.

It becomes more and more obvious that he may be of great help to Mr. Truman—not a handicap. The Truman chances are not good, but Wallace has not hurt them. And will not.

This to me is tragic, because Henry Wallace is fundamentally a fine, decent person, honest, and possessed of a real love for his country. But he has a real genius for self-delusion, and this weakness, played upon by the Communists and the self-seeking groups who use him, as well as by others like him who suffer from self-delusion, will make of him an ignominious spectacle long before November and the election. And I'm sorry, because I like him.

They've Begun to Throw The 'Red' Book at Wallace

By Joseph Starobin Daily Worker

THEY ARE BEGINNING to throw the book at Henry Wallace, the "red book," I mean. They are going to shout themselves "red" in the face about Henry A. Wallace as a "front" for the "Reds"—and, of course, the American people are supposed to be so doped up with anti-Communist prejudice that the "Reds" become "Russians" and so Henry A. Wallace becomes a front for the Russians—just as Wallace himself predicted last Monday night. New York, N.Y. Fri. 1-2-48

Even hopeful office-seekers like Frank Kingdon don't seem to be able to maintain a decent difference of opinion in a decent way. He, too, steps in with a mud-pie on New Year's Eve. He could not have his way in PCA. And so he stoops to rancor.

IT IS QUITE TRUE, gentlemen, that the American Communist Party favors a third party, and favored it before Wallace decided to run.

Kingdon asked who first called upon Wallace to run. The answer of course is, as Wallace gave it, that hundreds of thousands of American at a multitude of meetings urged him to do so. Among these were American Communists.

All it proves is that American Communists felt the need for a third party, and fought for it, and will continue to do their utmost for it. It does not prove anything about Wallace, whom no one has to certify as not being a Communist. Neither does it prove that the Wallace movement is nothing more than Communist. Daily Worker

It is a much bigger movement than ours, bigger than we could possibly have conjectured. And we are the first ones to see that, and say so. We cannot possibly control a movement of such majestic proportions and we do not intend to. New York, N.Y.

But neither are we going to abdicate our own duties to our time just because some people are already so terrorized by the theory of "guilt by association" that they refuse to do anything progressive for fear of being associated with Communists. Fri. 1-2-48

It's just tough, gentlemen, tough on you. The American people intends to fight for peace and abundance whether Frank Kingdon likes Communists or not. And the Communists are not going to stop fighting for peace and abundance just because Frank Kingdon doesn't have the courage of his own convictions. That is, if his opinions of the very recent past were really convictions.

ONE THING about the Wallace movement which distinguishes it from previous progressive coalitions lies precisely in this: that he refuses to treat Communists like second-class Americans; he refuses to let a witch-hunt within his movement split it open before it has even begun to do its job. Daily Worker

There have been many great progressive achievements, such as the organization of the CIO, or some of the Roosevelt campaigns when many a politician sought the brains, the hard work, the self-sacrifice of American Communists, and repaid all this with a knife in the back.

Some sought our help, at the doorsteps and in the back rooms of their election campaigns, but were the first to turn around and create this system of political castes, of "untouchables" in American life. "The Moor had done his work; the Moor may go." New York, N.Y.

Every popular organization has suffered from this system of political Jimcrow, this political racism. Washington, the capital of the country, is a city of fear because of it, a "J. Edgar Hooverville," as a German Communist, Gerhart Eisler, put it out of his own bitter experience. Fri. 1-2-48

WELL, IT'S TIME to stop this deformation of American politics.

We Communists intend to do our small bit, the most that we can in a cause which we believe meets the immediate and long-range interests of our people. Millions of Americans agree that such a movement as Wallace is leading meets their needs; the fact that we thought so earlier neither disqualifies us, nor makes Wallace a front for us—the very idea is an insult to both. Fri. 1-2-48

If we make mistakes, we will be criticized by our fellow-men, and, first of all, we will criticize ourselves. We ask no special favors or privileges. Neither do we beg them from others. We will make no special gains except in the sense of a general gain for all.

And the man who is frightened at the line of duty because we are fighting on that same line could not have had his heart very deep in it to begin with. So much the worse for him.

Wallace And The Split

To Editor of The News:

What in the world do we want with a third party? There is no good in it. You can't get anywhere with it. I belonged to a third party way back in 1892, and I have been ashamed of it ever since. I think if Mr. Wallace will pull down and get in line with the Democrats or the Republicans, he would do the country more good. That is if he will leave the Communists, since neither of the other parties will have them. Birmingham, News

If Henry would get in line with Mr. Truman, and if Mr. Truman would drag his civil rights plank out of his platform and let the Southern Democrats line up with him, we might possibly get somewhere. I do not want the Republicans to get in office. I am afraid they will have things in a bigger mess than already in. They haven't been in office for so long a time that I doubt they would know where to hang their hats. Wed. 3-10-48

If Mr. Truman (or the government) will get rid of the Communists, then they would find a more oportune time to look after the civil rights proposition. If the Communists get control of our country, there will be no civil rights. I noticed a few days ago the government had arrested 30 Communists and had them about ready for deportation; 20 others were arrested, but they did not have them ready for deportation. That is really getting them out of the country, 50 out 50,000.

Wallace Presents 3d Party Program For Health and Social Welfare

PM New York N.Y.

Thurs. 4-22-48

ATLANTIC CITY

National health insurance and social security that would cover every American family were included in a comprehensive welfare platform presented here yesterday by Henry A. Wallace before a trade-union section of the National Conference of Social Work.

Deutsch

Wallace rapped the Democratic Party for its inadequate 1948 social security bills, and the Republican Party for proposing no legislation at all, even in an election year.

Wallace's program for health and social security included these major points:

¶ Social Security coverage should be available to every person in the United States. Every man, woman, child resident in our country should be vested with legal rights to protection through social insurance. The system would include not only wage-earners, but the self-employed, housewives and children.

¶ Both unemployment and old-age insurance benefits should be liberalized. Wallace pointed out that the average weekly jobless insurance benefit payment was under $18 in October, 1947, and that the old-aged and survivors' insurance benefit averaged $24.10 a month in June, 1947.

¶ A minimum social security benefit payment of $35 a week, based on the estimate that a dollar-an-hour minimum wage was essential to insure a decent American standard of living.

¶ Wallace pointed out that social workers themselves were excluded from the social security system, since they work for either Government or nonprofit agencies exempted from the plan at present. PM New York N.Y.

¶ Wallace urged a change in the present method of paying out social security benefits on the basis of what the worker has paid in, regardless of the size of his family. "A system of social security which pays the same benefit to a worker whether he has five children or none is indifferent to the health and welfare of the people," he said.

Health and Disability Insurance Outlined in Party Program

Thurs.

¶ In addition to a national health insurance system covering the entire population, Wallace called for cash disability benefits during sickness which would involve the extension of the principle of workmen's compensation to the entire field of disability. (President Truman has recommended disability insurance legislation on several occasions, but the proposal hasn't been put into actual legislation yet.) Wallace estimated that two out of every three Americans—97 million in all—need help to meet the costs of serious illness. One-third of the illnesses suffered by members of low-income families run their courses with no medical care at all, he added. 4-22-48

¶ Pointing out that the United States is the only modern industrial nation which fails to provide maternity insurance to mothers, Wallace urged expanded maternal and infant health services. The lack of maternity insurance, he declared, penalizes motherhood by destroying the livelihood of the mother when she most needs peace of mind, a true sense of security and the absolute guarantee that her physical needs will be met. Maternity insurance—already in operation in Great Britain, the Scandinavian countries, the Netherlands, the Soviet Union and many other countries—would assure to every working mother continuity of income for a period before and after the birth of her child.

Backs Family Allowances As Part of Security Program

PM

¶ Wallace demanded more health clinics for mothers and infants. As proof that many lives of American children could be saved by proper care and treatment, the Presidential candidate pointed to the discrepancy between the infant death rate in Connecticut—where 30 out of 1000 infants die within one year of birth—and that in New Mexico, where 95 out of 1000 die.

As another means of safeguarding child health and welfare, Wallace recommended inclusion of the "family allowance" plan within the social security system. This plan—already in operation in many countries—would make periodic grants to parents for each child under 18, as supplements to the family income. New York, N.Y.

Wallace also urged Federal grants of aid to institutions and schools for education and training of young people for medicine and other professions which are, or soon will be, suffering acute shortages of personnel. Thurs.

Wallace called for the abolition of the public charity system by the extension of social and health insurance to all as a right to all Americans. Such a comprehensive system, he added, would be premised on a peace policy in place of the war policy, which, he charged, the Administration is pursuing.

The Third Party candidate rapped the Federal Administration for accenting guns instead of bread and medicine in its foreign-aid program, and bitterly denounced the House Rules Commitee for preventing U. S. ratification of the United Nations World Health Organization, to which all other major powers have given approval. 4-22-48

"Peace," he said, "will make possible our own progress and will make us an honorable partner of other nations in conquering disease, ignorance and poverty—the enemies of all mankind.

"The war psychosis will not only separate us, more and more, from every decent undertaking abroad, but it will also continue the destruction of our own hopes for social and economic advance."

More than 1000 social workers jammed the hall to hear the Wallace address, which was followed by a reception and dinner in his honor by local supporters.

The Tar Heel Crusade for Wallace and Taylor Is On

Daily Worker

Thurs. 4-29-48

By Abner W. Berry

New York, N.Y.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Thurs. 4-29-48

DOWN HERE where the soft Southern air is laden with the fragrant odor of tobacco, they made some history last weekend. They picked up the tattered banners of the old Farmers' Alliance of the '80's, the Populists of the '90's and organized the Tar Heel Crusade for Wallace and Taylor. It was not an ordinary convention to launch an ordinary party.

From last Friday to Monday this town witnessed a combination cultural festival, revival, political convention, history class and crusade. Put it all together, and it adds up to a people's progressive political movement with a Southern accent—the Progressive Party of North Carolina.

Delegates began arriving Friday to attend committee meetings in the Courthouse, just across the street from the Reynolds building, largest in town. The pre-convention dinner held that night in Oasis Hall in the downtown Negro community was history itself—and a festival. Some 450 persons, about half of them Negroes, ate their dinners, applauded the cultural program and in general had an unsegregated good time. (The word "unsegregated" is used quite often to describe the new party.) Cultural honors were divided between the Smith Choral group, Mrs. Ruth Davenport, a Negro soprano, who sang unaccompanied with unusual beauty of voice, and Don West, poet, teacher and Georgia Wallace-for-President leader, who read poems from his Clods of Southern Earth. Thurs.

I'M HAPPY to report that the music and poetry blended with political speeches made by Mrs. Virginia Foster Durr and Richmond Bethel Garrity, an 89-year-old Negro, who was a North Carolina Populist leader in 1890 and who knew R. J. Reynolds "when his factory wasn't as big as this room." 4-29-48

Mrs. Durr, chairman of the Northern Virginia Wallace-for-President Committee drew on Southern history to explain the bankruptcy of the two old parties. They are doing now just what they did in the South after the Civil War, she said. "The Capitalists then bought up everything they could at 10 cents on the dollar," she declared, and supported corrupt governments to protect the steal. Now they are trying this out on the world, she maintained, and are supporting kings and dictatorships for proteciton. She likened the "unsolid" South now to a girl whose beau is unsure of her and must therefore keep on courting. She accused the frightened men in Washington, "spending our money to protect themselves. In the South we don't have men who scare easy, or women who rape easy."

ON SUNDAY morning at 10 o'clock in Liberty Warehouse the delegates gathered for business. This is a real tobacco warehouse where in the fall is heard the voice of the tobacco auctioneer. The accent was the same on last Sunday, but the subject was people's politics. In a most businesslike fashion the delegates were registered, heard a rousing keynote address by Don West, adopted a platform, constitution and bylaws. As the last paragraph of the constitution was adopted a delegate shouted—"Now we're a party!"—and the group applauded their accomplishments.

Southern Populism, which once was a power in North Carolina, was honored in the convention with a place on the agenda. IT'S A NEW day for an old Carolina tradition all but corroded by a half-century of Bourbon-Wall Street poison.

Sen. Glen Taylor proved to have been cut to fit Southern progressive tradition. More than a thousand spectators paid 25 cents to join the delegates to hear Taylor's speech. He won them right off by tossing his prepared speech in a chair and announcing that "just like the old preacher, God will give me my speech, today."

Wallace Presents 3d Party Program For Health and Social Welfare

PM New York, N.Y.

Thurs. 4-22-48

ATLANTIC CITY

National health insurance and social security that would cover every American family were included in a comprehensive welfare platform presented here yesterday by Henry A. Wallace before a trade-union section of the National Conference of Social Work.

Deutsch

Wallace rapped the Democratic Party for its inadequate 1948 social security bills, and the Republican Party for proposing no legislation at all, even in an election year.

Wallace's program for health and social security included these major points:

¶ Social Security coverage should be available to every person in the United States. Every man, woman, child resident in our country should be vested with legal rights to protection through social insurance. The system would include not only wage-earners, but the self-employed, housewives and children.

¶ Both unemployment and old-age insurance benefits should be liberalized. Wallace pointed out that the average weekly jobless insurance benefit payment was under $18 in October, 1947, and that the old-aged and survivors' insurance benefit averaged $24.10 a month in June, 1947.

¶ A minimum social security benefit payment of $35 a week, based on the estimate that a dollar-an-hour minimum wage was essential to insure a decent American standard of living.

¶ Wallace pointed out that social workers themselves were excluded from the social security system, since they work for either Government or nonprofit agencies exempted from the plan at present. PM New York N.Y.

¶ Wallace urged a change in the present method of paying out social security benefits on the basis of what the worker has paid in, regardless of the size of his family. "A system of social security which pays the same benefit to a worker whether he has five children or none is indifferent to the health and welfare of the people," he said.

Health and Disability Insurance Outlined in Party Program

Thurs.

¶ In addition to a national health insurance system covering the entire population, Wallace called for cash disability benefits during sickness which would involve the extension of the principle of workmen's compensation to the entire field of disability. (President Truman has recommended disability insurance legislation on several occasions, but the proposal hasn't been put into actual legislation yet.) Wallace estimated that two out of every three Americans—97 million in all—need help to meet the costs of serious illness. One-third of the illnesses suffered by members of low-income families run their courses with no medical care at all, he added. 4-22-48

¶ Painting out that the United States is the only modern industrial nation which fails to provide maternity insurance to mothers, Wallace urged expanded maternal and infant health services. The lack of maternity insurance, he declared, penalizes motherhood by destroying the livelihood of the mother when she most needs peace of mind, a true sense of security and the absolute guarantee that her physical needs will be met. Maternity insurance—already in operation in Great Britain, the Scandinavian countries, the Netherlands, the Soviet Union and many other countries—would assure to every working mother continuity of income for a period before and after the birth of her child.

Backs Family Allowances As Part of Security Program

PM

¶ Wallace demanded more health clinics for mothers and infants. As proof that many lives of American children could be saved by proper care and treatment, the Presidential candidate pointed to the discrepancy between the infant death rate in Connecticut—where 30 out of 1000 infants die within one year of birth—and that in New Mexico, where 95 out of 1000 die.

As another means of safeguarding child health and welfare, Wallace recommended inclusion of the "family allowance" plan within the social security system. This plan—already in operation in many countries—would make periodic grants to parents for each child under 18, as supplements to the family income. New York, N.Y.

Wallace also urged Federal grants of aid to institutions and schools for education and training of young people for medicine and other professions which are, or soon will be, suffering acute shortages of personnel. Thurs.

Wallace called for the abolition of the public charity system by the extension of social and health insurance to all as a right to all Americans. Such a comprehensive system, he added, would be premised on a peace policy in place of the war policy, which, he charged, the Administration is pursuing.

The Third Party candidate rapped the Federal Administration for accenting guns instead of bread and medicine in its foreign-aid program, and bitterly denounced the House Rules Commitee for preventing U. S. ratification of the United Nations World Health Organization, to which all other major powers have given approval. 4-22-48

"Peace," he said, "will make possible our own progress and will make us an honorable partner of other nations in conquering disease, ignorance and poverty—the enemies of all mankind.

"The war psychosis will not only separate us, more and more, from every decent undertaking abroad, but it will also continue the destruction of our own hopes for social and economic advance."

More than 1000 social workers jammed the hall to hear the Wallace address, which was followed by a reception and dinner in his honor by local supporters.

As We See It

The Tar Heel Crusade for Wallace and Taylor Is On

Daily Worker

New York, N.Y.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

DOWN HERE where the soft Southern air is laden with the fragrant odor of tobacco, they made some history last weekend. They picked up the tattered banners of the old Farmers' Alliance of the '80's, the Populists of the '90's and organized the Tar Heel Crusade for Wallace and Taylor. It was not an ordinary convention to launch an ordinary party.

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Thurs. 4-29-48

From last Friday to Monday this town witnessed a combination cultural festival, revival, political convention, history class and crusade. Put it all together, and it adds up to a people's progressive political movement with a Southern accent—the Progressive Party of North Carolina.

Delegates began arriving Friday to attend committee meetings in the Courthouse, just across the street from the Reynolds building, largest in town. The pre-convention dinner held that night in Oasis Hall in the downtown Negro community was history itself—and a festival. Some 450 persons, about half of them Negroes, ate their dinners, applauded the cultural program and in general had an unsegregated good time. (The word "unsegregated" is used quite often to describe the new party.) Cultural honors were divided between the Smith Choral group, Mrs. Ruth Davenport, a Negro soprano, who sang unaccompanied with unusual beauty of voice, and Don West, poet, teacher and Georgia Wallace-for-President leader, who read poems from his Clods of Southern Earth. Thurs.

I'M HAPPY to report that the music and poetry blended with political speeches made by Mrs. Virginia Foster Durr and Richmond Bethel Garrity, an 89-year-old Negro, who was a North Carolina Populist leader in 1890 and who knew R. J. Reynolds "when his factory wasn't as big as this room." 4-29-48

Mrs. Durr, chairman of the Northern Virginia Wallace-for-President Committee drew on Southern history to explain the bankruptcy of the two old parties. They are doing now just what they did in the South after the Civil War, she said. "The Capitalists then bought up everything they could at 10 cents on the dollar," she declared, and supported corrupt governments to protect the steal. Now they are trying this out on the world, she maintained, and are supporting kings and dictatorships for proteciton. She likened the "unsolid" South now to a girl whose beau is unsure of her and must therefore keep on courting. She accused the frightened men in Washington, "spending our money to protect themselves. In the South we don't have men who scare easy, or women who rape easy."

ON SUNDAY morning at 10 o'clock in Liberty Warehouse the delegates gathered for business. This is a real tobacco warehouse where in the fall is heard the voice of the tobacco auctioneer. The accent was the same on last Sunday, but the subject was people's politics. Virginians Form New Party, Vow Defeat of Byrd

The Worker 3rd Party 348 New York, N.Y.

Sun. 7-11-48

RICHMOND, Va.—Three hundred and fifty-two delegates and 60 observers meeting in Richmond last Sunday founded the Progressive Party of Virginia to press for the election of Henry Wallace and Glen Taylor and to work for the defeat of Harry Byrd's political machine. They came from every section of the State and represented 15 organizations as well as 3,600 individuals who signed delegates credentials. They consisted equally Negro and white delegates.

One of the resolutions pledged "full support to Henry Wallace, Glen Taylor and other leaders of the new peoples' party in their fight against bi-partisan reaction, and their leadership in the fight for peace and abundance." Resolutions demanding the passage of anti-Poll Tax, anti-lynch and FEPC legislation, sharply attacking the Mundt Bill and calling for the abolition of the Un-American Committee, were also passed. Realizing the tremendous importance of the fight now being waged by the maritime unions against anti-labor injunctions, the delegates unanimously condemned the injunction issued against maritime labor.

THE DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES of the Progressive Party of Virginia, adopted after a spirited, democratic discussion in which many rank and file delegates participated, sharply attacked the "machine-controlled politicians of Virginia" who are running the government "for the benefit of the privileged few and have permitted the land and the people of Virginia to be despoiled for the Tobacco Trust, the Railroads, the Chemical monopoly and for the wealthy owners of our mines and natural resourves." The Worker

Some of the major points included in the State Program are a demand for a constitutional convention to set up a democratic constitution, repeal of the polltax and all laws restricting the right to vote, repeal of all segregation laws, a $3,000 minimum salary for teachers and a large school expansion program.

the repeal of all state anti-labor laws, aid to farmers' cooperatives, a veterans' bonus, the improvement of labor safety laws and a liberalized unemployment compensation system, state rent control and the control of all monopolies in the interests of the people.

New York, N.Y.

DR. CLARK FOREMAN, addressing the delegates on behalf of the national Wallace Committee, called the South today "the root of fascism in America," attacked the Democrats and Republicans for double talk on civil rights and called the new party, firmly based on the unity of the Negro and white people of the South, the only way to bring democracy to Virginia and the rest of the South. Sun.

Paul Robeson, also representing the national Wallace Committee, provided the highlight of the convention for many delegates with his songs and also with his brief but deeply stirring talk. Robeson launched out at bi-partisan reaction, stressing that this new party was going to be a genuine people's party and that because it would have the support of the people it would win many tremendous victories for democracy. Ruffner of Luray; Miss Virginia Spelman of Alexandria; Edgar S. Fraley of Bristol; Robert C. Davenport of Fairfax County and William Johnson of Norfolk. 7-11-48

Mrs. Virginia Foster Durr was chosen chairman of the new party, George Elwood of Richmond was elected secretary, and Wilbert Reavis of Richmond was elected treasurer. Nine co-chairmen were elected. These are Marvin Caplon of Richmond, Mrs. Sarah d'Avila of Arlington, Mrs. Volena Higgenbotham of Hampton, Mrs. Senora B. Lawson of Richmond, Dr. L. F. THE PROGRESSIVES

Daily Tribune

Mr. Wallace's party will not be christened, as it were, until Friday evening but there seems to be no secret about the name the child is to bear. It will be known as the Progressive party. The name will be wholly satisfactory to the Communists who have been father, mother, and midwife to this baby. Chicago, Ill.

"Progressive" is the Communists' synonym for Communist. When they speak of a progressive trade union they mean that it is safely under Communist domination. A progressive play is one which would not bring a blush to Stalin's cheek. A progressive political program is one which follows the party line. The word is found in this special sense in almost every column of the Daily Worker. 7-22-48

The opposite of "progressive" is "reactionary" in all vocabularies, including the bolshevik, but to those who regard "progressive" and "Communist" as exact equivalents, reactionary means non-Communist and anti-Communist. Thus, the British Labor party, Mr. Churchill, and the most conservative peer in England are alike reactionary in the language of the

13 Negroes At Wallace Dinner At $100 A Plate

BY LILLIAN SCOTT

Chicago Defender Chicago Illinois

NEW YORK—The $100 a plate choice filet mignon dinner of the Henry Wallace for President forces here last week at the Hotel Commodore was sparcely attended by Negroes with only a baker's dozen showing up.

Those present were Paul Robeson and Dr. Joseph Johnson, dean of Howard University's Medical School on the dias; and Shirley Graham, Dr. George Cannon, Mrs. Estelle Massey Osborne, the Rev. Shelton Hale Bishop, George Murphy, Charles Collins, Belford Lawson, Marjorie McKenzie Lawson; Viola Scott, Dorothy Strange, and Dr. Thomas A. Williston of Washington. Most of the above are formally identified with the Wallace Campaign like Miss Scott who is Wallace's personal secretary, Dr. Cannon who is president of the Harlem for Wallace group, and Murphy and Mrs. Osborne who are working on the campaign staff.

1,250 Attend

The dinner attended by between 1,000 and 1,250 persons illustrated many of the new techniques the Wallace campaigners are bringing to bear for the Negro vote. Chief among these was the liberal use of Negro entertainers and satiric sketches on jimcrow and discrimination in semi-review held at the dinner called "Showtime for Henry Wallace."

Sat. 5-1-48

The entertainment is also given at every Wallace rally and as an entire program on Sundays in New York. One of the sketches narrated by actress Edith Atwater was a fashion show of what to wear in the atomic age. And about one dress worn by a modern Southern belle she said, "Note the cunning segregation of the black and white"—"the addition of Southern hemp," etc.

WHAT THIRD PARTY MUST DO TO GET ON THE BALLOT

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. 34d

Tues. 1-6-48

Here is a birds' eye view of the election laws in various states governing either nomination of independent candidates, or placing a third party on the ballot, or, some cases, both:

The toughest laws are those in California, Illinois, Delaware, Massachusetts, Nevada, South Dakota and New York. Nevada and California want a petition signed by a straight five percent of the number who voted in the last general election. Daily Worker

In the case of California, this is about 175,000 signatures. Massachusetts wants a straight three percent, or about 50,000 signers. South Dakota requires 10 percent of the votes in the last previous election. Illinais demands 25,000, but at least 200 must come from each of 50 counties. New York, N.Y.

Delaware wants at least 250 from each of its three counties. New York wants 12,000, but at least 50 must come from each county. 1-6-48

Other states with tough requirements, but not as tough as the above, are Missouri, which requires 25,000 petitioners; Oregon, with 12,000 signatures needed; Michigan, which wants only 8,000 but no more than 35 percent can come from any one county; North Carolina and North Dakota, which asks for 10,000 and 15,000 signatures respectively.

A TOKEN NUMBER

A third group consisting of about half the states, has more reasonable requirements, with either one-half, or one or two percent of those who voted in the last general elections needed to a petition or, in a few cases, a small flat figure.

Among these states are Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas, Maryland, Connecticut and Indiana. 1-6-48

Several states demand only a state convention or mass meeting. Among these are Georgia, Oregon, Idaho, Iowa, Washington, Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico and Tennessee. Daily Worker

And a few others, like New Jersey, Arkansas and Virginia, require only a token number of signatures to a nomination petition.

Only a single state—Florida—makes an impossible provision for a new party to get on he ballot. N.Y.

MY DAY

Henry Wallace has done U. S. and the world a great disservice

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Tues.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

HYDE PARK—One of the main things that Henry Wallace attacks, namely, universal military service, will come up in the new session of Congress. Purely military universal service has never been much to my liking. But at the present time I think it is probably one of the most important gestures we can make to convince the U.S.S.R. that we mean to remain strong in a military way until some settlement is made within the United Nations which will make it possible for the U. N. to be strong enough to hold even a big nation in check. Tues 1-6-48

Then, I would agree that disarmament was justified and much to be desired. Yet I am not sure that even then I would not approve of one year of universal service for boys and girls alike. The military part of it I would cut, but I would keep the discipline. I would make it a point to stress physical development and health, and then make the service consist of work of value to the community and the country. And I would tie it in, where possible, with the individual's preparation for his life work.

FOR YEARS people have searched for a way in which to give youth the same sense of responsibility and selfless devotion to their country which is called out in time of war. This year of service might well be the substitute that has been looked for. We need to start our lives as citizens with a sense of responsibility to the community. Later we will be called upon within our communities to do many services and perhaps we will enter fields of public service, but a first year of work for the nation may well be the first intimation to many youngsters that they have obligations as well as privileges because of their citizenship in a democracy.

I think there is plenty of room in this country for us to fight to improve our democracy. I am frank to say that I was deeply troubled when I read of the machinery to be used by the loyalty review board. We are far from having achieved the rights of minorities in this country. And I can understand why Mr. Wallace wants to fight for some changes which are long overdue and without which we cannot feel that we have a true democracy. Louisville, Ky

IF, IN ORGANIZING a third party, Mr. Wallace has in mind simply forcing the Democrats to make better nominations and then trowinhg his third-party strength to those candidates, he may, of course, have a few successes. In addition, if he hopes to force the Democratic candidate for President to come out for more liberal policies, after which he, Mr. Wallace, would bow himself out of the picture, he may have some success there too. But there is no assurance that this is what he intends ot do, nor that he will succeed in doing it. Tues 1-6-48

In the last analysis, he may simply make it possible for the Republicans to nominate a complete reactionary and still win. He may find his party repudiated by all liberal congressmen who will feel that they are being tagged with communism. If he thinks that a completely reactionary four years will bring us a saner four years afterwards, I am afraid he will find that is not the way the pendulum usually swings. Great reaction brings chaos and confusion afterwards.

I do not think we have the time to go through reaction to the right and then to the left. It would take too long to reach a normal middle-of-the-road period. We might survive, but the rest of the world would not — and so my conclusion is that Mr. Wallace has done both his own country and the world a great disservice.

Wallace & the South

34d

Dear Sir:

Today there is a wholesome awakening of liberal progressives throughout the South—both black and white. Those elements have long been victimized by a one-party system characterized by bigotry, racism, corruption, and reaction. These people not only want a place to go, they must have a place to go. Conceptual arguments about working within the Democratic Party will not suffice to dismiss the reality that these persons cannot work within that party. These people must have a tool through which they can democratically achieve equality, security, dignity and freedom The third party is the answer.

Silsbee, Tex. H. IRVIN THOMPSON

C. B. Baldwin is certainly barking up the wrong tree if he thinks the Negro voters will support a third party in 1948. I think it has already been clearly demonstrated that most of organized labor will not support the third party now. Since Negroes are mostly workers, labor's decision will undoubtedly affect most of them in the same measure as other workers are affected.

Weaning the Negro voter away from the Democratic Party in 1948 is going to take more than Baldwin's specious reasoning. Baldwin belittles Truman's record on civil liberties by getting all worked up over the loyalty order. No single Government document since President Roosevelt issued Executive Order 8802, creating a Fair Employment Practices Commission, has been as widely praised by the Negro press and organizations, as well as prominent individuals, as has the Report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights. The report contains everything that Negro leaders have been saying for many years.

The Truman record on civil rights, higher education, his appointments of Negroes to key governmental posts, and his pronouncements such as his speech to the NAACP convention last Summer in Washington, will make it difficult for the rank-and-file Negro voter to accept another candidate whose record is less known.

There was a time when you could frighten the Negro voter into voting Republican by raising the bugaboo of the Southern Democrats ruling the country if a Democrat were elected. The Negro in the South today, with plenty of help from his Northern brother, is attempting to gain a foothold within the Democraic Party right down in the solid South. And he is succeeding. Negroes are gaining political influence in the Southern states and they aren't going to throw it away by voting for a third party while they have Southern politicians making overtures to them.

On the other hand, liberals have long pointed out that the hope of liberalizing the Democratic Party lies in the South. Give the vote to Negroes and labor, eliminate the poll tax and a liberal party would emerge. This process, I believe, is taking place. Negroes and labor are working together politically in the South. To support a third party in the South today would be foolishly throwing away all that Negroes have gained since 1944, and make no mistake about it, the Southern Negro has long been schooled in looking out for his own best interests so high within the Democratic Party. Even Southern Negro Republicans are now registering as Democrats! 34d

Of course, it will be said that the influence of Negro vote in the South is negligible; that Baldwin really meant Negroes in Northern pivotal states. Since PCA is conducting a "practical crusade" then let us be practical and realize that the Northern Negro vote while not controlled is influenced by the following factors—the Negro press, Negro organizations, political machines and organized labor.

The Negro press was divided in the 1944 campaign with the larger papers supporting Dewey. Recent editorials indicate that Truman still stands high with the Negro press in general. 1-1948

It is also doubtful that Negro organizations would support a third party. Certainly the recent statements of the leaders of two of the most outstanding organizations, Walter White of the NAACP and Lester Granger of the National Urban League, would indicate that the thinking of Negro leaders is contrary to a third party. Mr. White has already informed New York newspapers that the NAACP is not supporting a third party.

Lester Granger's views on Wallace are even more specific. Writing in the Amsterdam News, Mr. Granger indicates his "distrust of the Great Commoner is based on the obvious discrepancy between his past record in office when he was able to do some of the things which he expresses as a candidate for office." Recalling Wallace's record in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Granger indicts Wallace on the grounds that, AAA's collusion with white landlords of the cotton South who robbed their Negro tenant farmers of AAA 'parity checks' was notorious during the depression years and is still bitterly remembered by the Negro victims." Although these abuses were called to his attention, Wallace did nothing about them. Under Wallace, the Bureau of Census was a "hot-bed" of racial discrimination and was unchanged by the Secretary of Commerce. Nor did Wallace's mild comments on the Detroit riot endear him to Granger who concluded: "It is nice to know that as a candidate he is against sin, but I'm much more interested in knowing what he did about sin when he had a chance during three successive appointments as a ranking member of the President's Cabinet."

Alabama Seen as Fertile Soil for Third Party

Populist Tradition Still Strong Among Small Farmers, Negroes, Labor; Potential Coalition Seen for Wallace

The Worker

By MARY SOUTHARD

New York, N.Y.
Sun. 2-8-48

THOSE WHO SAY that the third party movement hasn't a chance in Alabama, that the people must resign themselves forever to the Democratic Party, have forgotten their history. A little more than 50 years ago there was a powerful independent voters' movement which burst the bonds of Democratic Party machine control, elected several Congressmen, claimed twice to have elected a Governor (who, it was said, was kept out of office by fraudulent vote-counting), and several times elected a controlling number of Representatives to the State Legislature.

34D

This upsurge of independent voters had roots in the Grange, the Green Back Labor Party (which polled more than 42,000 votes for the Governor in 1880, and sent W. M. Love to Congress in 1878 from the Eighth Congressional District), the Farmers Alliance and a number of smaller organizations which sprang up over the state during the '70s and '80s.

How Movement Developed

This movement grew out of the revolt of thousands of small white farmers of Alabama against the Silk Hat boys—the merchant planters, the banks and the railroads. Over 90 percent were being choked by mortgages at high interest rates; cotton was four cents a pound; and the railroads were milking millions out of the farmers in sky-high freight rates. The Worker Sun.

In their plight thousands of small white farmers began to see through the spurious slogan of white supremacy, which had fooled many of them into uniting with the Bourbon planters to bring the Democratic Party back into power in 1974. They saw that there were irreconcilable interests: those of the Silk Hats—the merchant planters, banks and railroads—and those of the Wool Hats, that is, themselves, who were losing their lands and being driven into starvation. 2-8-48

And they began to organize and to fight against the Democratic machine control of the political life of the state.

The first major fight was put up in 1890, when Reuben Kolb ran for the gubernatorial nomination in the Democratic convention (no state primaries were held at this time for party candidates). Kolb was a native Albanian, farmer and former Confederate officer. He was widely known to the farmers of the state from his work as the first Commissioner of Agriculture and his fight for agricultural schools and experimental stations. "Genial Reuben" he was called. Kolb lost the nomination by only 32 votes of county delegates.

IN 1892 the Democratic Party was split with the Kolb followers setting themselves up as the Jeffersonian Democrats opposed to machine rule. There were two conventions, two platforms and two sets of candidates. The Worker

Kolb and the Jeffersonians campaigned on a platform of fair elections, good schools, just taxation, against the banks and trusts, against the convict lease system (convicts were being leased to the coal operators), and for the protection of the "colored race and their legal rights."

In the August, 1892, election, Jones, the machine candidate, claimed the victory over Kolb by a slim margin of 11,435 out of 242,483 votes cast. In the national election that year the Populist candidate Weaver (National People's Party) polled 85,128 votes in Alabama out of the total of 242,843. New York, N.Y.

Kolb claimed that he had been elected by a majority of 40,000 votes and that he was cheated out of the office by fraudulent vote-counting. There is ample evidence of this, since ballot box practice in Alabama at this time was so corrupt that two congressional investigations were ordered (but never carried out). 2-8-48 Common talk among the working people for many years credited Kolb with the victory.

3rd Party Movement Cheated at Polls

In 1892, after the August elections, a third party convention was held in Birmingham with several thousand delegates present. It united the Jeffersonians around Kolb, the small but aggressive Populists led by Manning, certain Republicans and several other groupings of voters, plus considerable support from the mine workers, who two years later conducted their first strike against the operators. For two years Kolb's paper, the People's Tribune, published in Birmingham, circulated over the state, spanking the third party fight. Sun. 2-8-48

In 1894 Kolb ran against Oates, the machine candidate, in a hot and bitter campaign. Kolb claimed the election, though "official" figures gave the victory to Oates: 109,160 against 83,394. The thousands of farmers who had supported Kolb refused to give in and Kolb went to Montgomery to be inaugurated.

So there were two inaugurations. Oates, in the State Capitol, and Kolb, surrounded by hundreds of his supporters, on the streets of the city. The Populists went home peaceably, but they demanded that the Legislature pass an election contest law, and that Kolb be installed as the duly elected Governor.

In 1896, A. T. Goodwyn, Populist candidate for Governor polled 89,290 votes against the Bourbon Democrat, J. F. Johnston's 128,541.

There is no doubt that the Populist-Jeffersonian-Alliance movement was cheated out of thousands of votes, or that they won the majority of the people to the support of their program.

Its Strength And Weaknesses

The Worker

This powerful movement can be credited with many important reforms and improvements in the living conditions of the people of Alabama: the setting up of agricultural schools and experimental stations for the farmers; the railroad commission to fight malpractices of the roads; improvement of the public school system; improvement of the convict labor system; establishment of statewide primaries and the Australian ballot system, and many others.

More important, perhaps, this movement was a tremendous school for thousands of people, who learned to feel their own power when it was organized into political activity, and who saw the Bourbon Democratic Party exposed as the instrument of the planters, the banks and the corporations, and therefore rejected it. New York, N.Y.

The Populist-Alliance movement caused fear and panic in Democratic ranks. The constitutional convention of 1901, for all its white-supremacy-shouting about disfranchising the Negro, directed its whole system of ballot box restriction (polltax, property qualifications, educational requirements, etc.) primarily at the thousands of white farmers and the growing working class around Birmingham and the mill towns—the very people who had challenged their power so strongly in the Populist movement. Sun. 2-8-48

The central weakness of the Populist movement in Alabama was that it did not, except in rare cases, promote a fighting unity betwen white and Negro farmers. The failure to do this left the concealed weapon, white supremacy, in the hands of the nearly routed enemy, and he used it to get back into power in 1901.

Tradition Still Strong

The Populist tradition is still strong in the rural white counties of Alabama. It shows in the tremendous support which these voters have given to Gov. Folsom—the small white farmers today are the backbone of support to the Governor's program. Sun. 2-8-48

Today the forces for a third party movement are much more powerful. To the small farmers is added the potential strength of some 250,000 organized workers, white and Negro, and an organized and fighting movement among the Negro citizens of the state. Already in the vote around the self-starter amendment a potential coalition of these three main groups was seen.

To them belongs the fighting tradition of Alabama Populists—and the lessons of their struggle against the Silk Hats.

Congress Candidates of That Race Will Be Entered by Third-Party Forces

New York, N.Y.
Tues. 3-2-48

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, March 1—Henry Wallace's third-party forces will bid for a big Negro vote this fall by running Negro candidates for Congress in favorable districts throughout the nation, it was learned today.

Agreement in principle to this proposal was reached within the past two weeks in conferences in which Mr. Wallace and C. B. Baldwin, his campaign manager, participated directly, it was understood.

Selection of actual districts will be left to the individual state organizations in the movement, but present tentative plans call for tw ocandidates in New York, one in Harlem, the other in the Bedford-Stuyvesant area of Brooklyn; two in Chicago and one each in Cleveland, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Atlanta and Los Angeles.

There also is reported to e strong sentiment for the nomination of a Negro to stand for the Uinted States Senate in Ilinois. There have been Negro members of the House in recent years, but no Negro has held a Senate seat.

Entry of third-party candidates is certain in most instances to bring about the defeat of sitting members of Congress, even if it does not lead to victory for the Wallace forces. Among the more prominent in this category are Adam Clayton Powell Jr. in Harlem's Twenty-second District, Helen Gahagan Douglas in Los Angeles' Fourteenth District and Frances P. Bolton, a Republican, in the Cleveland area's Twenty-second District. Tues. 3-2-48

It is understood that Mr. Powell and Mrs. Douglas could have third-party endorsement or, at the very least, a "hands off" concession, if they would oppose the Marshall Plan. Mr. Powell, elected under the Democratic and American Labor emblems in 1946, has said he may not be a candidate this fall.

Split on Rights Grows

This latest revelation of campaign strategy came as the split within the Democratic party over the civil rights issue became more sharply defined and as Republican Congressional leadership indicated that civil rights action would be held to a minimum.

In a bold stand for the Truman Administration in the rebellious South, Seenator Lister Hill of Alabama, who must stand for re-election in two years, announced that he had qualified today "as a delegate-at-large to the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia." The Times

"I have always opposed Federal legislation for fair employment practice commissions, anti-lynching, anti-poll tax, anti-segregation and other such Federal bills on questions which should be determined by our sovereign states," he declared. "I shall continue to fight such Federal measures and to support the principle of state's rights.

"I support our foreign policy, including the Marshall Plan, and am opposed to isolation in foreign affairs, domestic affairs and national Democratic party affairs. I continue my support of Harry S. Truman, the head of the Democratic party." New York, N.Y.

The revolt in the South against President Truman because of his civil rights stand continued, however, and Representative John Bell Williams of Mississippi in a speech on the floor appealed to the President "to gracefully withdraw his name from consideration as a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination with the hope that our party may still be salvaged from the ruins which he has left."

Tues. 3-2-48

With this situation obtaining the Wallace thirty-party movement, which drew a very heavy Negro vote in preliminary election tests in Chicago and the Bronx, may capitalize on dissatisfaction within Negro ranks. Tues. 3-2-48

Texas Refuses To Bolt; States Ignore War Parley

Chicago Defender

Chicago [illegible]

ATLANTA, Ga.—Texas, which has maintained what its citizens call a cooperative alliance with the United States, proved a good ally last week, when its politicians broke the back of the revolt against President Truman's civil rights program by refusing to go along with a move to oppose his nomination for re-election.

Texas action, following by two weeks a similar stand by Tennessee Democrats, was considered as the death knell for the pathetic rebellion against decency in the Democratic party.

The Texas State Democratic Committee voted 36 to 14 to give full support to the party nominee for president, no matter who he is. Two weeks earlier, Tennessee's Shelby County political boss, Ed. Crump, was handed a similar setback.

Sat-5-1-48

Bolt Voted Down

One of his henchmen, Roane Waring, proposed an anti-Truman resolution. The measure was decisively voted down. Roane, who lives in Memphis, as does Crump, is a former National Commander of the American Legion.

In view of the two resounding defeats to the "Dump Truman" forces in the south, the grass roots convention called for Jackson, Miss., May 10, at the urging of Gov. Fielding Wright, seems doomed to failure. Wright was one of the leading forces in the rebellion.

The convention may go on, but with most southern political leaders giving it the cold shoulder, it will be at best a one day carnival with much ranting and raving, and no success.

Those attending the gabfest can be looked to for a frenzied war dance against the President and the Negro people. The meeting, however, has been crossed off the list by veteran observers as having no bearing on the way southern delegates will vote in the party convention in Philadelphia.

They draw their proof from the fact that only four Democratic chairmen showed up here April 12 and 13 for a widely heralded war council against the President and his pronouncement in favor of democracy. Even with Mississippi's chairman, represented by proxy there were only five present.

Talk For Those Absent

Answering the roll call were South Carolina's W. P. Baskin, who called the parley, James S. Peters of Georgia, Joe H. Williams of Florida, Gessner T. McCorvey, Alabama, all state chairmen, and J. O. Emmerich, representing Herbert Holmes of Mississippi.

These five went on record pledging to withhold the electoral vote "of the entire south" from President Truman or any candidate advocating full constitutional rights for Negroes.

The view which has most weight in the south is that all delegates should be sent uninstructed except for an admonition to fight a civil rights plank in the platform and to oppose a civil rights candidate before the actual nomination. They are not to oppose the party choice for election, no matter what his stand on rights for Negroes.

Employees Say Race Issue Lies Behind Condon Probe

Journal Guide

WASHINGTON — (ANP) —The race issue underlies the un-American Activities Committee's investigation of Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the Bureau of Standards, say employees of the agency.

These employes point out that over considerable opposition from subordinates, Dr. Condon has stood for a policy of integrating competently trained Negro scientists into the professional ranks of the bureau's personnel. At present there are about 20 Negro professional workers in the agency, as compared with only three before the war.

Norfolk, Va.

UNDER-COVER MOVE

Since 1946, when Dr. Condon began converting Negro war-service scientists to permanent employes, there is said to have been an under-cover move on to get him out of the bureau. This drive was accentuated last Spring following an interracial party at the agency for children of employes.

It is reported that in planning the party, some members of the committee collected contributions from Negro employes. However, when it was discovered that almost all of the Negro employes of the bureau had contributed and were planning to come and bring their children, the planning committee announced that the party was off because it had not been able to collect sufficient funds to provide refreshments.

When word reached Dr. Condon that the party was being called off, allegedly because Negroes were going to attend, he is said to have ordered the group to go through with the party.

CLEARED BY FBI

Two weeks ago, the committee on un-American Activities began investigating Dr. Condon, claiming that he has been associating with Communists." However, the Department of Commerce, of which the Bureau of Standards is a unit, refutes the charge. Officers of the agency say that Dr. Condon is a loyal American. They point out that he has been cleared by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Secy. of Commerce M. Averell Harriman said that in his opinion the subcommittee investigating Dr. Condon is itself un-American. He declared that the subcommittee had summoned members of his staff to secret sessions and has published its interpretation of their testimony.

MRS. ROOSEVELT COMMENTS

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt wrote in a column a week ago that the committee was "unjust and really subversive" in "handling its affairs." Rep. Adolph Sabath of Illinois had this read into the Congressional Record.

Only 6000 Negro Voters In Alabama Georgia and Texas Leaders

Weekly Review — Sat 8-7-48 — B'ham, Ala.

The Southern Regional Council reports that of the 521.080 Negroes of voting age in Alabama there are only 6,000 qualified voters.

Weekly Review

Causes.

The heavy poll tax serve restrictions in registration, inadequate statewide Negro leadership, and general apathy account in part for the low standing of Alabama. Nevertheless the number of qualified voters has trebled since 1940.

Sat 8-7-48

Qualified Negro voters in other Southern states are as follows: Arkansas, 47,000; Florida, 49,000; Georgia, 125,000; Louisiana, 10,000; Mississippi, 5,000; North Carolina, 75,000; Oklahoma, 50,000; South Carolina, 50,000; Tennessee, 80,000; Texas, 100,000; Virginia, 48,000.

983,290 NEGROES IN ALABAMA

The Alabama Department of Archives and History released the following figures on population this week:

B'ham, Ala.

Total, 2,832,961; White, 1,849.097; Negro 983,290; Other races, 574. Other races consist of Indian. 464; Chinese 41; Japanese, 21; Other, 48. Native born in Alabama all classes, 2,820,797; Foreign born in Alabama, all classes 12. 164.

These figures were taken from the U. S. Census, 1940.

Registration Of Colored On Increase In Mobile

Journal Guide Sat 3-20-48

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(ANP)—Negroes in Montgomery county and in Mobile are taking advantage of President Truman's continued insistence upon racial equality and civil rights for Negroes, according to the two county boards of registrars here last week.

Norfolk Va

On March 15, the Montgomery board reported that 20 Negroes appeared seeking registration—the largest number yet to appear before the board in one day. However the 20 did not register with the idea of voting in the primary, but only in the November general election, it was disclosed.

Political observers indicated that Negroes were being advised to vote for Truman because it is feared white voters of Alabama might forsake him. No member of the board would comment on the increase in Negro registration.

SEVEN NEGROES

In Mobile, board records showed that out of 54 voters registered at a special session for voting in the May 4 Democratic primary, seven were Negroes. Two of this number were denied registration.

One board member said that the seven were the largest group to come before the board in a single day since the Boswell amendment went into effect. The amendment is designed to restrict Negro voting.

Sat 3-20-48

Adopted in November, 1946, it requires prospective registrants to be able to understand and explain the federal constitution. Its constitutionality is the subject of a suit pending in federal district court here.

Industrialist Urges Negro Vote Education

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Oct. 12.—(P)—John B. Turner, president of the Associated Industries of Alabama, said today Alabamians must accept the fact that Negroes eventually will be voting generally in Alabama. He urged that steps be taken to enable them to vote intelligently.

Montgomery, Ala.

Addressing the Birmingham Kiwanis Club, Turner said those who now vote should prepare the way for an intelligent Negro vote through education.

Disgusted But Hopeful

To the Editor of The News:

The News

I want to congratulate your fine paper on its editorial policies in regard to controversial problems of this troubled era.

I have been greatly vexed by the antics of our so-called elected leaders in Alabama, as have many other citizens in our state. I have always taken a great interest in exercising my guarantee and right to vote. I consider it my greatest and most precious privilege in my beloved America. I now realize that my privilege is being infringed upon. In the recent Democratic primary some friends and I went to great trouble to obtain the views and platforms of our presidential elector-candidates. Very little definite information was available, and thus we could not know for whom we voted. That very thoughtful rule concerning the fact that 11 men must be voted for or the ballot was void insured the election of a majority of undesirables. This, sir, in my opinion, is power politics in one of its vilest forms.

Thur 8-12-48

B'ham Ala

34e

My second vexation is due to the fact that our duly elected representatives have seen fit to cast aside 100 years of social progress in our state in order to further personal prestige. It is not likely that our "Pine Stump Ciceros" will realize or care whether or not they play right into the hands of "Molotov's Mechanized Maggots"! The Jim Crow note is being monotonously but so terribly and efficiently played in strategic centers of our nation and its outposts. The maddening tune is again creating discord, dissatisfaction and desertion from those principles of unity, godliness and justice upon which our liberty was founded.

Fellow citizens of my state, my nation and yours, there must be a leader somewhere among us who has justice in his heart, integrity in his actions and an inborn love for his fellow man. We must find him who will work toward the interests of our people.

My third vexation is the fact that you and I collectively have allowed those "Cominform Cancers" to penetrate the physical structure of our labor unions, manufacturers' unions, city and national governments. If we are to be treated as a senseless crowd, a mindless mob, then let our leaders funnel our petty animosities with a wise caution for our constitution toward those malignant growths which may some day cause our destruction.

These are the thoughts of a disgusted but still hopeful veteran of the European combat theater and a citizen of the great state of Alabama, which is still an integral part of America.

U. S. Judges Deliberate On Alabama Vote Law

Atlanta Constitution

Atlanta, Ga.

MOBILE, Ala.—(P)—A three-judge Federal Court yesterday concluded a trial on constitutionality of Alabama's Boswell Amendment, referred to as a weapon of "white supremacy" advocates.

Counsel for 10 Mobile County Negro plaintiffs introduced letters by State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey to other Party officials in which he had called the voter-qualification law "all important."

Wed 12-22-48

McCorvey had warned in a letter to members of the State Democratic Executive Committee:

"We are going to see our poll lists flooded with thousands of voters who have not yet fitted themselves to participate in our government" unless registration laws were tightened.

"There are any number of counties in Alabama's black belt where, unless we do something to tighten up our registration laws, we will very likely, in a few years, have only colored county officials, as in many of these black belt counties the Negroes outnumber the white people from five to one to ten to one," he wrote.

The amendment to the State Constitution was adopted in a 1946 State referendum.

The court announced that a decision in the case would be returned at a later date.

Assistant Attorney General Silas C. Garrett, III, asked the judges "not to strike down the Boswell Amendment" because of the alleged maladministration of officials acting under it.

He asserted in a closing argument that the amendment was enacted to ensure that "only qualified citizens become electors."

George N. Leighton, attorney for the Negroes, called on the court to declare the Amendment unconstitutional.

He asked for an order restraining the Mobile County Board of Registrars from acts allegedly infringing on the constitutional rights of the plaintiffs.

The Amendment requires applicants for registration as voters to be able to "understand and explain" the Federal Constitution to the satisfaction of the Board of Registrars.

Removal Of Dead Up To Board Of Registrars

EDITOR, The Advertiser: I notice in an editorial in The Advertiser this morning mention was made of the County Democratic Executive Committee's responsibility in purging the poll list. The editorial includes an excerpt from the recent report of the Montgomery County Grand Jury. This report states that the removal from the poll list of the names of persons who are dead or who have removed their residence from Montgomery County, or the State of Alabama, "can be done by the committee's requiring an enrollment, prior to the primary, of all members of the party who desire to participate in the primary and it is not necessary to amend the state laws."

I do not know of any authority which the County Democratic Executive Committee has either to purge the poll list or to require an enrollment of voters. A check of the applicable laws indicates that the responsibility for purging the poll list rests with the Board of Registrars. This is covered by Article 3, in title 17, of the Alabama Code of 1940. The following is taken from Section 44:

Sun. 6-13-48

"The Board of Registrars shall meet in each county on the first Monday in January, 1940, and every two years thereafter, for purging the registration lists, and may continue in session one week. The names of those who have died, become non-residents of the state, become insane, and been so declared by inquisition of lunacy, or who have been convicted of any offense mentioned in section 182 of the constitution, since being registered, or otherwise disqualified as electors under the provision of the constitution, and any names which may have been fraudulently entered on such list, shall be stricken from the registration list."

In construing this section, the attorney general of Alabama rendered an opinion in 1940 (Report of Attorney General Jan.-March, 1940, page 273), which holds that the Board of Registrars has the sole authority to purge a duly registered voter from the poll list.

The Montgomery County Democratic Executive Committee recognizes the need for a re-registration of voters in Montgomery County and if it had the authority to bring about such re-registration, I am sure it would take immediate action.

Voters Should Have Right Of Choice

THE MONTGOMERY ADVERTISER, for many years a stalwart spokesman for the Democratic Party in Alabama, has pledged its support to the States' Rights Democratic ticket in November. In line with its views, it takes mild exception to our recent expression of concern over a situation in which Truman supporters in several Southern states may find themselves without a way to vote their convictions this Fall.

The situation has come about because presidential electors chosen in the regular Democratic primaries of those particular states are now being instructed to cast their electoral votes for the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

Advertiser.
Montgomery, Ala.

The Advertiser says in part:

The fact is, of course, that a majority of Alabama Democrats, in an election where the issue was clearly drawn, okehed the arrangement which exists today. They voted overwhelmingly for anti-Truman electors. If there was deprivation, it was deprivation by majority vote.

But we can scarcely take The Times to task for failing to understand what has happened in Alabama when it is evident that thousands of Alabama voters have forgotten that they voted for all of this last May.

Wed. 8-11-48

Nevertheless, this misunderstanding illustrates a point The Advertiser has previously made and one from which we believe Democratic executive committee members should take warning. If there is any legal way to place Truman-Barkley electors on the November ballot, it would be a wise precaution to encourage it. Otherwise, in the months and years to come there may be complaints—unwarranted but sincere and angry—that voters were foxed. They weren't, but they shouldn't be given the opportunity to think so.

WE SINCERELY hope the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee will be prevailed upon to follow The Advertiser's warning and do all within its power to see that a slate of Truman-Barkley electors is indeed placed on the ballot.

We cannot agree with the Montgomery newspaper, however, in terming any possible complaints in the future, "unwarranted."

We do not in any sense minimize the significance of the Alabama primary in which the electors were overwhelmingly nominated on an anti-Truman platform. At the same time, it cannot be said with certainty that these anti-Truman votes were pro-Thurmond, simply because the Thurmond-Wright ticket was not advanced until long after the primary was held.

As we have said, it is entirely likely that the States' Rights ticket will attract a large majority in Alabama as in a few other states. Even so, there can be no justification for depriving what Truman-Barkley minority there may be from having its say-so.

A basic tenet of democracy honors the rule of the majority, but this does not envision the suppression of a minority. Where the ballot is concerned, "deprivation by majority vote" is no more morally right than deprivation by force.

We do not believe we are guilty of "failing to understand" what is happening in Alabama. We understand there are some qualified voters who may not have a free choice in casting their ballots for presidential electors. That is sufficient to leave us profoundly disturbed.

Alabama Congressman Asks Repeal Of 14th Amendment

Chi. Defender

WASHINGTON — With crocodile tears in his eyes and his voice quavering, Rep. Sam Hobbs of Alabama, Friday introduced a resolution to repeal the 14th amendment. It interferes with freedom of religion, he declared.

The 14th amendment, ratified shortly after the civil war, guarantees the rights of citizenship to all Americans, and gives them equal protection under the law.

Sat. 7-17-48

Although Representative Hobbs, who hails from the fourth Alabama Congressional district claims that his proposal is intended only to "restore religious freedom" it was looked on as a move to further disenfranchise Negroes by denying them the rights of citizenship even on paper.

Chicago, Ill.

The Alabama Congressman said he entered his bill as a result of the recent Supreme Court decision banning religious instruction in public schools. He said there actually had been two such recent rulings, that "are susceptible to interpretations that may destroy the very life of this nation."

The decisions were based on the 14th amendment which says in part: "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens." Representative Hobbs said this was the section which concerned him. He asserted that it denies people the right to put schools to any use that pleases them, including teaching religion.

Sat. 7-17-48

Rep. Hobbs was elected to office by less than 15 per cent of the people of voting age in his district. The others were mainly denied the vote by the poll tax system.

THE PASSING THRONG
BY ATTICUS MULLIN

The Advertiser

The person who votes in the general election in November and who fails to vote under the Democratic rooster, will not be able to make a race in the Democratic primary of 1950 and may not be able, even, to vote.

Lots of people claim they are in a quandary as to what to do. Some claim they want to vote for Truman for President. Every person entering the Democratic primary in May had a chance to vote for Truman when there were more than 11 presidential electors on the ticket who were not against him. Those persons pledged themselves, no matter how they voted then, to support the Democratic nominees.

Thur. 8-26-48
Montgomery, Ala.

There is a great deal of difference between the National Democratic Party and the Alabama Democratic Party. The Alabama Democratic Party is a state institution qualified to do business in Alabama and with an emblem and other things registered with the Secretary of State. The National Democratic Party is merely a nucleus of state Democratic parties. The emblem of the National party is the donkey. The emblem of the Alabama Democratic party is the crowing rooster and under that rooster the words "White Supremacy." Could you ever imagine a national party with Truman at the head being in favor of white supremacy? Of course not.

Thur. 8-26-48

The issue is so simple here in Alabama that no wonder newspaper polls are showing ten to one and more for the Thurmond and Wright ticket. That is the way Democrats in Alabama feel. I have talked to hundreds in the last few weeks, perhaps thousands, and in very few instances did I find a man or woman who wanted to vote for Truman again. They have already voted once and most of them are sorry they voted for Truman the first time.

To vote regular, you make one mark under the rooster

Tuskegee Negroes Fail to Register

Pitt. Courier 24e

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Although the registration books in Macon County have been open since Jan. 9, and although 81 per cent of the county's total population is made up of Negroes, not a Negro had been registered for voting up to last week. More than 200 whites have registered, an election official said.

---

81 PER CENT OF TUSKEGEE

Mont. Advertiser 34e

Editor, The Advertiser:

Mr. G. L. McAllister's news item on Tuskegee, Ala., and accompanying pictures appearing in The Advertiser over date of Nov. 29 might have been interesting reading for people outside of Tuskegee, but I know that the Negro population of this town (which is 81 per cent) must have been sickened while Mr. McAllister talked carelessly of "interracial cooperation and friendliness" existing here.

Montgomery, Ala.

I note, too, that he spoke of "good streets." The streets serving 81 per cent of Tuskegee's population are often impassable. But, maybe he was referring only to the streets serving the white residences.

Mr. McAllister spoke, too, of a 100-acre lake which provides recreational facilities, but failed to say that this lake is closed to the vast majority of Tuskegee's citizens (the Negroes). I notice also that no mention was made of the fact that Negro students attending high school in this area are expected to pay a fee of $20 per year; that the school building is badly in need of repair and improvement.

Too, Mr. McAllister mentioned nothing of the wide discrepancy in the number of whites and Negroes voting here (there are 2,300 white electors but only 153 Negroes registered to vote in this area. Keep in mind that the Negroes outnumber the whites in population 5 to 1, yet the whites out-vote the Negroes 15 to 1); that only nine Negroes have been registered in the last three years, yet over 200 whites were registered during this same period; that th Negroes are at the registration place each time the doors are suppose to be opened but cannot find the registration board members; that only 15 out of the "famed Tuskegee Institute's" 800 employes are registered voters; that less than 100 of the Negro-staffed 1,400-employee veterans Hosptial are registered voters.

Now, all these Negroes know their A. B. C.s. Why not let them take part in government.

Mr. McAllister would have done his paper a great service if he had asked the "city and county fathers" to divulge the names of those who took part in the recent Ku Klux Klan parade and cross-burning party two weeks ago. Or, since these guardians of the citizens here seem to be bent on doing what is fair and just, if they would permit a band of Negroes to parade in the business district of town (under black sheets), return to their parked cars, fix a flat tire and burn a cross in the public square.

Yes, when I read the news article appearing in yesterday's Advertiser it made me nauseated.

I am not a Northern agitator. I was born in the South and have not spent one month away from here.

oting Irregularities oted in Arkansas

The Call
Kansas City, Mo.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(ANP). —An overhauling of the voting system and voting laws in Arkansas was being demanded by many citizens following the recent primary elections in the state.

Negro voters were very critical. Although no one tried to prevent them from voting, many white citizens crowded around colored polling places and looked on to see how they voted.

As a whole such irregularities as the open ballot rather than secret, no verification of voters or voting lists, irregular counting of ballots and shortage of ballots were noted throughout the state, not only in colored precincts, but in the white also.

Political campaigners were even noticed in several polling places openly speaking to the voters after they received their ballots. Poll tax payment was not authenticated in many places.

Speaking of these evils found in many of the state's polling places the Arkansas Gazette wrote:

"Some of the irregularities cited above are theoretically forbidden by the law, but by long custom the law is generally ignored. Our voting system is patently inadequate; it invites chicanery.

"A complete overhaul of the voting laws should be high on the list of urgent business for the next legislature."

(Special to The Pittsburgh Courier)

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—The deci- ive power of the intelligent use of e ballot was shown in Arkansas week when the Negro vote de- ted a candidate for Governor had hoped to ride into office race-hate platform.

the State's ,000 Negro voters joined with -thinking white electors last sday in turning back the guber- torial bid of former Atty. Gen. ck Holt in the run-off primary the Democratic nomination to at high office. With the aid of the Negro vote, 36-year-old Sidney McMath, fighting prosecuting attorney of Garland County (Hot Springs) won the election by slightly more than 10,000 majority Democratic nomination in Arkansas is tantamount to election.

McMath's victory was significant in view of the fact that third-place candidate James (Uncle Mac) Mackrell of the July 27 preferential primary not only threw his support to Holt, but served as his campaign manager in the run-off election.

INJECTED 'RIGHTS' ISSUE

Both members of the Holt political team stooped to the low of injecting so-called States' rights and the race question into the run-off primary as issues. They attacked McMath for "straddling" the civil rights program and accused him of failing to speak out for Southern "traditions" including segregation.

Holt's strategy obviously was to create hysteria on the part of the emotional element of whites by painting nightmarish pictures about so-called social equality.

In reply McMath told Arkansas voters his opponents was using the race issue to "frighten you by saying unless he was elected Governor, the Negroes were going to take the Government. His entire approach to this problem is absurd and ridiculous."

REPERCUSSIONS

There were several post-election repercussions. Holt said Saturday that a "correct" count of votes would reveal that he and not McMath won the nomination. He added: "I won the election last Tuesday and I am going out and get it."

Meanwhile, Governor Ben Laney charged that the "controlled" Negro block voting was the deciding factor in last week's primary. He said that McMath received votes "from Negroes who didn't know for whom they were voting, but were voting because they had been told to do so."

The Governor said that in Ouachita County, in which he lives, the larger part of the McMath majority there came from Negroes.

GOVERNOR RAPS RACE

"I have no objection to the independent Negro who knows for whom he is voting," Laney asserted. "But I do object to a vote which is fixed. I condemn organized, fixed and controlled block voting."

Sat 8-21-48

The Governor is a member of the States' right crowd. He attended the Dixiecrat rebellion at Birmingham, but declined to bolt.

Political observers scoffed at Laney's charge of "fixed" voting by Negroes. Several queried what afforded a worse example of bloc voting than the blind support whites in a number of Southern States give to rabble-rousing candidates who advocate "white supremacy" and a denial to the Negro of his rights as a citizen.

REFUTES GOVERNOR

McMath said the Governor's charge was "obviously not correct and absurd on its face.

"The election is over and the people have spoken," he continued. "I have too much to do preparing for the job ahead to become engaged in any controversy with Mr. Laney or anyone else."

He said the only bloc voting with which he was familiar was directed by politicians active in Holt's campaign. Unofficial returns indicate a record-breaking vote estimated at 301,500 in last Tuesday's gubernatorial primary.

Progressive Voters Meet; Pledge Non-Partisan Policy

(34e) Fla Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

By JAMES B. LaFOURCHE

MIAMI — (ANP) — Re-affirming its independence, the National Progressive Voter's league in a three day conclave here at the Mt. Zion Baptist church stated through its militant president Maynard H. Jackson, that its 15,000 members scattered throughout the nation had pledged themselves to a non-partisan policy. Thurs

The Florida session, described as a "political Workshop," drew to the playground city of the south, members from every southern state. The conference took on the aspect of a miniature national convention where serious thought was given to the studying and evaluating of the candidates and their respective parties. 9-4-48

Said Pres. Jackson: "We stand on voting men and measures regardless of party."

STUDY BALLOT

Considerable time was given to the study of the rights of citizens and the power of the ballot. The one great goal of the organization is to get more Negroes registered in time for the next November elections.

Mr. Jackson stated that the Miami conclave had ben forced on the PVL as the result of the upheaval by southern governors protesting the proposed adoption of Pres. Truman's 10-point program, and the entry of Wallace as the third party candidate. It was also admitted that there was considerable speculation as to who the Republican standard bearer might be. CONDITIONS REVEALED

Tuesday morning's session was devoted to the "State of the Nation," at which time representatives from Georgia, Alabama, Mississipi, and Louisiana told of the peculiar conditions existing in their respective states as pertains to the registration of Negroes and the jim crow impediments which have to be circumvented. Atlanta, Ga.

Outstanding among the visitors were Pres. Maynard H. Jackson, Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Merritt, Augusta, Ga.; A. C. Partee, Dallas; H. M. Morgan, Tyler, Tex. Prominent Miamians were D. H. Douglas, Atlanta Life Insurance Co., Atty. L. E. Thomas, the Rev. E. T. Graham and Charles A. Lockhart, (AFL) labor leader. 9-4-48

The Vote In Florida

The News

Florida Democrats nominated a governor this week. The total vote, with only 11 precincts to be heard from, was 571,438. Alabama Democrats in their primary May 4 cast a total of 310,929 votes.

34e Fla

But Florida has a smaller population than Alabama. The 1940 official census gave Alabama 2,832,961 people and Florida only 1,897,414. Since 1940, it is true, Florida has gained in population more than has Alabama. A Census Bureau study estimated that during the war years, 1940-46, Florida gained 13 per cent in civilian population and Alabama lost 12 per cent. What readjustment there has been since then is uncertain, but in any case Alabama surely has more population still than has Florida.

How, then, account for the fact that almost twice as many Florida citizens vote in their Democratic primary as do Alabama citizens in theirs?

Birmingham, Ala.

One obvious explanation is the poll tax situation. Florida has no poll tax. Alabama has the most restrictive of any of the states where the poll tax is still a prerequisite to voting. The poll tax is a deterrent of voting. Otherwise its retention would not be a matter of importance. Fri 5-28-48

More Florida citizens may vote, moreover, because of population characteristics. In Florida, 27 per cent of the people, by the 1940 census, are Negro; in Alabama, 34 per cent. There is, also, a higher percentage of Florida citizens of voting age. The 1940 census showed Florida had 62.6 per cent of the total population of voting age, while in Alabama the percentage was only 54.9.

Another fact to be introduced in the picture is that Florida in 1940 polled 485,492 votes, and Alabama only 294,219 votes. The current large vote, relative to Alabama, is, therefore, nothing new. The 1944 figures were: Florida, 482,803; Alabama, 244,743.

But the proof of voting statistics lies, in some measure at least, in the quality of government that results. In that respect, Florida does not seem to have suffered from lowering the barriers to more voters. Florida's state government certainly stands up well under comparison with Alabama's. The News Fri.

* * *

Furthermore, even if Florida government and politics are not superior to Alabama's, it could still be argued that Florida's democracy reaches a higher level. And that, in time, should mean superior government. For democracy presupposes the ability of people to govern themselves. The more people there are who participate in government by voting, the better the government will be, eventually. Birmingham, Ala.

Too few people in Alabama are concerned, or are permitted to be concerned, about the kind of government they have. In the long run, we shall suffer for it. State poll tax reform could help remedy this situation. It could also help forestall undesirable federal efforts to bring about such reform. 5-28-48

Negro Vote Exceeds White In Perrine Community

Memphis World

Memphis Tenn

PERRINE, Fla.—"I talked it over with the Lord and the Lord told me to withdraw," was the statement reputed to have made to Mrs Jula Wyatt, a Perrine City Clerk, by Ben Shavis, Negro grocer and carpenter, as he last Friday dropped out of the race for a place on the Perrine City Commission.

This statement controverts an earlier contention on the part of Republican leaders in this farming community who claim that Shavis dropped out of the race because of threats made to him against his life by enraged white citizens of the community. "For reasons" not made clear after his withdrawal from the race, Shavis went to Hasting, Fla., returning on Tuesday. He claim that he went to the Western Florida city on "business."

Tues. 11-30-48

Asked about the threat, he said: "I didn't hear that until I got back."

"That's a kind of false alarm that is all that is. Really, I haven't been threatened." Shavis said he originally entered the race because he "felt like there ought to be a colored man in there." He dropped out last week, he said, because "I didn't feel like I was able to fill that office." Tues. 11-30-48

Republicans leaders investigating a reported "drop out or die" threat and Perrine officials who expressed surprise at the charges, adthere was nothing concrete to go on.

Leonard Friedmna, member of a three-man Republican committee, said the gruop had failed even to contact the Rev. A. D. Coleman, Negro Republican committeeman from Perrine who first made the charges before the Republican Headquarters Club Monday night.

William C. Besselievre, assistant police chief of Perrine, conceded there had been "a few rumors floating around--on the White side."

"I heard this morning that somebody was pretty well lit up when he made certain remarks," the assistant chief said. He added however, that Shavis had reported nothing to any member of the Perrine police force, which consists of two white and three Negro policemen.

For the election the registered Negro voters outnumber the White 316 to 27 and Barfiled said an advisory Negro council headed by Shavis has been masterminding most of the municipal affairs affecting the large Negro community.

mitted after a day's scouting that

On the Negro council's recommendation and with the financial support of the Negro community, Barfield said, the new municipality had developed a Negro section and employed three Negro policemen--all in less than six months.

Interracial cooperation in community affairs, he emphasized, has been well-night perfect in Perrine.

Mob Breaks Up Church Meeting, Chases Pastors

GREENSBORO, Fla.—In a frenzical attempt to kill all efforts of Negroes to register and vote, a band of white citizens of this small town entered a church Sunday and armed with shotguns and rifles broke up a meeting on voting rights and gave chase to two ministers and a teacher of the town.

Approximately thirty persons, gathered in Antioch Baptist Church, pastored by the Rev. Robert Bush, assisted by Frank Williams, teacher, and the Rev. William McNeally, were being instructed of their rights as voters and being told why the franchise should be exercised when more than fifty armed men entered and dispersed the meeting.

The three leaders were chased more than half a mile.

Lost Cause, 1948

BY ROWENA W. TOBIAS

The Nation

Sat 8-14-48

New York N.Y.

Charleston, S. C., August 4

WHILE the Dixiecrat fireworks fizzled through the headlines, the South's last-ditch abortive battle to preserve a one-party, one-color political system has been lost in Charleston's Federal District Court. The last citadel of "white-only" voting has been breached by federal fiat, a far more significant fact in changing the pattern of Southern politics than all the shenanigans of Thurmond, Wright, Laney, and company. Judge J. Waites Waring, in ruling, on July 16, that Negroes must be allowed to enrol and vote in Democratic Party primaries in South Carolina, and that no qualifying oath of opposition to the "so-called FEPC law" may be required of them, has closed the last legal loophole against Negro participation in Southern politics. In the first week that the party books were opened to Negroes, over 4,300 of them enroled in Charleston County alone.

South Carolina has been the test case. This is the state which has gone furthest in seeking legal stratagems to keep Negroes out of party affairs. After the Supreme Court decision giving Lonnie E. Smith, a Negro, the right to vote in the Texas primaries of 1944, leaders of the South Carolina Democratic Party decided to erase all statutes concerning primaries from the state code and adopt the line that the party here is a private club holding private nominations. Waring's decision slashes away this technical interpretation and returns to the heart of the matter—that primaries are a part of the election machinery and, in South Carolina, the only effective and meaningful election. He has invited South Carolina "to rejoin the Union" in these words: "It is time to . . . adopt the American way of conducting elections."

Other Southern states have carefully observed developments in South Carolina. Georgia's last primaries were open to Negroes, Alabama's new qualifications apply equal treatment to white and Negro, and Mississippi's policy of intimidation of Negroes has not been altogether successful. South Carolina remained the last state with a "pure" white primary, and if its politicians had won, the rest of the South would quickly have followed the battle-plan laid down here. An interesting parallel can be drawn between the present era and the days preceding the Civil War, when South Carolina also gave active and ideological leadership to a lost Southern cause.

The personalities involved heighten the basic drama of the story. In spite of Southern howls about "outside interference," the decisive blow against white supremacy has been delivered by a native son of Charleston. Judge Waring is the scion of an old and conservative family, and a former leader in South Carolina machine politics. His inside knowledge of party tactics, in fact, has enabled him to circumvent all the twists and turns of the political leaders. His new status as a social outcast and almost a "lunatic" has, it is true, contributed some bitterness to his clashes with lawyers who appear in his court on day-to-day matters, but it has not deterred him in his adherence to Constitutional principles.

Robert McC. Figg, a lawyer with a brilliant record as prosecutor, originated the idea of removing the primary laws from the state code. He also acts as an advisor to the party and to South Carolina's Governor J. Strom Thurmond, the fair-haired boy of the Dixiecrats. Figg, who does not come from an old-line Southern family, could be compared to John C. Calhoun, defending a doomed class and tradition and often recognizing the inadequacies of the men and events for which he serves as apologist. But his public allegiance to "states' rights" is unswerving.

Sat 8-14-48

The Governor, fairly young and fairly liberal, for the South, is also an important figure in this historic moment His ambitions and his inclination for personal publicity have catapulted him into the front of the white-supremacy armies (just as they got him into Life, standing on his head), but his battalions, whether or not he realizes it, are fighting for control over what remains of a wrecked Democratic Party, and not for the Presidency. Since even this limited campaign seems like another lost cause, Thurmond's leadership here may cost him the Senatorial seat that he had hoped to win in 1950. One observer at a recent meeting of the Dixiecrats in Jackson, Miss., summed up the movement by citing Jim Watson's comment on the 1920 Republican convention that nominated Harding: "There I stood, knee-deep in midgets."

The Nation

While the hotheads hare off after the Dixiecrats, most local politicians are still trying to decide what course to follow. Some adopt the plan of W. W. Ball, the irascible and autocratic editor of the Charleston News and Courier, who wants to abolish primaries altogether and nominate, in aristocratic conventions, "men of property." Others hope to establish new qualifications for voting in the national elections that may nullify most of the potential Negro ballots. Still others look forward with genuine relief to a two-color, two-party system which will break the Solid South and return it to national prestige and participation in both major parties. Now, they believe, all Southerners who are actually Republican in economic and social principle will find it respectable to join the G. O. P. Thus, in the end, a free ballot for Negroes may mean a free ballot for white Southerners.

New York N.Y.

WHITE SUPREMACY IN THE INDIAN COUNTRY was hard hit when a special federal court, on August 3, declared it unconstitutional for New Mexico to deny the franchise to reservation Indians. Only a few days earlier, the Supreme Court of Arizona had knocked out that state's ban against Indian voters by reversing one of its own decisions of twenty years ago. Now, for the first time in history, Indians everywhere in the United States can vote. The federal government has finally fulfilled the promise of Indian citizenship made in the Mexican Cession treaty, confirmed by act of Congress in 1924, and guaranteed by the Fifteenth Amendment. The leader of the contemporary Indian war for freedom from white supremacy was a former marine sergeant, Miguel Trujillo, a full-blooded Isleta Indian. His attorneys were supported by the American Civil Liberties Union, the National Congress of American Indians, the Civil Rights Section of the Department of Justice, and the Indian Bureau. n the basis of his victory, Navajo, Apache, and Pueblo Indians look forward to the use of the ballot in their fight against starvation. For six months, Arizona and New Mexico welfare officials, apparently with the tacit approval of the White House and Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing, have denied federal and state social-security benefits to the aged and blind and the dependent children of Indian blood, who probably need such assistance more desperately than the members of any other group in the country. The newly enfranchised Indians of the Southwest are no longer in a mood to accept this shameful discrimination with stoical resignation.

Now It's All Over: Truman Got Our Vote

Sat [illegible]

34e

Chicago Ill

Lucius Harper

AT the time this is written (Monday morning), we are not certain who will occupy the White House for the next four years. Judging from the amount of confusion that has been stirred up during the campaign, we lean, however, to the belief that Thomas Dewey of New York will be the man. We wore President Truman's badge on our coat lapel throughout the struggle — even at some Republican banquets — and have no apologies to offer. Whoever occupies the White House will have to go forward under the Truman program—and not backward.

President Truman set into motion in his special message before Congress last February 2 the most progressive program fathered by any president since Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation. In fact the Ten Point Program that he outlined—seven of which vitally concerned our well-being as American citizens—can be looked upon, in the light of present day events, as a Second Emancipation Proclamation. Although Congress sidestepped the issue, and did not act upon President Truman's recommendations, we share with him the belief that it was the "worst Congress" in the history of the nation. Whatever may be said to the contrary, this congress "muffed the ball" to aid in making America truly democratic in spirit as well as in words. Are we to be surprised when Stalin laughs at our bogus and fraudulent democracy?

IN case you have forgotten, here is what Mr. Truman asked the 80th Congress to do in order to make our Constitution function without regard to race, color or creed, and it turned him down:

"1—Establishing a permanent Commission on Civil Rights, a Joint Congressional Committee on Civil Rights and a Civil Rights Division in the Department of Justice.

"2—Strengthening existing civil rights statutes.

"3—Providing Federal protection against lynching.

"4—Protecting more adequately the right to vote.

"5—Establishing a Fair Employment Practice Commission to prevent unfair discrimination in employment.

"6—Prohibiting discrimination in interstate transportation facilities.

"7—Providing home rule and suffrage in Presidential elections for the residents of the District of Columbia.

"8—Providing Statehood for Hawaii and Alaska and a greater measure of self-government for our island possessions.

"9—Equalizing the opportunities for residents of the United States to become naturalized citizens.

"10—Settling the evacuation claims of Japanese citizens."

WHEN Congress by-passed President Truman's request, he went ahead and tried to accomplish rights for Negroes by issuing two executive orders; one was designed to achieve equality of treatment and opportunity in the armed forces, and the other strengthened the fair employment practices policy in the civil federal establishment. He recognized the legal ability of Negroes by placing one on the Federal bench, Judge Irvin C. Mollison, and he went further and made a Negro a governor, William Hastie. One very important committee having to do with the body politic, President Truman has named a Negro as member.

At the expense of splitting his own party and thereby losing his post in the White House, he stuck by his Civil Rights program from beginning to end, yet there were thousands among us who accused him of "just playing politics to get the Negro vote." We disagree with them. It would have been much easier for him to choose the other path. Whoever takes up the cause of the Negro as President Truman did digs his own political grave, and oftimes the Negroes join in to furnish the shovels. At the end of his campaign in New York, where Mr. Truman spoke before 65,000 people, he was as firm in his demand for civil rights as he was when he spoke before Congress on February last. He declared:

"Today the democratic way of life is being challenged all over the world," Mr. Truman said. "Democracy's answer to the challenge of totalitarianism is its promise of equal rights and equal opportunity for all mankind.

"The fulfillment of this promise is among the highest purposes of government. Our determination to attain the goal of equal rights and equal opportunity must be resolute and unwavering.

"For my part, I intend to keep moving toward this goal with every ounce of strength and determination I have."

WE believe Mr. Dewey will make a good president. He said in his acceptance speech at Philadelphia: "I am under obligation to no man for this nomination." He has promised you nothing but UNITY whatever that means in politics. In some states he refrained from aiding men on his own ticket: as in the case of Gov. Green and Senator Brooks in Illinois. Insofar as Negroes are concerned, President Truman has set a stiff pattern for him to follow. He will have to appoint a Negro in his cabinet or on the U. S. Supreme Court to beat the record. As to our civil rights in Mr. Dewey's hands, we shall watch and wait.

Sat 11-6-48

We have, however, no regret to trouble us or any apology to make for voting for President Truman.

SOUTH'S NEGRO VOTE IS SEEN FOR TRUMAN

34e

Oliver W. Hill, the first Negro in Virginia to be elected to the Richmond City Council in fifty-two years, said yesterday that despite the Lincoln tradition and Progressive party promises, most of the 1,200,000 qualified Negro voters in the South would cast their ballots in November for President Truman and other Democratic candidates.

Mr. Hill interrupted a three-day sound truck tour of Harlem urging Negroes to register for the elections to hold a news conference in Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Biltmore Hotel.

He pointed out that one-third of the voters who put him in office were white and explained that Southern Negroes realized in turn that they could win better conditions only by supporting liberal Democrats.

"Is this whole civil rights struggle," Mr. Hill declared, "one thing seems to be lost sight of. There is rising in the South a large body of white citizens who recognize the importance of extending Constitutional guarantees to Negroes in order to strengthen their own economic and political security."

The Communist taint attached to the Wallace movement, Mr. Hill said, would stop it from making "any serious inroads on the Negro vote in the South." He criticized Governor Dewey's record on civil rights for Negroes in New York and added that a Republican Congress would not take any positive action to help Negroes because of the danger of "offending certain of their Congressional allies from the South."

Where Credit Is Due

Washington Post

34e

Washington D.C.

With somewhat more than a million votes under his belt, Mr. Henry Wallace is already blowing Gideon's trumpet for a Progressive Party triumph in 1952. He has a long way to go, and in our opinion is doing his cause more harm than good by claiming credit for putting Mr. Truman back in the White House and the Democrats into control of Congress. Like his ungenerous telegram "conceding" victory to Truman in the form of a lecture on what the President must do, this distortion of the evidence can only detract still more from Wallace's personal reputation.

Thur 11-18-48

Credit for the outcome of the election belongs elsewhere, as indicated by the returns from New York City's Eleventh Assembly District. The voters of this Harlem district numbered 27,477. Mr. Wallace had appealed to them and their fellow citizens of the Negro community elsewhere for support on racial grounds. The results show that 61 per cent of them voted for Truman, 16.8 per cent for Dewey, and 12.6 per cent for the Progressive Party candidate. Even if this cannot be taken as proof of Negro reaction elsewhere in the country, it shows that Mr. Wallace failed in his effort here to splinter the Negro voters away from the regular parties. In refusing to be led astray by appeals to race, we think the Harlem voters showed sounder judgment than their would-be leader.

The Right To Vote

To the Editor:

The News

The right to vote is our priceless heritage. Now that we have so many evil conflicts fighting to overthrow our present government and to gain control for selfish reasons, we now have a great responsibility resting on our shoulders as American citizens.

Our sons, fathers and brothers and husbands fought on the battlefields to subdue aggrandizement and tyranny and to save our country. We should see them now in a vision putting up their bodies and lives as a bulwark for his flag, your flag, and my flag. Now is the time for us to show our gratitude by going to the registrar's office in the courthouse and register for the purpose of voting. We are indebted to them to live up to their expectation of us. We should all take an interest in our government. The women and men who have not become qualified voters should go and register and pay their past due poll tax now.

There has been a law enacted recently whereby we must be in a position to explain any part of the constitution intelligently before becoming a qualified voter. Remember, there are three kind of people in the world—the wills, the won'ts and the can'ts. The first accomplish everything, the second oppose everything, and the third fail in everything. We must have the will to qualify ourselves and not shirk this responsibility.

What is happening to Americans? If we are dissatisfied with the Constiution of the United States, let's agree to abolish it and start all over again; and if we hold it dear to our hearts let's stand up and fight for it. We cannot accept part of it without doing injustice to the whole. We must preserve our government; it must be given back to the people. Our ballots provide the only real answer.

We as Americans are a free nation and we must never give up our freedom. People of the most questionable loyalty have worked their way into high places in our government circles, and only through the ballot can they be gotten out. Voters should realize that we now have in our midst a certain class of voters who are casting their ballots for the purpose of favors, prestige, and many other ulterior motives. This class of voters we must fight also.

A Transformation Which Aided Truman

Sat. 11-27-48

34e

MOST observers who have ventured a diagnosis of the results of the November 2 election which gave President TRUMAN a wholly unexpected victory and the Democratic Party substantial successes throughout the country have figured that Mr. TRUMAN's espousal of civil rights doctrine was the dominating factor in winning him the support of the majority of Negro voters.

This is partly, but not wholly true as a backhand perspective makes quite apparent. Another significant fact which played a major part in giving the President and his party heavy Negro backing is that within the past sixteen years American Negroes have undergone a complete metamorphosis in their political thinking. Unlike from the time of their enfranchisement until the presidency of FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT they are no longer devotedly Republican, come rain or sunshine.

A large segment of them—and it looks like a substantial majority—is at present anchored in the Democratic Party. Therefore, party preference, as it was with millions of white voters, played no small part in influencing their choice of candidates.

The Republican Party, unfortunately, has not yet been able to black out the haunting memories of the administrations of HARDING and HOOVER with their breadlines and soup kitchens, as compared with the Rooseveltian reign of national prosperity.

Sat. 11-27-48

Now, all intelligent voters realize that the Democrats are not entitled solely to the credit of having dissipated the depression which blighted the country during the years just preceding the late war. The outbreak of the war itself in which all parties united to win was the greatest factor in ushering in the period of prosperity which fortunately still lingers with us. But the fat years did come along with the Democrats in power, whatever the prime reason, resulting in a transformation of the political attitudes of millions of Americans to the great advantage of the Democratic Party.

It is a transformation which has created out of the Negro a divided, instead of a single party voter, and helped very materially in giving Mr. TRUMAN another four-year lease on the White House.

TO A LARGE percentage of colored voters living in the congested areas of the North and Mid-West, civil rights is more or less an abstract subject, except as it definitely applies to their economic plight.

But there is nothing abstract in their dread of a possible visitation by another national recession spreading suffering and despair.

However, there is no justification whatever in the feeling that the country would have been less happy economically under the presidency of the defeated Republican candidate than it will be under the victorious Democratic standard-bearer. But with the majority of voters thinking as they proved they do, the Republicans had to suffer for the unforgotten omissions of their last couple of administrations.

Conversely, the Democrats profited by public acquaintance with an area of national prosperity which fortuitously made its advent under their governmental rule.

Mr. TRUMAN's civil rights pronouncements and his subsequent stand on them made an impression upon a large body of voters; but skepticism of Repulicanism born of unpleasant memories played a larger part in contributing to his success than pre-election sentiment had indicated that it would.

Incidentally, it is a known fact that not even the most loyal Negro Democrat who voted for the party's candidates had wished, or expected, to see southern bourbons returned to Congressional power.

The recapture by the party of complete control of both executive and legislative branches of the government threatens to put back into places where they can do the most harm in the Congress such southern reactionaries as Senator OLIN D. JOHNSTON of South Carolina, as well as Mississippi's two rabid race baiters, Senator JAMES O. EASTLAND and Representative ANDREW RANKIN.

It requires more optimism than the average informed citizen at present possesses for him not to feel uncertain of the ability of President TRUMAN to gain Congressional approval of his civil rights program over the heads of such die-hard opponents, should they again find themselves enthroned in high seats in the House and Senate.

We will have a Democratic administration for the next four years after this one, and perhaps, along with it a distasteful mixture of Rankinism.

Cabinet Post Reward Not Expected, Although Competent Lawyers Are Available for Job

By LOIUS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — The prime factors in the election of President Truman, insofar as bloc votes go, were the labor, farm and colored votes.

None of these blocs alone would have been sufficient to elect Mr. Truman. But without anyone of them he would not have been elected.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey might not have been elected, but he would have, at least, received enough electoral votes to have kept. Mr. Truman from getting a majority and the election of a President would have been thrown into the House of Representatives.

There the Dixiecrats would have been in a position to use their strength for bargaining purposes.

In the make-up President Truman's Cabinet, which was under consideration at Key West, where the President vacationed, both labor and the farm interests will have representation. But insofar as is known, no Cabinet representation will be given to colored Democrats.

Lewis Served Under Taft

As a matter of fact, no colored person has ever held a Cabinet post, and not since the ad[illegible]ation of the late William Howard Taft has a colored man been in the "Little Cabinet." The last and only colored man to hold such a position was William H. Lewis, Boston lawyer, who served as an Assistant Attorney General during the administration of President Taft.

There are nine Cabinet positions—Secretary of State, Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of Defense, Attorney General, Postmaster General, Secretary of the Interior, Secretary of Agriculture Secretary of Commerce, and Secretary of Labor.

If Mr. Truman is unwilling to elevate a colored person to a Cabinet post, it appears that equity would dictate that one or more be elevated to a "Little Cabinet" post.

Lawyers Qualified

The argument that there are no qualified colored persons for such posts will not hold water. Since the days when Lewis was an Assistant Attorney General, the colored lawyer has grown in stature and has proved his ability in the courts.

A number of them, have had judicial experience. Gov. William H. Hastie of the Virgin Islands, has had both judicial and administrative experience. Two now are members of the Federal judiciary—Judge Irvin C. Molilson of the U.S. Customs Court and Judge Herman E. Moore of the U.S. District Court for the Virgin Islands.

A number of them, like Charles H. Houston, who is engaged in the private practice of law, and Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the NAACP, have matched their intellectual powers and legal ability with some of the best white lawyers in the country and have carried off the honors.

Bunche Good Prospect

In other fields there are also colored men of unquestioned ability. For instance, Ralph J. Bunche, United Nations Mediator for Palestine, has proved his skill in international diplomacy in a difficut situation. The State Department has two Under Secretaries and six Assistant Secretaries.

Certainly Mr. Bunche can fill one of these eight positions creditably and, at the same time, help the United States to square in the eyes of the world its practices with its professions.

References here to specific persons and positions are not to be interpreted as excluding other persons and other positions. There are today a large number of colored persons, who, by, character, education and experience, are well qualified to fill any position in the gift of their country.

Voters' Pamphlet Is Now Available

NEW YORK—The CIO Political Action Committe has ordered 10,000 copies of the "Declaration of Negro Voters," now available in an attractive pamphlet. An additional order for 2,000 copies has been received from the National Alliance of Postal Employees. The Declaration was formulated by representatives of 21 national organizations meeting in New York on March 27.

Wallace Complicates Negro Vote Hunt

Columbia Record

If there be such a thing as the Negro vote—some Negro leaders say there is not—it could very well decide the election of a president in November. The last census showed that in 1940 the Negro proportion of the total population was between 6 and 3.5 per cent in New Jersey, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana and New York.

34e Columbia, S.C.

Most Negroes were supposed to have voted Republican prior to the New Deal. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt undoubtedly swung much of this vote to the Democratic side in the elections of 1936, 1940 and 1944. Roosevelt's popular majority over Dewey in the 35 non-Southern states in 1944 was only 1,223,000 and the 1940 census showed some 2,300,000 Negroes of voting age in those 35 states. Wed 3-17-48

The Republican victory in the 1946 mid-term elections was widely ascribed to a shift of many Negro voters back to the G. O. P. column. The Roosevelts were gone from the White House; there was no more W.P.A.; many Northern Negroes had resented discrimination against them in the army and the navy. Representative Dawson, the Negro Democrat, elected from a Chicago district, had his majority cut in 1946 by 45 per cent—an indication that many Negroes were again voting Republican.

And it is these facts that explain Truman's sponsorship of his civil rights program. The president is simply trying to curry favor with the Negro voters. However a new factor has now developed to complicate the situation. Henry Wallace's third party plans to run at least nine Negroes for the House in large non-Southern cities, perhaps several Negroes for the Senate in large non-Southern states. To the extent that this maneuver gains Negro votes for Wallace, they may well be votes that otherwise would have gone to the Republican presidential candidate, and undoubtedly will do the Republicans more harm than the Democrats.

Wed. 3-17-48

If President Truman had had sense enough to keep his mouth shut he might have held the Southern electoral votes—he may, of course, get them yet—and seen Wallace cancel out his raids on the Democratic party by similiar inroads in the Republican Negro vote. It would have offered an opportunity for a Democrat to win.

EDUCATION CALLED INCENTIVE TO VOTE

The Times New York, N.Y. Sun

N. E. A. Shows the Higher the Level of Citizens the Greater the Proportion at Polls

34e 9m.

By BESS FURMAN

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, May 22—The National Education Association today made public a study, "The Voter and Non-Voter," which showed that the higher the educational and economic level of citizens the greater the proportional number going to the polls.

"Analysis of the characteristics of voters and non-voters reveals a direct relationship between education and the act of voting, and presents an unmistakable challenge to American educators and legislators," the N. E. A. said.

A table was presented showing that ten of the thirteen states with the smallest per cent of persons eligible to vote and actually voting were among the thirteen states with the lowest educational attainment in median years of school completed. 5-23-48

Poll Taken on College Men

A sampling poll was also reported in which it was shown that 81 per cent of respondents who had gone to college cast their ballots in 1940, as compared with 67 per cent of the high-school graduates and 61 per cent of those with grade-school education.

An analysis on an economic basis showed that votes were cast by 84 per cent of persons in the upper economic fourth, by 68 per cent of those in the middle economic half, and by 53 per cent of those in the lower fourth.

A more detailed analysis of educational-economic factors brought this conclusion:

"The more economic security and education a person has, the more likely he is to participate in elections. The college-educated in every economic group showed the greatest per cent of voters, and in every instance the higher the economic group the greater the per cent of voters."

A finding that 71 per cent of the white population voted as against only 34 per cent of the non-whites was termed "not surprising since the ethnic group of non-whites is composed almost entirely of disfranchised Negroes."

The report for religious groups said that 84 per cent of the Jewish people went to the polls, along with 72 per cent of the Catholics, 67 per cent of non-members of the church and 66 per cent of Protestants. 5-23-48

Women Voters Are Fewer

The Times

Women still did not vote as heavily proportionally as men, the study stated, the proportions given being that seventy-five men in every hundred went to the polls as against sixty-one women.

It was noted that a survey of 2,000 non-voting women in New York, Chicago, Cleveland and Kansas City conducted in the fall of 1944 revealed that non-voting among women increased on the lower economic and educational levels, with nearly four times as much non-voting on the low extreme of the economic and educational scale as on the high extreme. New York, N. Y.

Older persons were found to take citizenship more seriously, with 76 per cent of persons of 40 years of age and older voting as against only 59 per cent of those between 21 and 39. Sun. 5-23-48

Moon Sees Negro Vote Quadrupled

34e

NASHVILLE.—Approximately 4,000,000 Negroes will vote in the 1948 presidential election, Henry Lee Moon, public relations of the NAACP, predicted in the closing sessions of the Race Relations Institute at Fisk University. 7-31-48

Moon's estimate means that four times the number of Negroes who voted in 1944, including absentee GI voters, will go to the polls in the contest where civil rights is the keystone of domestic policy.

The NAACP official did not predict a Negro bloc of votes, but indicated that he feels, the Progressive Party, the Democrats and the Republicans will share equally in the balloting.

Enroll! Vote! But Be Careful

(AN EDITORIAL)

For the last eight years, especially the last five, this newspaper has urged Negroes to unite and fight for their right to vote as Democrats in South Carolina.

The people took the advice; and now they have in Judge J. Waties Waring's two orders, Elmore vs. Rice and Brown vs. Cope, et al., the firm right to cast that ballot. This fight is over.

34e

In seeking their right to vote, this newspaper urged Negroes to exercise proper conduct, to avoid disorders, disturbances and walk within the strict limits of the law. We pointed out that we had everything to lose by making one false step, and nothing to gain.

The people took this advice too. In five years of intensive efforts to vote there hasn't been a single reported instance in which our people have misconducted themselves, nor given certain hostile groups the stick with which to crack down on everybody. Columbia S. C.

Now, we make another appeal; an appeal which we hope and trust will be accepted in sincerity and as wisdom.

Let us go about the matter of enrolling with the greatest of courtesy, self-respect and consideration. Let's not be mad with anybody, nor try to tell off or show up anybody. Many of the persons conducting enrollment have always rooted for us; they have wanted us to vote in primaries. They are our friends. We of course don't know them by name but if we commit the wrong act, we will be losing them.

Then, let's also be constantly aware that there are numerous persons around who are just looking for one example they can use to embarrass Judge Waring, the NAACP, the Progressive Democrats and the race itself. Some of these may even attempt to provoke an incident. Let's disappoint them. Let us once again prove them liars.

Let no Negro shatter the air with boastful talk, stirring the wrong sentiments. There are more than enough white people doing that now. That is their job; let us leave it to them. Our job is simply to enroll, and to vote. To do these, we need not molest, criticize nor try to humiliate anybody. And if we will keep these things in mind, we will have gained far more than just a few paragraphs in a law book, written by a U. S. Court.

Is Texas Studying Plan To Deny Vote To Negroes?

Informer + Texas Freeman (34e) gen. 2-7-48

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(ANP)—Four southern states are seeking copies of Alabama's Boswell amendment, added to the state constitution 14 months ago to minimize voting of Negroes, the amendment's author revealed this week. San Antonio, Texas

State Rep. E. C. Boswell said, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Texas want copies of the law as a possible for them to follow. Sat. 2-7-48

His amendment requires prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" any part of the U. S. constitution to the satisfaction of county registration boards. It also repealed a constitutional provision that any person with $300 worth of taxable property could vote whether they could read or write.

Talmadge Devises Ways To Block Negro Voting

Daily World (34e)

Alabama's infamous "Boswell Amendment" which requires voters in that state to "understand and interpret" the state and federal constitutions to the satisfaction of local registrars has been advocated by Herman Talmadge as a device and subterfuge to prevent Negroes from voting in Georgia elections. Such an amendment has been termed as the only avenue open to circumvent a ruling of U. S. District Judge J. Waites Waring and U. S. Court of Appeals which outlawed the South Carolina Primary Plan last week. Wed 1-7-48

Such an amendment is termed the last barricade of "White Supremacy" as it would work as to bar Negroes from elections here in the state. Atlanta Ga.

Negro Democratic leaders in Georgia are expected to offer resistance to such a plan. Headed by Atty. A. T. Walden, the Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic Clubs, are meeting in Macon, Ga., today and high on the agenda for discussion, is expected to be outright opposition any changes in present vote laws.

Commenting on the proposal for a change in Georgia's vote laws Atty. Walden termed "The Boswell amendment, and anything like it is nothing less than a subterfuge equivalent to the white primary. We are confident it will receive the same judical condemnation."

In an interview with the Associated Press forecast that the issue of white supremacy would be intensified by the ruling of the U. S. Court of Appeals' ruling, Mr. Talmadge expressed a view that the ruling "interfered" in state affairs.

Talamdge is quoted as saying:

"I believe that 85 or 90 per cent of the white citizens should vote. There [illegible] in our [illegible] counties who can't read or write. But they own their own farms and they do their own thinking."

"I don't think more than 10 or 15 per cent of our Negroes should vote."

The U. S. Court of Appeals ruled when South Carolina sought to bar Negroes from its elections by divorcing primaries from state control:

"No election machinery can be upheld if its purpose or effect is to deny to the Negro, on account of his race or color, an effective voice in the goverment of his country or the state or the community wherein he lives."

Wed 1-7-48

In Alabama, the State Council of NAACP Branches is planning an attack on the Boswell Amendment. Negro leaders are planning to launch a fight on the bill with a suit filed in the state courts, which eventually will be heard by the United States Supreme Court. Alabama NAACP leaders recently held a state convention in Montgomery, Ala., with attorneys present from the national office of the Association. At that time strategic for the NAACP's legal attack on the amendment was completed and action upon the measure in the courts is expected in the near future.

The Negro Voter Looks At the Candidates

Ky. (34e) Courier Journal

WIDE support of the TRUMAN-BARKLEY ticket by Negro voters is indicated by an editorial in this week's issue of The Louisville Defender. A few days ago a similar endorsement of the Democratic candidates was given by The Chicago Defender, one of the largest Negro newspapers. Fri 7/23/48

"In the face of losing the white supremacy boys," said the Louisville weekly, "the President has reaffirmed his stand on civil rights . . . We support TRUMAN not only for what he has done but for what he is fighting for. Coupled with him is Senator BARKLEY who has been our standard bearer through the years. They represent democracy, progress and hope . . . HENRY WALLACE so far as we are concerned does not even offer promise." 7/23/48

The Negro citizen is wise who sees the best hope of accomplishment to lie within the two-party system. Fringe parties are futile. They offer a means to indulge emotions without a chance of practical action. They are too often moved into doubtful associations by vengefulness, or by an impulse of rebellion for rebellion's sake rather than for principle's sake.

There Is A Solution To The Negro Voting Problem

W. D. Workman, roving correspondent for the Charleston News and Courier, was talking sound commonsense in his speech to the Columbia Rotary club, even if he was not talking for The News and Courier, which by its own confession rarely finds itself on the right side, i. e. in agreement with The Record.

(34e) gen.

The change in the composition of the supreme court of the United States, Mr. Workman pointed out, has changed the court's thinking on primary elections and the courts now have held that Negroes are entitled to participate in primaries in Texas, Georgia, Louisiana and South Carolina.

Some in the South may not like it, but this is the law. The sensible thing is to recognize it. And it would have been still more sensible to have anticipated the decisions as anybody could have and some few South Carolinians did. But the Democratic (Politicians') party in South Carolina had to learn things the hard way. It could have profited by being generous; instead it made a fight of it and it is still fighting, but it is only a rear guard action. Wed.

This logic Mr. Workman recognizes. "It seems inevitable," he said, "that racial barriers no longer will be allowed to exclude Negroes from party membership. Even if this were not obvious, it seems undersirable, from my point of view, to drive the Negroes into another party, whether it be the Republican party, the Progressive Democratic party, the Wallace party or any other. The white people of South Carolina, from considerations of fact as well as of principle, should not let their actions force Negroes into a color-conscious bloc of voters, responsive to rabble-rousers and demagogs who would seek to arouse them, no less than others have sought to arouse whites over the same race questions. 9-22-48

"I say remove the racial barriers which now prohibt Negroes from membership. And I say, most important of all, require all party members, whether black or white or otherwise, to hold certain educational qualifications or to own a certain amount of property. Columbia S.C.

"As a matter of principle, the same tests would apply to everyone and would be objective, impersonal tests. As a practical matter, the imposition of such qualifications would insure the continued management of party and political affairs in the hands of qualified white persons at least through an extended period of adjustment. At the same time it would give the Negroes a factual goal to aim at in preparing themselves for the full and complete participation in party affairs they are now clamoring for."

This is precisely The Record's position, championed ever since the Smith v. Allwright decision made it clear that the days of the white primary were numbered.

It plots a course, which, The Record believes, can lead to the end of appeals to race prejudice in political campaigns, to the restoration of interracial amity such as used to be enjoyed in South Carolina. 9-22

And if The News and Courier had been as wise as its Mr. Workman, from The Record's point of view of course, South Carolina might already be on the road to better race relations and better politics, divorced from the racial issue.

Three Out Of Eight Don't Vote

(From The Anniston Star) Ala

One of the greatest weaknesses of American democracy is to be found in a deplorable situation wherein three out of every eight persons in this country, listed in the 1940 census as potential voters, do not exercise the voting franchise, and, according to reliable studies, the vast majority of those voteless Americans are self-disenfranchised.

Even within the ranks of organized labor, where political consciousness is supposed to be cultivated, there is evidence to indicate that of 16,000,000 union members, only 6,000,000 or so are active voters. When the American Federation of Labor undertook to poll its rank and file on their attitude toward the Taft-Hartley act, its weekly newspaper carried a convenient ballot for the reader to clip, mark and mail back to AFL headquarters, and the result, it seems, was something of a shock—not that any large proportion favored the Taft-Hartley act, but rather because the reader response was so slight. Such results do not bespeak a militant, class-conscious body politic whose thinking would produce a powerful impact at the polls. Sept 6-48

But this is not to criticize organized labor, to the exclusion of other segments of our population. For the fact of the matter is that out of 91,700,000 eligible to vote in the 1946 congressional elections, only 34,400,000 showed up at the polls—or approximately 38 per cent of the voters. And the apathy is growing dangerously, year by year.

According to Dr. George Gallup, director of the Public Opinion Institute, a greater proportion of the eligible population voted in the Roosevelt-Taft election than votes today, even though in those days it meant venturing out, like as not, in inclement weather over unimproved roads. When McKinley was reelected over Bryan, 75 per cent of the voters turned out, as compared with only 55 per cent in the last presidential election. Such widespread failure to exercise the voting franchise has the inevitable effect of undermining one of the pillars of democracy.

THE 1936 EGGS HAVE HATCHED

Enterprise Journal

Why is it that the Negro vote in the North is playing such a vital part in the country today? Up until a few years ago the Negro vote was given little consideration. Why this change?

34e McComb

Frank Kent of the Baltimore Sun gives a historical view on this subject. Until 1936 the Negro vote was considered a definite Republican asset. Franklin Roosevelt was rising in power and ex-senator Guffey suggested to Jim Farley that he thought it possible to win the Negroes of Pennsylvania over to the Democratic Party. He outlined a plan. The shrewd and politically astute Jim Farley countered by saying, "If it can work in Pennsylvania it can be made to work in all 10 of the pivotal states."

The proposition was suggested to Franklin Roosevelt and the trick was tried. First a Negro was appointed assistant Attorney General, the highest political job up to that date held by a Negro. (The record of Reconstruction days excluded). Harry Hopkins, head of the relief agencies was told to be liberal with Negroes. The WPA went all out in the drive. Negro districts were given patronage never before dreamed of and Eleanor Roosevelt was photographed with Negro college groups and the photographs were reproduced and distributed by the thousands.

McComb, Miss.

In the following election the Democrats won 90% of the Negro votes . . . . And the suave Mr. Roosevelt, backed by a Democratic majority in the senate kept the campaign promises (F.E.P.C. et al) from becoming law. Mr. Roosevelt was fostering two opposite political policies at the same time. He was cooperating with the White South on the one hand and catering to the northern Negroes on the other.

Jour. 8-5-48

Since Mr. Roosevelt's death two things have happened: (1) The Negro politicians have become demanding and these demands require performance. (2) The Republicans have gained control of Congress and the Democratic senators have little hope of indefinitely postponing the so-called civil bill of rights which is the outgrowth of all of this political chicanery.

This is the situation Mr. Truman inherited. Being personally politically ambitious and being trained in machine-type politics, the President has not measured the problem with the rule of statesmanship but instead has applied the rule of expediency. Thus the Democratic Party today finds itself in a predicament which Mr. Roosevelt and Jim Farley surely must have known in the beginning would end in strife and chaos.

Today the Negroes hold the balance of power in 75 congressional districts in 18 Northern and border states. . . .The ultimate outcome of this situation is unknown. Eggs set under the political hen in 1936 have hatched out. It required considerable time for the birds to incubate but the fact remains that the eggs have hatched. This is why the South is so earnestly aroused today.

OUR VOTING RECORD IMPROVES

The Afro American

Dr. Luther P. Jackson of Virginia State College, in a article showing how a half million colored people are now voting in the South points out that sometimes colored people do not vote when they have an opportunity to do so.

He also points out that in Virginia, for example, at least 50 per cent of the colored people who pay poll taxes do not vote.

34e

Frequently, the candidates to be voted for are all white as in South Carolina at the present time, where there are six white candidates for governor, all of them hostile to colored people.

Tues 8-31-48

It takes a strong-hearted patriot to be willing to go to the polls and vote for any one of them.

He says to himself,

"What is the use anyhow?"

There is nothing new about the low percentage of colored votes in the Southern States. It will increase gradually as the years go by and the victors can see increasing benefits for themselves in the franchise.

Baltimore, Md.

The white people in all of the State put up 99% of the candidates and look for 99% of the jobs with all the cash value trimmings that go along with a political victory and yet, it costs a strong political organization millions of dollars in campaign expenditures every year in order to get 25% of the white voters out for primary elections.

While there is still the opportunity for voters to write in the names of choices which may not appear on the ballot, many hesitate to do this for the same reason mentioned above.

But it won't take long for politically-conscious people to come up with some candidates of their own. This will compel the whites to put up candidates of higher quality if they hope to woo away any votes which might otherwise go to a colored candidate.

Afro 8-31-48

This is why the South's white machine politicians have been so reluctant to grant full use of the ballot to all citizens, irrespective of race or creed. They may well tremble now as they see the handwriting of thousands of new voters on the ballot. Their days are numbered.

Negroes Hold Crucial Vote

34e gen

Defender

The rise of the American Negro to political maturity and power, with allegiance chiefly to the Democratic party, has been the outstanding political development of the past four years.

Sat 10-30-48

In the South, where the Negro has been discounted as a factor in the one-party, lily-white system, the decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court have qualified an estimated 2,000,000 new voters to participate in the coming election. The present court is composed of men who are liberals by conviction, and New Dealers by alignment, all of whom have been appointed by the late President Roosevelt and President Truman.

Chicago Ill

Will Reap Harvest

They have consistently ruled against the strategems and devices of the Dixie demagogues designed to prevent Negroes from taking an effective part in the political life of the South.

34e

The old line Democratic party now stands to reap the reward for enfranchisement of Negroes, through their support in the states where the Dixiecrat insurgents and the heavily financed GOP are seeking to make inroads.

In the 17 northern and border states which normally determine victory in the national elections, Negro voters have risen to new power. Where no vote restrictions ever existed, the number of Negro votes has been swelled in the metropolitan centers of Illinois, Ohio, New York, Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania and Maryland by the mass migrations from the South to war plants and new industries during the early '40's.

Residential restrictions have forced them into solid areas, and new leaders have arisen, to build up independent political units which cannot be bought by a few minor jobs or the dispensing of patronage or "protection."

Sat 10-30-48

Balance Of Power

The big city Democratic machines have welcomed the solid support of Negro voters. In exchange they have more and more admited Negro politicians to the inner party councils, where they have exchanged support on election day for pledges of new opportunities, more and better political appointments, and a fairer deal for Negro citizens generally.

The opening of the way to the polls for Negroes in the South, and the growth of political power and strength of Negro voters in the northern and border states, gives the colored citizens a decisive part, a sort of "balance of power" in determining victory in the presidential and congressional elections next Tuesday.

Truman Is Conceded Negro Vote

34e gen

Defender

Sat 11-30-48

With one of the most crucial presidential elections in the nation's history only hours away, two facts emerge on which politicians, pollsters, columnists and editorial writers of every political complexion agree.

Chicago Ill

First, registered Negro voters numbering close to 5,000,000 will turn out in unprecedented numbers to vote Tuesday in all sections of the country.

Second, Negro voters, North and South, will throw their support almost solidly behind President Harry S. Truman and the whole slate of regular Democratic candidates.

"President Truman will get more Negro votes on Nov 2 than any presidential candidate in history," declared Congressman William L. Dawson, as he sparkplugged a state-wide Democratic rally last week at the Morrison Hotel.

May Outpull FDR

Newsmen and political wiseacres all over the country agree with Dawson, that the total of Negro citizens who will cast their vote for Truman will exceed those cast even for the late President Roosevelt.

34e

The "all out" support of Truman by Negroes is predicted upon the fact that his frank and straight-forward program for civil rights has captured the aspiration and imagination of the nation's colored population.

Building on the foundation of social legislation pioneered by FDR, President Truman has been more outspoken and more specific than any other president in detailing his plans for a national program by which Negro Americans shall attain full first-class citizenship status.

Sat 10-30-48

Party Adopts Program

His own commitments on fair, equal and impartial treatment for ALL Americans, regardless of race or color, were incorporated in the Democratic party platform at Philadelphia last summer, literally "over the dead bodies" of reactionary southern demagogues.

To the Negro voters, President Truman and the Democratic party, is on record both for promise and performance. He has fought for federal anti-lynch legislation; he has fought against the poll-tax; he has fought for the elimination of discrimination in interstate travel and government employment.

He has acted to bring about the end of segregation and discrimination in the armed forces. He has pledged himself to the passage of a federal fair employment practice law. His pledges carry great weight with the Negro voters because of the President's record of past performance.

Tried, True, Truman

In addition to the Truman program on human and citizenship rights which have a special appeal to Negro voters as Negroes, his general, social and welfare and economic programs appeal to them as working class Americans.

Extended social security benefits, increase in the minimum wage from the present 40-cent level to 75 cents per hour, federal aid for slum clearance and low rental housing, the development of a national health program, steps to curb high prices are all close to the hearts of Negro voters. They have to do with living and making a living.

On all these points the Negro voter knows where Truman and the regular Democratic congressional candidates stand. From the Republicans these questions have been met with vague promises or stony silence.

In the staunch belief that "tried and true Truman" offers a safer bet than a "doubtful Dewey" any day in the week, Negro voters are working tirelessly for his re-election.

Georgia County Tests Negro Voters

The Black Dispatch

34e

GRIFFIN, Ga. — (ANP) — Negro voters in Spaulding county are being tested to prove whether they are qualified to vote. They are appearing before the Spaulding county board of registrars to make their proofs.

The voters are being subponaed to the board through the sheriff's office. The questioning involves 1,500 registered colored voters. Of 77 persons called before the board on its first, 19 failed.

Sat 8-7-48

According to R. L. Addleton of the board of registrars, subpenas are issued only if "there are any doubts" about qualifications.

Negro citizens have hired two Atlanta lawyers, S. S. Wallace and Frank Bowers, to represent them before the board.

The Negro Prefers Truman

(The New Republic)

34e

Negro voters more than justified the increased voice in Democratic Party affairs their leaders are now demanding for them. Final returns from the Negro centers of Negro population show that in spite of concentrated Wallace-party appeal for their votes, Negroes backed Harry Truman as strongly as they ever backed Franklin Roosevelt.

The pattern of Negro votes nationally ran better than 75 per cent for Truman. In Negro wards in Philadelphia, Chicago and Pittsburgh, the public preference of Truman in Philadelphia cast their ballots for Truman. City Magistrate Joseph Rainey, the Negro who led Wallace's local campaign, running in a district which has 131,000 votes (51 per cent Negro), polled only 5,400 votes in all, only 2,400 of which, it is estimated, were Negro votes. Rainey's own home ward gave him 430 votes out of 15,000. Only 32 of the 900 voters in his own local division supported the Wallace leader.

Chicago's second ward, where Representative William Dawson (slated to become the first Negro Committee Chairman in the new Congress) is committeeman, gave Truman more votes than did any other ward in the city.

Dawson himself received 92,000 votes on the Democratic ticket to 5,000 for the Progressive Party candidate the Wallace forces had backed with all their might. Seventy-five per cent of the Negro vote in Pittsburgh went to Truman, local officials estimate, while only 2 per cent fell into the Wallace column. The practically all Negro hill district gave Wallace 300, Dewey 3,000 and Truman the remainder of its 9,000 votes.

Even in California, the picture was the same. The West Coast Daily Worker (People's World) had to report "that sampling of precincts in the bay area indicated that Negro voters piled up heavy pluralities for Harry Truman, shunned Henry Wallace and all but ignored Thomas Dewey."

In Harlem the vote was 90,000 for Truman, 25,000 for Dewey, and 21,000 for Wallace.

For steadfast devotion, in the face of every temptation to desert, the Negro people deserve the best the Democratic Party has to give.

INDIANS GAIN A VICTORY

Afro American

While the Dixiecrats have been trying to split the Democratic Party, largely because of President Truman's civil rights program, two recommendations of the President's committee regarding another minority group have already been fulfilled.

34e Sat 8-21-'48

A special Federal court has declared unconstitutional a provision in the New Mexico Constitution which deprived Indians of the right to vote and a 20-year-old ruling of the Arizona Supreme Court has been reversed permitting reservation Indians to vote.

Baltimore Md.

These rulings, which came without any fanfare or other demonstrations, removed, once and for all, the remaining abridgements of suffrage which have plagued the nation's Indians.

How simple it would be for Dixie to accept graciously the request that it accord civil rights to all of its citizens. The money, time and energy expended in resisting the program could be utilized to much better advantage for all concerned.

The pattern of Negro voting nationally ran better than 75 percent for Truman. In Negro wards in Philadelphia, Chicago and Pittsburgh, the public preference of Truman to Wallace was overwhelming. Nine out of every 10 Negro voters in Philadelphia cast their ballots for Truman. City Magistrate Joseph Rainey, the Negro who led Wallace's local campaign, running in a district which has 131,000 votes (51 percent Negro), polled only 5,400 votes in all, only 2,400 of which, it is estimated, were Negro votes. Rainey's own home ward gave him only 430 votes out of 15,000. Only 32 of the 900 voters in his own local division supported the Wallace leader.

New York N.Y.

Chicago's second ward, where Representative William Dawson (slated to become the first Negro committee chairman in the new Congress) is ward committeeman, gave Truman more votes than did any other ward in the city. Dawson himself received 92,000 votes on the Democratic ticket to 5,000 for the Progressive Party candidate the Wallace forces had backed with all their might. Seventy-five percent of the Negro vote in Pittsburgh went to Truman, local officials estimate, while only two percent fell into the Wallace column. The practically all-Negro hill district gave Wallace 300, Dewey 3,000, and Truman the remainder of its 9,000 votes.

Even in California, the picture was the same. The West Coast Daily Worker (People's World) had to report that a sampling of precincts in the bay area indicated "that Negro voters piled up heavy pluralities for Harry Truman, shunned Henry Wallace, and all but ignored Thomas E. Dewey.

In Harlem the vote was 90,000 for Truman, 25,000 for Dewey and 21,000 for Wallace.

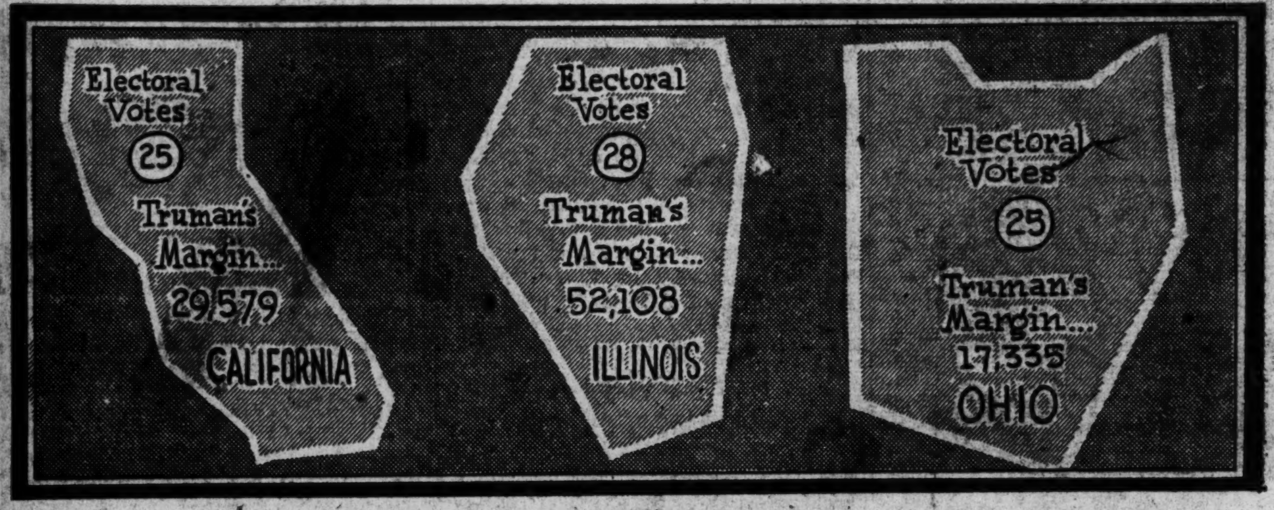
For steadfast devotion, in the face of every temptation to desert, the Negro people deserve the best the Democratic Party has to give.

Race Ballots in Illinois, California and Ohio Put Truman in Win Column



Negro votes in these three key States proved the key to the re-election of President Truman

EDITOR'S NOTE: John Clark, The Pittsburgh Courier's political analyst and writer of this story, is one of the few men who predicted that Ohio and Illinois, two of the most important States in the Nation in the Electoral College, would go to President Harry S. Truman. In the following story he points out clearly the fact that the Negro vote was a decisive factor in swinging the election into the Democratic column. He also called the turn on six Democratic nominees for the U. S. Senate.

By JOHN L. CLARK, Political Analyst, Pittsburgh Courier.

The Negro vote in three key States swung the Democrats into the victory column on Tuesday, Nov. 2. These three States were:

1. Illinois, with twenty-eight votes; 2. Ohio, with twenty-five electoral votes, and 3. California, with twenty-five electoral votes.

A shift of only 51,000 Negro votes in these three States would have reduced President Truman's winning margin of 99,022 popular votes to less than one-half of that number. Governor Dewey naturally would have gained in the shift. If that had happened the President would have finished the race with seventy-eight less than his present 304 electoral votes for a losing total of 226. Governor Dewey's 189 total in the Electoral College implemented by the seventy-eight electoral votes thus gained, would have produced a winning total of 267 . . . one more than the needed majority.

Here are the total votes, the Truman majority, the Negro vote and the Negro percentage for Truman in the three States mentioned above:

CALIFORNIA

Truman Vote	1,875,345
Dewey Vote	1,845,766
Total Vote	3,731,111
Truman Margin	29,579
Negro Vote	100,000
Truman Vote (est.) ..	70,000
Dewey Vote (est.) ..	30,000
Truman Margin	40,000

ILLINOIS

Truman Vote	1,980,872
Dewey Vote	1,928,764
Total Vote	3,909,636
Truman Margin	52,108
Negro Vote	119,512
(3 Chicago wards on South Side)
Truman	85,262
Dewey	34,250
Truman Margin	51,012

OHIO

Truman Vote	1,459,896
Dewey Vota	1,442,561
Total Vote	2,902,457
Truman Margin	17,335
Negro Vote	200,000
Truman	130,000
Dewey	70,000
Truman Margin	60,000

These unexpected figures were revealed in a political survey conducted by the Los Angeles, Chicago and Cleveland offices of The Pittsburgh Courier.

Figures used in State compilations are based on the latest unofficial election returns.

While it has long been recognized that the Negro holds the balancing vote in many States, it has also been charged that the race seldom exercised that advantage.

DECISIVE ROLE

The results reported above prove without a doubt that in the recent election, Negroes joined with organized labor and the women of the Nation to make their ballots count decisively in these three States.

Sat 11-13-48

The Negro vote played decisive roles also in West Virginia, according to a report received from I. J. K. Wells, editor of Color magazine, but it was in California, Ohio and Illinois that the margin was so very pronounced. In these three States, where the total Negro vote was 419,000, their votes swept Mr. Truman into office.

The political preference of the Negro before the election was just as baffling as that of other races. An expressionless silence, which started early in the year and lasted until the polls closed, left the impression that Negroes, like all other voters interviewed by samplers of opinion, "were ready for a change." That was not the case. Much of the story, however, did not leak out until after the results were announced last Wednesday.

From this writer's viewpoint it seems to have been a case of not liking Governor Dewey less, but liking President Truman more. As reasons were unfolded gradually it was learned that a few Negroes who belonged to the trade union movement were opposed to the Taft-Hartley Law.

But most of them forgot about that issue. The issue was complicated, too hard to understand and as they viewed it, the law had not made working conditions any worse for them.

But they were determined to back up Mr. Truman's position on civil rights. They weren't too sure about his sincerity when he appointed his Civil Rights Commission.

They still had doubts when he urged that the report of this commission be enacted into law. They still thought he might have been a Missouri hypocrite at the Philadelphia Convention when Mayor Humphries of Minneapolis, Minn., demanded a "spelled-out" plank on civil rights in the Democratic platform.

Sat 11-13-48

HE CONVINCED 'EM

They became convinced, however, that he was no run-of-mind Democrat when he refused to back down after Mississippi and Alabama walked out of the convention. The clincher came in the unusual move Mr. Truman made in calling Congress into a Special Session to find out if the Republicans meant what they said in their June platform. Civil rights legislation, public housing, and price control were included in his message to the law-makers of the Nation at that time.

What the special Congress did NOT DO about civil rights moved the Negro voters closer to Mr. Truman. When the President refused to bow to the wishes of Negro-hating States like South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana, and set out to campaign with these States against him, no amount of persuasion could convince the Negro that President Truman was not the greatest champion of minority rights to come along since Abraham Lincoln.

Negroes waved no flags. Negroes took no part in loyalty parades. Negroes (aside from the professional politicians) did no talking in public. But they surprised election officials all over the country by going to the polls early on election day and voting for the man whom they thought would serve their best interests.

BASIC ISSUES

The conduct of the Republican Eightieth Congress and Dixiecrat party made Mr. Truman the standout candidate for Negroes on equal rights. But other issues in his campaign were also appealing. The present cost of butter, hams, steaks and other foodstuffs; Federal low-cost housing for families unable to pay higher rents than those charged in slum areas; Federal program for more school teachers and assistants to those seeking education; increased social security payments and assistant to the agent—these issues reached into the lives of Negroes of all walks of life and, particularly those with low incomes. As election day neared these issues, with Mr. Truman's position on civil rights always in the forefront, sealed the determination of Negroes to vote Democratic.

The interest of the Negro voter was never higher. According to reports his voting was never more concentrated.

From Chicago, Joseph D. Bibb thus reports: "Despite predictions of Chicago Republican bosses in the heavy voting colored communities, the ballot cast for President Truman and the Democratic party assumed landslide proportions.

"In the famous old Second Ward, from whence came ex-Congressmen Oscar DePriest, Arthur W. Mitchell and the present incumbent William L. Dawson, Truman received 30,718; Dewey, 12,295 and Wallace, 133.

"In the Third Ward, (95 per cent Negro) Truman, 26,841; Dewey, 11,457 and Wallace,

"In the new Twentieth Ward (98 per cent colored) Truman, 26,703; Dewey, 10,498 and Wallace, 284.

"The same pattern and percentage prevailed in the Fourth and Fifth Wards where many colored voters live. In scattered districts on the far South Side, the near North Side and the West Side, the colored electorate stumped for the Democratic ticket religiously."

TELLS THE STORY

Negro voters should do well to remember that Mr. Truman's margin in the entire State of Illinois was 52,108. Mr. Truman's margin in three colored Chicago districts was 51,012. That, we think, tells the story of Illinois.

Albert J. Dunmore, representing the Ohio office, gives this information: "The seven large urban centers of Ohio, including Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Toledo, Akron, Youngstown and Dayton voted better than three-to-one for Mr. Truman in the Negro districts. In Cleveland, where the Negro vote went heavily for Mr. Dewey in the 1944 election, the vote went three-to-one this year for Mr. Truman.

Out of some 200,000 Negro votes cast throughout the State, more than 130,000 went in the Democratic column. A complete breakdown will not be available for another week. For this reason, The Courier had to depend on estimates arrived at through careful checks with both Republican and Democratic leaders and available precinct returns used as an average.

CLEVELAND DEMOCRATIC

In Cleveland, out of an estimated 45,000 Negro votes, 32,000 were cast for the Democratic candidate. Most important of the trend in Ohio was the heavy Truman vote in Cincinnati, home baliwick of Senator Robert A. Taft. This vote came largely from the Negro wards. It has been conservatively estimated that some 15,000 out of a possible 25,000 Negro vote total in Cincinnati went for Truman. Precincts in the teaming Sixteenth Ward, heart of Cincinnati's West Side, turned in results like this:

Truman	207
Dewey	64
Truman	257
Dewey	62

In Columbus, the State capital, 12,000 out of the 18,000 votes went to Truman.

In Akron, in the Twenty-sixth Ward alone where most Negroes live, the vote was: Truman, 7,091; Dewey, 2,380, and Wallace, 358.

In the Canton-Alliance-Massilon area the count was Truman, 9,000; Dewey, 3,000.

A report form Atty. Maynard Dickerson, Mahoning County, Youngstown reads as follows: "The total registered vote is 99,782; 10 per cent of this vote is Negro. Out of sixteen precincts heavily populated by Negroes in Youngstown, 88 per cent of the popular vote went for President Truman, which made Mahoning County the strongest Democratic county north of the Mason-Dixon line and east of the Mississippi River."

Hill's California report is incomplete. But he points out that "Byron Rumford became the first Negro Assemblyman from Berkeley, polling 28,494 votes to 13, 594 for his Republican opponent, Edgar S. Hurley. Throughout the State, it was noted that the Republican party lost ground among colored voters. In and around the San Francisco-Oakland area, where the bulk of colored voters residing in Northern California live, it was noted that these voters abandoned the GOP, remained true to the Democrats and sprinkled a few votes to the Wallace-powered IIP."

WINNING MARGINS

The following figures show the winning margins, Negro and electoral votes, in the three States where a shift of the Negro vote could have changed results of the entire election:

	Truman's Margin	Negro Vote	Shift Needed to Change Results	Elect. Votes
Calif.	29,579	100,000	15,000	25
Illinois	52,108	150,000	27,000	28
Ohio	17,335	130,000	9,000	25

Dixie Negro Vote Aided Truman Win

(Pittsburgh Courier Press Service)

An endless stream of loyal Negro Democrats who cast their ballots for the man who spurred their hopes to heights on his civil rights program, threw a complete checkmate on Dixiecrat inroads against President Truman in eight Southern States in last week's elections. Their votes helped nullify the rebel votes and carried Mr. Truman to victory.

Had it not been for chicanery the Negro voters of four other Southern States would also have counteracted the Dixiecrat votes there as well. Mr. Truman was not on the ballot in Alabama, but the eight Dixie States in which the Negro vote solidly backed Truman to victory carried a total of 100 electoral votes and the President got them all.

Those eight States were: North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia, Florida, Texas and Arkansas.

"DIRTY" TACTICS

Dixiecrats put their race-baiting program over in Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana and in South Carolina, where "dirty" tactics were charged against Negro voters at the polls.

342

Chief offense in South Carolina was the palming off to Negro voters of the Dixiecrat ballot whenever the voter asked for the Democratic ballot. Hundreds of Negroes thus voted for Thurmond—by mistake. Nevertheless, Mr. Truman received 30,498 votes, as against 89,400 for Thurmond, and most all of the Truman votes came from Negro Democrats.

The tenor in South Carolina, as expressed by 89-year-old H. B. Sharon of Horry County, who gave $5 for the Truman campaign, held good for most Southern Negroes. Mr. Sharon said: "I am a Truman man. I want to stand by the man who stands by me."

Sat 11-13-48

VIRGINIA FOR HARRY

Heavy Negro voting, plus labor support, plunged solidly behind Mr Truman, although there was plenty of vote-splitting in the State of Virginia.

In many precincts with a high Negro registration, the Presidency vote went to Mr. Truman, but in Congressional races, voters chose two Republicans in Richmond; Truman led Dewey 4 to 1, and GOP Congressional candidates led the Democrats 6 to 1 in the same boxes.

City Councilman Oliver W. Hill, Attorneys Martin A. Martin and Spottswood Robinson III, Drs. J. M. Tinsley, T. H. Henderson, Harry T. Penn and Leon A. Reid, Messrs. J. Rupert Picott and W. Leslie Banks constituted the Democratic leaders in this area.

TWO-TO-ONE IN GEORGIA

An overwhelming majority of some 80,000 Negro votes in Georgia were cast for President Truman who outrode Governor Dewey two-to-one in several Atlanta precincts. For example in precinct 3-B, located at E. R. Carter School, the totals showed 1,504 for Truman and 656 for Dewey.

Henry Wallace's slate got less than 200 votes from predominantly Negro Atlanta precincts and figured small in the State vote. Reports were that most officials refused to count votes cast for Larkin Marshall, Progressive candidate for the United States Senate.

Atty. A. T. Walden, noted NAACP lawyer, headed Georgia's Negro Democrats and marshalled their votes for the President.

Sat 11

SEVEN-TO-ONE IN TEXAS

Negro Texans, too, registered their approval of Mr. Truman with overwhelming support.

In Precinct Six (almost solidly Negro) in Dallas, the voting machine at the Moorland Branch YMCA registered 1,504 votes for the Presidency. Of this number 1,285 were for Truman, 180 for Dewey, thirteen for Thurmond and twenty-six for Wallace. Of the total in five precincts in which Negroes were represented, predominantly in two, Truman got 3,726 votes to Dewey's 573.

In Houston's Precinct 161 of the Fifth Ward, Mr. Truman got 620 votes to Mr. Dewey's forty-four. Not one vote was cast for Thurmond. This was a predominantly Negro precinct. It was the same throughout Texas.

Without that support, which The Courier had predicted the week before election, the Dixiecrat vote would have cut deeply into the figure which was finally registered for Mr. Truman.

And the South's Negro Democratic leaders say they intend to press for even greater strength within the party in years to come.

Dawson Points to Big Lead in Five States

342

CHICAGO — The overwhelming total piled up by colored voters in five crucial States was a heavy contributing factor to President Truman's victory, believes Cong. William E. Dawson (Dem., Ill.) who managed the Democratic campaign among minority voters.

Baltimore, Md.

Rep. Dawson in an exclusive statement to the AFRO late Wednesday, pointed to the fact that colored people in Illinois, Ohio, Missouri, Indiana and California gave more than 80 per cent of their votes to the Democratic standard-bearer.

"I believe," he said, "that no one can question the fact that colored voters are responsible for Mr. Truman seizing the lead in these traditional Republican strongholds.

"Their vote was a clear indication of their deep appreciation for his civil rights program and the courage and steadfastness with which he has supported it."

Turning to the new Democratic-controlled 81st Congress scheduled to convene Jan. 20, Mr. Dawson predicted that the civil rights program will get prompt attention. He expressed the belief that here would emerge a new coalition of liberal Democratic and Republican congressmen as contrasted to the old gangup of conservative Republican and reactionary Southern Democratic members.

Sat 11-13-48

"I feel that President Truman and the Democratic party now have a clear mandate from the people to promote human rights as against property rights. It certainly marks a new attitude of the nation's voters toward our people.

"The Democratic party now stands purged of those elements which so long have stood in the path of our fight for first-class citizenship. But, too, it must be borne in mind that all the gains we have made during the last 16 years have been under Democratic leadership."

Congressman Dawson was returned to his Congressional seat from Illinois's wealthy first district for his third consecutive term by a majority of more than 40,000 over his Republican opponent, William King.

VOTE IN NORTH ATCHED GREEDILY

By RADFORD MOBLEY

The Commercial Appeal-Chicago Daily News Service, Copywright 1948

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Republicans and Democrats are watching the negro registration in the large pivotal states this year.

It is too early, strategists on both sides say, to predict how the negro vote, several million strong in the key states, will go.

Sep 9-13-48

But the Democrats say it will stick with their party. Republicans are confident it will swing to them this time. Henry Wallace's Progressives are counting on a heavy negro vote.

Memphis Tenn

Tendency Toward G. O. P.

Recent political history shows that the negro vote, once overwhelmingly for President Roosebelt, has shown a tendency to return to the Republican fold.

In 1944, there was a swing back to the Republican banner in negro registration although it is questioned whether a majority of the negroes actually voted Republican that year, which saw President Roosevelt win again.

In 1938, the Democrats won New York state with the aid of the huge negro vote in Harlem. Since that time Harlem has shifted in state elections and Governor Dewey has had no great difficulty in defeating his rivals.

Important in 16 States

In such pivotal states as New Jersey, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, and Pennsylvania, political experts say that in most recent elections a majority of negroes have registered Republican. Some of them are willing to stick out their necks and say the trend will continue this year.

The negro vote is highly important in at least 16 Northern states. Some experts say the balance of power lies there. They believe a negro vote cast overwhelmingly on one side or the other could influence 200 electoral votes, and it takes only 266 to win.

If there is a swing to the G.O.P. in the negro vote, why is it? Old-time politicians say:

(1) The negro, like every other citizen, is influenced by the urge to "make a change," and this may have a considerable affect on all voters during this first postwar national election.

Has Special Complaints

(2) The negro has many special complaints, ranging from Congress' failure to pass a Fair Employment Practices Act to segregation in the Army. He doesn't look too closely at the facts; simply blames nonaction on the Administration in power.

Sep 9-13-48

Both sides agree that the negro vote will be intensively cultivated this year. They also say that it cannot be won by the promise of a few high positions for negroes, or payoffs at election time. This is clearly shown by the pledges made by both parties in their party platforms.

Canvasses are being made of registrations in all states. Results won't be known for a few weeks. But one side or the other will breathe easier when they are in. Five per cent here and 10 per cent there can mean much in a great national election.

NAACP Secretary Unable To Help President Truman

The Nashville Globe
Fri 10-1-48
Nashville Tenn

Colored Leader Who Got Civil Rights Pledge Witnessing Big Drift To Dewey

34e

Washington, D. C.—Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who has hurt its nonpartism policy in politics by trying to deliver the organization's membership to President Truman, has probably saved himself the cost of an abundance of aspirin tablets and a chronic redness of face by getting a Truman appointment to go to Europe to study the "Berlin situation." With a large majority of colored voters safe in the Dewey camp, publicists even more powerful than Mr. White have begun to challenge the partisan releases that White and Co., are sending out from the national NAACP headquarters. They are boasting Dewey as the "man of the hour" for colored voters and also showing that the 80th Congress is nothing like as bad as it is being painted by President Truman and the other New Dealers.

Many white political leaders have been sold an awfully big "bill of goods" by Walter White. They actually have been thinking that one blast on White's bugle horn has been worth a thousand men. They have thought White could deliver the Negro vote for Mr. Truman and it is generally known that Mr. Truman went all out in his espousal of a multiplicity of civil rights proposals, supremely confident that by thus satisfying the demands of Mr. White he could mow down the Republicans in all of the big cities of the North. White cut a big figure at the Democratic National Convention. By a liberal use of money, presumed to be funds of the NAACP, he put big advertisements in the daily papers of Philadelphia, calling cajoling and threatening the delegates, urging them to throw the Southerners out and telling the Southerners, in effect, "I'll be glad when you're gone, you rascals, you."

If Mr. Truman and his aides have not as yet found out that Walter White has little or no control over Negro voters of the nation, they are due for a rude awakening in the closing days of the 1948 presidential and congressional campaigns and also on November 2, when the ballots are counted.

The first of the several stunning blows the Walter White prestige is to receive in this year's campaign came the past week when Mrs. Robert L. Vann, president of the Pittsburgh Courier, threw the support of this powerful and widely read weekly behind Gov. Dewey and the Republicans. The Courier played an important part in the 1946 victory scored by the Republicans in the congressional elections. It had supported Roosevelt in 1932 and in 1936. In changing to Republican, the Courier pointed out that however liberal a Democrat president may be he cannot put his liberal views into laws because reactionary Democrats dominate all of the committees of congress. Nearly every colored leader in the country, except Walter White, has recognized the utter impossibility of Mr. Truman ever getting any civil rights laws passed. But White is as intolerant of Republicans as any Democrat of White's native state of Georgia.

White virtually forced popular William Pickens out of the NAACP several years ago and just recently his dictatorial policies have forced the eminent Dr. W. E. B. DuBois to quit. Still worse for the membership, he has so wasted the organization's money publishing Democratic propaganda in the NAACP bulletin that the NAACP is now in the "red" and has been forced to raise the membership fee to $2.00 instead of $1.00. The expectation is that the membership will fall off greatly unless such changes in the NAACP are forced on Walter White as to get him to resign the secretaryship.

It is expected that both the Afro-American and the Amsterdam News and many other newspapers will join the Repuplican parade this year. It is no secret that these great weeklies carry more weight with the average voter than does the NAACP, as manipulated by Secretary Walter White.

Walter White's office announced last week that it was publishing another voting record of members of the 80th congress, despite the condition of NAACP finances that make such a venture unwise. The publication is "angled" so as to make "good congressmen" out of those who followed the Truman party line and "bad" congressmen out of those who voted for measures not approved by Messers Truman and White.

Shreveport Negroes Vote In Hottest Primary In Years

34e
The Informer
Houston

By JIMMY PERRY

SHREVEPORT, La. — The Negroes of Louisiana and especially in the Northwestern part of the state near Caddo Parish were experiencing just what it felt like to be able to march up to the ballot box with Mrs. Ann and cast their ballot without even so much as glancing back to note white reatction here this week as one of the hottest state primaries got under way since the days of the late Huey Long.

Sat 1-31-48

There was more at stake for the Negroes than just their right to vote It was also deciding their welfare for the next two years Local officers were being installed including the sheriff, which to the Negroes of this second largest Louisiana city, means much. It meant the difference of a wide-open town and a closed one. The winning sheriff was J. H. Flournoy who has been sheriff of Caddo Parrish for the third successive time. He favors the Negro making progress and was the originator of the idea that the Negroes of Shreveport get a colored chapter of the American Legion. After the Legion was formed it was Mr. Flournoy who saw that the charter was granted from the state. For a number of years he has served as chairman of the sheriff organization for the state of Louisiana.

Had the other men in the running for the sheriff won, it is likely that Shreveport would have been wide-open, making it dangerous for decent living people and especially Negroes, who are always the culprit of any happenings in a lily white wide-open town.

In the gubernatorial contest, Earl Long, (Huey's brother) led up to Saturday night by a margin of 110,990. He was running against Sam Jones the present governor, who has never shown any particular favor for Negroes. A hot run-off was in the making, and as soon as it was evident that one was in the offing, Miss Jim Martin, white, of the Caddo Parish registration department stated that over 650 registrations, including transfers had been recorded since last Wednesday, a large number of these Negroes. They are difinitely in the know and are watching the deal go down on this hottest of southern state contests since the Rainey-Jester affair, over in Texas.

Another important office as far as the masses of Negroes were concerned was that of state superintendent of education. In this case, John E. Coxe led all others in this field with an official count of 193,952.

Informer On The Scene Of Action

When Jimmy Perry of the Informer invaded the county offices last Wednesday morning during the height of the voting there was a great staring contest when it was known that a Texas Negro newspaperman was present to watch the carrying out of the voting. Presently Sheriff Flournoy came out, and he had known Perry from the Minden Lynch Case days, and everything was made readily accessible for the Informer to gather statistics.

Earlier in the morning some Negroes claimed that they were facing difficulties in placing their ballots in the boxes, but no evidence of this was found anywhere by reporters.

Many Register Saturday For Run-Off

Houston Texas

The offices of the registrar were packed again Saturday morning with qualified citizens who hope to take part in the coming run-off that is sure to come between Earl Long one time governor and Sam Jones, present governor. State law required all persons who vote in an election to register at least 30 days before the election is held. Sentiment on both sides of the contest was running at fever pitch among whites, who for the first time are finding that a balance of power may swing the election contrary to their wishes. North Louisiana as far as whites go, was always dominantly anti-Long, and this bitterness is spearheaded by the powerful Shreveport Times, a Ewing publication.

Negroes of Caddo Parish weren't doing any loud talking. They were voting and returning to work or home. Negro leaders of the city which included R. L. Williams head of the local chapter of the NAACP were quiet on the elections but stated that they had heard of no trouble among our people getting to the ballot boxes.

Superior Judge Camp Denies U. S. Intervention Right

Atlanta Ga
Sat 6-12-48
34e

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The Department of Justice is studying the findings of agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who have been probing the purging of more than 75 percent of the Negro voters in Laurens County.

Atlanta Daily World

Officials of the Department if evidence warrants, will take the matter before a grand jury, but meanwhile will concentrate their efforts on reopening the polls to the disenfranchised voters in time for the Georgia primary, September 8.

The Department of Justice is studying the alleged purging because federal civil rights laws forbid anyone, under cover of law, to deprive a citizen of rights guaranteed him under the constitution — in this case, the right to vote regardless of race or creed.

ASK U. S. AID

Eight Negro citizens of Dublin, Ga., in petitioning U. S. Judge Frank M. Scarlett at Savannah, Ga., have already asked federal intervention in their behalf because they contend their names were arbitrarily removed from the registration list in an illegal conspiracy that violated the federal constitution.

Judge Scarlett has ordered Laurens Superior Judge Earl Camp, State Rep. Hershel Lovett, and members of the Laurens Board of Registrars and Laurens Board of Commissioners "to show cause" why these names should not be returned to the election rolls, June 26 at 1 a. m. in Brunswick, Ga.

This action was filed in behalf of C. B. Smith, D. B. Cummings, George C. Carswell, George Carswell, Rev. A. L. Brewster, Thomas Coates, Mrs. Anna Clyde Duncan, and Mrs. Sallie Barnett, by Dan Duke, an Atlanta attorney.

Federal action contemplated by the Department of Justice would parallel the reasoning set forth by the Negro plaintiffs.

TURNED IN THURSDAY

The FBI report on the Laurens vote-purge was turned into the Justice Department Thursday. The contents of the report was not disclosed and officials would only comment that the matter is "under consideration."

The investigation was started after reports were called to the attention of the section that a new three-man Board of Registrars had purged 1,700 Negro voters.

Reports to the department said this was done on an allegation that Negroes did not answer summons to show why they should not be dropped from the rolls.

CAMP'S DENIAL

In Dublin, Ga., Superior Judge Earl Camp declared Thursday that federal authorities have no right to investigate the case because the alleged purge complied with the law and is not a "total denial" of an individual's rights.

He contended that Georgia registration and qualification laws had been observed with impartially and without regard to race and that counties have a right to correct and revise voting lists.

He said the voting lists had not been corrected since 1908.

E. S. Baldwin, chairman of the Laurens County Board of Registrars said many more whites than Negroes were served with notices. About 65 per cent of the county's 2,379 registered voters failed to appear.

The government charges that this was illegal since the law states that once having qualified Negroes did not have to go through this process again.

100,000 Carolina Negroes vote to defeat senator

The Los Angeles Tribune
Los Angeles, Calif.

DURHAM, N. C. — An estimated 100,000 Negro votes from all over the state were credited today to the Carolina Times with defeating Senator William B. Umstead, a candidate last week for the United States Senate in this state's Democratic Primary.

346

Getting the nomination, which is tantamount to election in this part of the country, was former Governor J. Melville Broughton. Umstead was defeated by little more than 20,000 votes.

Sat. 6-12-48

The Times said opposition to Senator Umstead crystallized when he openly opposed President Truman's Civil Rights Bill, "but it did not reach such overwhelming proportions until he injected the race issue into the campaign."

Of Broughton, the Times said, "the views of the former governor . . . on the Civil Rights Bill are probably no better, but the mere fact that he kept his campaign on a high plane and refused to inject the race issue into it is evidence that he is a step ahead of the Bilbo type of politician."

5 Southern States Accused; Race Test Outlawed in South Carolina Primary

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26 (AP).—The National Negro Council charged today that 2,000,000 Negroes were denied the right to vote in five Southern states this year and asked a Senate investigation.

Sat-11-27-48

Edgar G. Brown, director of the council, presented petitions for the investigation at the office of Senator William E. Jenner, Republican of Indiana, chairman of the Senate Privileges and Elections subcommittee. Senator Jenner was out of the city, but office assistants said the request is under consideration.

Mr. Brown asked that public hearings be conducted at Birmingham, Ala., Jackson, Miss.; New Orleans, La.; Atlanta, Ga., and Columbia, S. C.

His petition contained a long list of charges that Negro voters had been denied the ballot in both primary and general elections in the five states in violation of Federal laws.

Negro Voters Back Truman As 5,000,000 Go To The Polls

Louisville Defender

Sat-11-13-48

WASHINGTON — The vote of approximately 5-million Negroes who went to the polls on November 2 was one of the decisive factors in winning the political upset scored by President Truman last Tuesday.

Seasoned Negro politicians estimate the Negro vote for Truman to be between 80 and 85 per cent, much of it concentrated in those states which decided the election—Illinois, Ohio, California and Massachusetts.

The Negro vote in such southern states as Arkansas, Georgia, Texas, and North Carolina helped the President pile up the thumping majorities which placed those states in his column. Although the President lost the state of South Carolina, a larger portion of the 2nd and 3rd wards lined up strongly behind President Truman and the entire state and National Democratic ticket sweeping the windy city again into Democratic control.

Negro voters in California, many who are immigrants from the South who have benefitted under the New Deal program, also supported President Truman strongly. The fact that the Negro vote is a concentrated vote, due to enforced patterns of segregated living in most urban communities, makes it a potent political factor in strategic states

Contrary to pre-election claims by certain Progressive Party spokesmen, Henry A. Wallace, the party's Presidential candidate polled a negligible vote among Negroes in Nothern urban communities and practically none at all in the South.

Of the total 1,065,672 votes which the Progressives polled nationally, 507,449. or almost 50 per cent were 30,498 votes diverted from Dixiecrat Presidential candidate Gov. Strom Thurmond was that of Negroes, informed sources inside the states assert. Some 700,000 southern Negroes were qualified to vote in this year's election. This represents an increase of 600 per cent over 1942. This figure is expected to increase to 2,000,000 by 1952.

In Massachusetts, Dr. Silas Taylor, veteran political leader told the Defender that 82 percent of the Negroes in that state cast their vote for President Truman. Mr. Truman carried Massachusetts by 200,864 popular votes winning her 16 electorial votes.

In New York City's four predominantly Negro districts, the 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th gave the President total of 96,686, or approximately 70 per cent of their total vote cast. In each of these districts, Gov. Dewey, Republican Presidential candidate lost by a greater margin than in 1944.

Negroes in Philadelphia gave Mr. Truman a popular vote of 76,166, thereby substantially contributing to his vote majority in this GOP stronghold which he carried by the slim margin of 6,040 votes.

Again we caution that words alone are not enough with which to stem the tide of the defamers and dictators in the South. A thousand voters, of any race, are more important than a billion words. And to Negroes especially, we say that now is the time to prepare to vote, to get themselves on the record as being able to vote; to qualify at county courthouses the first Monday in the month. (April 5).

And we also say again, that once Negroes attain their potential in qualifying, they will shut the mouths of the screaming antagonists who do a disservice to all citizens.

egro Vote And The Presidency

Journal Guide

An Editorial

For years our leaders who had acquired some political acumen have been decrying the impotency of our race at the polling places and pleading for wise and effective use of the ballot. It is just as important this year, in 1948, that the admittedly inadequate voting power of the Negro be employed most expediently, and that our votes be invested so as to produce the greatest return.

34e

On many occasions the Journal and Guide has praised the forward-spoken pronouncements of Mr. Truman in, first, appointing his Committee on Civil Rights; second, giving the committee's report the force of presidential sanction; third, asking Congress first to consider legislation to put into effect the FEPC and the recommendations of that committee, and fourth, taking steps that may ultimately lead to elimination of discrimination and segregation in the armed forces and in federal civil employment.

Sat 10-16-48

It is unfortunate that some of these reforms were not given presidential sanction and put in motion earlier in Mr. Truman's term. He has been President since April, 1945, but not until 1947 did he name the Civil Rights Commission and only in the year of the election did these infringements of the Negro's fundamental rights come under presidential scrutiny.

Norfolk Va.

An official of the Journal and Guide was among a group of Negro newspapersmen who called on Mr. Truman shortly after he succeeded to the office, to lay before him a statement of the civil disabilities of the race. During this White House conference one of the editors suggested to Mr. Truman the wisdom of adding to his official family an accepted Negro leader who could keep him advised on matters affecting this important minority group. Perhaps Mr. Truman misunderstood the suggestion, but his face flushed and very sharply, even curtly, he replied that he would name his own cabinet and advisors and nobody was going to be permitted to tell him who should and who should not be chosen. At that time, Mr. Truman showed no desire or inclination whatsoever to concern his office or his thinking with the problems of the Negro group.

* * * *

Regular Democrats among the white group must view with regret the all-too-frequent recent tendency of their presidential nominee to stoop to demagoguery in his effort to win votes.

If white Democrats have occasion to view this disintegration of high political purposes with regret, Negro Democrats should view it with sobering apprehension. For demagoguery on the loose invariably strikes as its first victim one of the minorities against which the base emotions of the majority most profitably can be set.

This was the case in Germany where the master demagogues of them all. Hitler, for pure political capital, whipped up the emotions of the Aryan majority so scientifically and so cunningly that in the end he set loose his ill-advised followers on one of the bloodiest and most despicable pogroms in the history of man.

Use here of the example of the mad man of Nazism is not intended to imply any parallel in our own political pageant. It was cited as simply an extreme and remindful example of how the devices of a demagogue can be turned tragically against an innocent minority to achieve even unrelated objectives.

In some of his recent campaign appearances, Mr. Truman has been arraying class against class, shouting and creating fears and enmities, and indirectly giving substantial aid to the real enemies of the country by fanning the fires of prejudice.

To be sure, he has not made appeals to race prejudice against the Negro. But teaching the working man to hate the owners of industry, teaching the poor man to hate the rich man, teaching the masses to believe that dire and fearful consequences will result if another political party comes to power, on the one hand, and teaching whites to hate and fear Negroes on the other, are all techniques in demagoguery which are dangerous to the Negro's welfare.

* * * * *

Mr. Truman has not eschewed any expedient, no matter how coarse, which was calculated to seduce a substantial number of votes. This country is made up of many groups, and its economic and social life represent many interests. Yet in the realization that his only possible chance to win the election is in getting the almost solid vote of labor, Mr. Truman, in what we believe may be noted in history as one of the more shameful spectacles involving a President, has thrown himself prostrate at the feet of the bosses of organized labor. He has made a complete capitulation, without reservation. He has acceded to every demand of the labor bosses in this shameful bargain, thereby sacrificing on the altar of political expediency any inconsistent interest of industry, of business and of capital and even of the laborers themselves, as contrasted to the greedy aims of labor bosses, seeking political power rather than the real interests of the working people.

When and if it becomes expedient, Mr. Truman could conceivably just as ruthlessly trade away the interests of the Negro for the support of some other group which he felt was more important.

34e

It will be well for Negroes to remember that it has been in an atmosphere of blind prejudice and fear that the white-shirted knights of the Ku Klux Klan have done their most violent riding. There is a real danger ahead for the Negro when a man who commands a great deal of attention stoops to whipping up ugly prejudices, arraying class against class, and unleashing again the brutal intolerance which the war years had so largely shackled. For the time being the Negro is not an object of the prejudices and fears which the President is turning loose. But that may be only for the time being.

Each four years the American citizen has a vote to invest in the security of his country. Many considerations enter into the decision which determines how that vote is going to be placed. Mr. Truman will long be remembered by all Negroes for his bold championing of the cause of civil rights. But it cannot be said with convincing logic that Mr. Truman's pronouncements, made at a time when they are vulnerable to the charge of political expediency, have thereby taken away from the Negro voter any right to support another candidate.

We admire Mr. Truman for what he said but, on that score, Henry Wallace has been considerably bolder than even Mr. Truman. The Progressive Party's candidate has gone Mr. Truman several times better in saying the nice things that disadvantaged Americans like to hear.

So, if we were obligated to vote on the basis of what the candidates have said, Mr. Wallace would get the nod by a landslide. But Mr. Wallace, when he was in the government, had many opportunities to put his theories of racial justice and equality into practice. When he had the chance he never took advantage of it. In addition, Mr. Wallace's tie in with Russia and the Communists makes support of him unthinkable.

Prudent Negro voters know that they cannot afford to dissipate their political resources by casting (courtesy) votes for either Mr. Wallace or Mr. Truman. The candidate of their choice must pass other rigid tests. If the Negro is to continue his efforts to achieve fuller emancipation during the next four years, he has got to have a sympathetic and a competent government in Washington.

Both Mr. Dewey and the Republican Party are sympathetic. Mr. Truman is obviously sympathetic, but the Democratic Party, with several of its major pillars sunk deep in the South, is not sympathetic. Whether the liberal wing of the Democratic Party would be the dominant one in the event the Democrats were put in power is a highly speculative question. As to competency, it is elementary that a Republican President and a Democratic Congress are not going to get much done for human rights, or for anything else for that matter. A Democratic President and a Republican Congress would be just as impotent.

A Republican President and a Republican Congress would be almost certain to pass constructive legislation affecting the civil rights of all Americans now denied them.

Sat 10-16-48

A Democratic President and a Democratic Congress would bring back to Washington, holding the real reins of government and chairmanships of all congressional committees, the demagogues from the South who, by disfranchising Negro and white voters over a long number of years, have acquired sufficient seniority to preempt all of the strategic positions when the Democrats are in power. The South has made perfectly plain its deplorable position on the question of civil rights. Every intelligent Negro knows that if the Democrats regain control of Congress the whole civil rights program will be scuttled. Even the "regular" Democrats, who for party reasons say they will vote for Mr. Truman, vociferously disavow any favor of the civil rights proposals endorsed by Mr. Truman.

Up to this writing neither the President nor the Democratic Party has disowned any of its southern relatives. The Dixiecrat presidential candidate who bolted the party at its Philadelphia convention is still in good graces with the Democrats. He is still a member of the Democratic Party's national committee. Mr. Truman, in a significant concession to the southern Democrats, did not once mention civil rights on his recent tour to the West Coast and into several southern states.

There are many ways we can show our appreciation for what Mr. Truman has said about our civil rights without being misled by professional partisans into keeping in power the one political force that has for eighty years prevented the Negro race from enjoying most of the fruits of his American citizenship.

Arrangements Made To Prevent Lengthy Standing

Daily World

The campaign to add 15,000 new voters to the Fulton County lists by the deadline May 1, will enter its final stretch this week when registrars from the Fulton County court house will be stationed at the Pollard Funeral Home in Summerhill Thursday evening.

Sun. 4-18-48

Fulton County's registration deadline will remain at May 1, due to a special law enacted by the legislature some time ago. The July 1 deadline which figured in the ruling by Attorney General Cook Friday affects other counties in the state not affected by special laws.

The co-sponsors of the registration drive, the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity and the NAACP's All Citizens Registration Committee, have been unsuccessful in attempts to secure an additional day in which the registrars will appear in the Negro community. Spokesmen for the two groups said they expect several thousand persons to appear for registration during the four hour period from 5:30 o'clock p. m., to 9:30 o'clock p. m., on Thursday, April 22 at the funeral home located at 439 Fraser Street, S. E.

TO AID CROWDS Daily World

In order to prevent anyone from having to stand in a long line, E. A. Pollard stated that arrangements have been made with Rev. W. M. Jackson, pastor of the Bethlehem Baptist Church, located directly across the street, to use the church auditorium for those waiting to be registered. Atlanta, Ga.

Milton White, chairman of the Alpha Phi Alpha civic committee, pointed out that Fulton County residents may register daily at the Fulton County Courthouse until May 1, and DeKalb County residents may register at the Decatur Courthouse until July 1. C. A. Bacote, chairman of the NAACP's All Citizens Registration Committee, suggested that housewives and others able to do so, should register at the courthouse in order to relieve the crowded condition expected at the Pollard Funeral Funeral Home Thursday evening, where those who must come from work will find it convenient to register. Sun. 4-18-48

VOLUNTEERS PRAISED

Clarence Coleman, community secretary of the Atlanta Urban League, and Charles W. Greenlea, secretary of the Fulton County Citizens Democratic Club, who have been coordinating the efforts during the new voters drive, were high in their praise of many volunteers who aided the registrars in adding close to 1,000 new voters last Thursday and Friday at Mt. Olive Baptist Church, Rev. J. W. Weatherspool, pastor; and Antioch Baptist Church, Rev. D. T. George, pastor.

These volunteers included the pastors themselves, Principal C. L. Gideons and students of the David T. Howard High School: Hilda Holt, Norma King, Leroy Powell, Dewey Saunders, Fred Hammonds, Juanita Coffer, Helen Gray, Walter Johnson, Juanita Dixon, Sara Harden and Bessie Merriweather.

Special praise was extended for the fine work of Ralph Mitchell, twelfth grade student at Howard and to Mrs. Frances Burdette, popular young Atlantan matron who has helped throughout the campaign.

342 Ga.

Mrs. A. A. Reid's Business College students, were complimented by C. A. Scott, editor of the Atlanta Daily World, as seeming to him, "the most valuable workers." These students worked in shifts, typing thousands of new voter applications. Those who worked at Mt. Olive and Antioch Churches were: Carolyn Randall, Thelma Goolsby, Louise Thomas, Alma Holt, Eallie Flowers, Gertrude Norman, Gloria Belt and Mrs. Dorothy Smith.

AT ANTIOCH

Many residents of the Herndon Housing Project volunteered their services at Antioch Baptist Church. These included James A. Long, president of the tenants association, Willis Flemming, Mrs. Jimmy Lou Engram, Rev. I. H. Sherman, Mrs Mary Ray, and Misses Aldora Miner and Maudelee Kimble.

Sun. 4-18-48

Additional thanks was given to Principal C. N. Cornell, Director Earl Starling and the Booker T. Washington High School Band, which paraded and rendered a concert in front of Antioch Baptist Church. The Dixie Hills Bus Co. supplied transportation for the band.

Atlanta, Ga.

Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity brothers who have assisted continuously during the registration campaign are: Brady Cooper Jr., J. Stanley Tatum, Thomas Fagan, Pleman Whatley, William Sullivan, R. L. Williams, Elmo Watkins, Buddy Wright, I. H. Burney and Nelson C. Jackson.

Bacote, White, Coleman, and Greenlea, leaders in the campaign, are also members of the Eta Lambda chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc.

Potential Tifton Judgeship Candidate Fears Race Vote

SYLVESTER, Ga.—(SNS)—In a recent letter to the local white press a candidate for the Judgeship of the Tifton circuit threw-up his hands in disgust and apparently in fear of defeat by the Negro vote.

Although his letter did not state his political views, it was clearly written between the lines on what side of the fence he stood. Atlanta, Ga.

Addressing his letter to the "voters of the Tifton Judiciary Circuit," the discouraged political aspirant, C. A. Christian, said he withdrew from the race when a third candidate entered.

He wrote:

"I am fully informed as to the situation in this circuit; there are more than 2500 Negroes registered in the four counties, and while I was considering making this race I did not mention my candidacy to a single colored voter, and if I had made the race I would not have mentioned it to a single one, and if any one of them had voted for me it would have been unsolicited on my part."

Mr. Christian went on to say that the third candidate would split the white vote and in it he saw the possibility of a bloc vote by Negroes and as a balance of power might name the judge of the circuit.

As a "true Southener," Christian continued:

"I hold my honor. Southern chivalry, and the traditions of the South too sacred, for me to do any act which might result in this bloc having the power, dictated to by outside influences . . . I feel called by solemn duty as an American citizen and Southern gentleman to make this decision and decline to make the race in this coming primary."

Georgia Scheme Exposed

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

342

WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga. — Another insidious scheme to keep Negro citizens from voting in the forthcoming primary has been cooked up by Johnson County's Democratic Executive Committee. Sat.

The plan is to demand that voters and candidates sign a seven-point pledge which states that they favor white supremacy, racial segregation and are opposed to communism and the FEPC.

The following pledge will be presented to prospective voters and candidates, according to Committee Chairman W. C. Brinson:

"I favor the white primary.

"I favor preservation of segregation for the races as now exists in Georgia. Sat. 1-31-48

"I oppose communism.

"I oppose any organization that seeks to destroy the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of Georgia.

"I oppose enactment into law the rules and regulations as promulgated by the Federal Employment Practice Committee.

"I will support the nominees of this primary in the general election."

Chairman Brinson emphatically declared that voters must sign the pledge before they will be allowed to cast a ballot. The same pledge must be endorsed by candidates before they can qualify to run, the chairman said. Sat

In former years Georgia's Democratic executive committees have required only a pledge to support nominees as a requirement for primary voting. 1-3-48

Political observers expressed the belief that this new attempt to disfranchise Negro voters is patterned after a system which is being used in Mississippi.

In the Mississippi State, however many Negroes signed up as favoring a white primary last summer in order to avail themselves of the privilege of voting.

Changing Color Of Vote Trends Still Indecisive

Talmadge Issues Overwhelming Victory Statement

On the basis of incomplete returns at 11:30 Wednesday evening, the Associated Press reported Herman Talmadge to be in a commanding lead over his nearest opponent, Governor M. E. Thompson, trailing in the rural counties. Mr. Talmadge, on the basis of 20 completed returns, was reported carrying 15 of these with a unit vote of 36, while Mr. Thompson had 5 counties and 10 unit votes.

But neither side at midnight would concede victory to the other. From Mr. Talmadge's headquarters came the announcement that "Victory is ours. There is no way under the sun for Thompson to win," declared Mr. Talmadge. While from the Thompson headquarters came the announcement that "We still insist that victory will be ours when all the returns are in tomorrow morning, I know that I have been elected Governor and I am going to sit right here until the votes are all in."

In the Lieutenant Governor's race, S. Marvin Griffin had 186 unit votes, thus leading all others by a big margin.

Georgians voted in one of the most hotly contested Democratic primary elections in its history Wednesday, September 8, while several sections of the state reported attempts to intimidate or delay Negro voters. Despite the intimidation efforts, voting by Negroes was heavy along with the white balloting in almost every one of the state's 159 counties.

The Ku Klux Klan, outlawed by the state but operating as an association, reportedly burned fiery crosses election eve night in Valdosta, the home of Governor M. E. Thompson, in the northern part of Bulloch county of which Statesboro is the county seat, and in Houston county near a church and store owned by Negroes. In Bulloch, it was reported that hooded Klansmen placed a small casket on the front porch of the home of a Negro citizen located near a church.

VA[illegible]

Reportedly few Negroes voted at Valdosta, home of the Acting Governor, while there was a heavy white vote. It was assumed that the KKK cross-burning had its effect. Negro voting was heavy throughout the Second and Eighth Districts with the exception of Valdosta and Lowndes County.

In the hometown of Roy Harris, Augusta stalwart of candidate Herman Talmadge, a delaying move was reported. The Augusta Herald charged that election officials of Augusta were allowing Negroes to vote only at the rate of about three an hour by asking foolish questions. A reporter for the Herald said that the long line of Negroes at one voting place did not move an inch in 15 minutes while he watched. He said that a Cracker party election official commented:

"I believe we can kill at least 20 minutes per Negro. That will allow only three to vote each hour. There are going to be plenty of Negroes standing in line when the polls close at 6 P. M."

Some 558 Negro registrants were reported stricken from the Spalding county registration list Tuesday afternoon, one day prior to the election. The Griffin Daily News made the charge, saying that the registrars did not turn the registration list over to election officials until late Tuesday afternoon, so the strikes did not become known until then. A suit has been filed in federal court at Brunswick to prevent the purge of Negro registrants in Spalding county. The Spalding registrants conferred with Judge Frank Scarlett and promised "to abide by the law," so the case was not pushed. The judge said he would keep the action on file in the event another complaint was made.

IRREGULARTIES CHARGED

Irregularities were charged in Fulton and DeKalb Counties, early tabulations being cited.

Talmadge took the lead in early returns of most counties. However, Governor Thompson said he expected this since most early returns came from country precincts. He said he expected to pick up votes in late returns.

S. Marvin Griffin, lieutenant governor running mate of Herman Talmadge, led other candidates in early returns.

Some 142,491 Negroes were registered among the 1,194,453 Georgians eligible to vote in Wednesday's primary.

Reports from Perry, Ga., claimed that two crosses were burned simultaneously in Negro residential sections there Tuesday night. Although one cross was burned within 30 yards of a Negro store, Negroes were said to have not been unduly alarmed. The store remained opened and the Negroes gathered around to watch the fire, reports claim.

The other cross was said to have been burned in the New Home section on U. S. Highway 41. It was burned within 50 yards of a Negro church where services were being held. The services continued without interruption, it was reported. The origin or reason for the burnings could not be accounted for by local residents who explained that only 83 Negroes were registered to vote.

80,000 Atlanta Negro Voters Completely Ignore Wallace

Journal Guide

Sat 11-13-48

By WILLIAM A. FOWLKES

ATLANTA, Ga. — (NNPA) — Nearly complete tabulation from Georgia precincts Thursday reveals that President Harry S. Truman garnered an overwhelming majority of the some 80,000 Negro votes cast in the November 2 general election.

Final returns from Atlanta's Fulton county precincts 3B, 3A, and 5H, predominately Negro areas, showed that Truman accomplished better than a 2 to 1 victory over Republican nominee Thomas E. Dewey. In precinct 3B, located at E. R. Carter School, the total showed 1,504 for Truman and 656 for Dewey.

Norfolk Va

Precinct 3A, located at Walker Street School, showed a Truman total of 330 votes, compared to Dewey's 1281. While at Precinct 5H, located at David T. Howard High School, 682 votes were cast for Truman and 342 for Dewey.

Unofficial tabulation of Negro votes from other Atlanta precincts where whites and Negroes cast votes together showed majorities for Truman.

Negroes braved inclement weather conditions to report to the polling places in Atlanta and over the State. In many areas, officials reported that Negroes were outvoting whites, in relation to total registration.

The Henry A. Wallace slate got less than 200 votes from the predominately Negro precincts and figured small in the total state vote. The States-Righters polled few, if any, Negro votes.

The Republicans had made a real bid for Negro votes in Georgia, but have been fought down to the last campaign day by Democratic stalwarts.

John Wesley Dobbs, Prince Hall Masonic Grand Master and vice chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, conceded defeat with the following statement:

"The majority of citizens of the greatest democracy the world has ever known has spoken. That verdict can not be wrong because the voice of the people is the voice of God."

Sat 11-13-48

Commented Attorney A. T. Walden, president of Georgia Negro Democrats who met Dobbs in a pre-election debate:

"President Harry S. Truman's election conclusively proves two thinks: first, that even in the area of politics the American people admire a man of genuine sincerity who possesses honest convictions which he dares to advocate courageously and unflinchingly in the face of apparently insuperable odds; second, that the people of America believe that the liberal Democratic Party is the guardian of the welfare and liberty of a common man."

The vote purge in Georgia is a camparatively new creation, made famous since the United States Supreme Court decision, opening the primary to Negroes. It was operated to reduce the size and number of Negro voters. So that, to all intents and purposes the purge undertakes to accomplish by indirection what the state could not achieve by direction. Thus, the purge in 1948, like in 1946, is discriminatory in that it centers its attention and interest almost solely upon reducing the Negro vote in the several counties of the state.

Atlanta, Ga. Fri. 7-30-48

The purge was revived on a large scale in January by the Registrars in Lauren County, when over 1,600 Negroes were purged from the voters' list. In Spalding county at Griffin, Georgia and in Dougherty county at Albany, Georgia the purge mania has taken on new life.

The original boards of registrars in these counties, we understand, have elected to quit, rather than yield to the pressure of being forced to conspire in depriving Negroes of their constitutional privileges to vote. Other boards, said to be willing to do the bidding of those who would limit the Negro vote, have been substituted. Negro leaders have declared their determination to stop the purge mania here and now. It appears that there is ample ground on which they can proceed. Discrimination in the purge is clearly and painfully obvious. Negroes, for the most part, refused to answer the Laurens County challenges. In Dougherty county, local Negroes plan to keep their people at home and pay no attention to purge summons. That is precisely what they should do because the method and manner being employed is wholly illegal and Negroes are under no compulsion to answer a subpoena which fails to state the grounds on which he is being challenged. That rule is being flagrantly violated in the Spalding county purge and we hope the remaining Negroes not yet appearing before the board will not do so at all until and unless they state a cause why they are being challenged.

We have had an opportunity to study the questions being asked the Negroes in Spalding county. They are perfectly stupid and have no place in an examination of that sort. Really, what these Registrars are doing is compelling the Negroes to undergo an examination, which is clearly discriminatory.

Fri. 7-30-48

Now is the time to get rid of this highhanded method of dropping Negroes from the registration rolls without reason or rhyme. One sure way that Negroes can stop it is not to answer the subpoenas. They are illegal, conceived in had faith and should be promptly and politely ignored by all Negroes who have met the legal requirements for voting.

Citizens Inconvenienced; Questioning Staggered

Daily World Atlanta Ga.

By C. LAMAR WEAVER

GRIFFIN, Ga.—(SNS)—The wholesale purging of Spalding county Negro voters continued here Thursday as the Board of Registrars resorted to delaying tactics in challenging the 1,500 persons subpoenaed.

Fri. 7-30-48

While the brunt of the mass challenge is suffered by Negroes, the procedure is having far-reaching effects on Spalding county white citizenry. The housewives are finding themselves without maids; farm owners find themselves without farm hands and garbage overflows the trash cans as City Sanitary workers stay off their jobs. The operation of the county is disrupted in general because of the prolonged purge.

208 DISQUALIFIED

Of the 592 persons called for challenge from Monday through Thursday, 208 have been disqualified.

Because of delaying tactics, 206 of the disqualified were stricken from the list for failing to answer their subpoenaes. The other two were disqualified for cause.

All of the suboenaes ordered their receivers to appear before the board at 10 a. m. on Monday. When they jam-packed the courtroom and spilled from the corridors into the streets, the Registrars elected to examine only those persons with last names in the "A", "B" and "C" categories, excusing the others until that afternoon. Faced with the same problem that afternoon, the Registrars announced that all persons with last names in the "K" to "Z" categories could return on the following Monday.

SCHEDULE ESTABLISHED

They later established a daily schedule whereby persons in the "C" and "D" categories would be examined Tuesday; those in categories "E" and "F" on Wednesday, "G" and "H" on Thursday and "I" and "J" on Friday.

Of the 77 persons examined Monday all but 19 were passed as being qualified to vote. Eighteen of the disqualified were absentees. On Wednesday 169 of 418 persons called had been disqualified.

The challenged voters have retained the services of Attorney S. B. Wallace, local lawyer, and Frank Bowers, of Atlanta, to represent them at the hearings.

REGISTRARS' PLAN THWARTED

Atty. Wallace, who attended all of the hearings, said the Registrars had planned to have the voters read and interpret sections of the Constitutions of the United States and Georgia.

Daily World

This plan was not followed through, he said, when it was called to their attention that such did not apply to persons of good character and understanding of the duties and obligations of citizenship under a republican form of government. Under the Georgia code this requirement has precedence over and against the plan entertained by the Registrars, he asserted.

Registrar Howard Mashburn reports nearly 124,000 citizens have registered to vote during the recent registration program in progress until July 1. Figures show that 2,000 more voters have qualified to vote in the coming primary than last year.

Sat. 4-17-48

Registrars from the county court house were on hand Friday at Antioch Baptist Church to register Negro voters. Pollard's Funeral Home, 439 Fraser Street, S. E., will be the next scene of registration for Negro voters April 22.

Persons who voted within the last two years and have not changed their addresses will still be carried on the qualified voters' list. Those who have registered and have not voted within the past two years should check with the Tax Collector's office.

Ga. Negroes 'Dig In' For Fight On Talmadge-ism

The Defender 34e

Sat 9-25-48

ATLANTA, Ga.—Negro citizens throughout the state of Georgia have refused to be disheartened by the temporary set-back to their political aspirations by the election of Herman Talmadge as governor, and are preparing to fight with every legal weapon to maintain their right to vote.

Chicago Def.

This is the consensus of opinion of civic and business leaders polled directly after the "wool hat" supporters of Talmadge ended their celebration of victory with "corn-likker" and rebel yells.

Talmadge himself is not so greatly feared, although he campaigned on a platform of white supremacy, racial segregation, and a demand for the "lily white" Democratic primary. It is believed that he has political ambitions beyond the governor's mansion, and will do nothing to actually injure the interests of Negroes in education, business or community life which will bring down condemnation upon the state from the north.

Fear His Followers

The real fear is that the illiterate back-woods Cracker element in the state will take his victory as license for a reign of terror to block the further political advance of Negroes, and to abrogate the U. S. Supreme Court ruling of their right to vote in party primaries.

Sat 9-25-48

In the cities like Atlanta, Savannah, Augusta, Macon and Albany, Negro voters plan an appeal to the federal courts to prevent their being removed arbitrarily from the polling lists, and to oppose any racial tests designed to prevent them from qualifying for the ballot. In the rural sections, voters schools are to be conducted to prepare eligible Negro voters to qualify as electors and to use the ballot for their own protection and advancement. Signs of support from the more liberal white element in the state have already appeared, with newspapers and civic leaders warning that an outburst of anti-Negro terrorism will bring down the wrath of the nation upon the state.

Progressives Seek To Register Negroes

Won't Swear Party Allegiance, Macon Negro Denied Vote Right

L. Marshall, Out To Oppose Russell, Gets Set Back For Senate

MACON—(SNS)—The door of the Democratic primary was slammed shut here Wednesday in the face of Larkin Marshall, Macon Negro publisher, who announced he would oppose Sen. Russell as a candidate for the U. S. Senate after having been nominated by delegates of the new People's Progressive Party of Georgia." 5-14-48

Marshall, when he attempted to cast a ballot in the Bibb county Democratic primary, was handed an affidavit to sign, pledging allegiance to the Democratic Party. When he refused, he was denied the privilege of voting.

The Macon publisher had been nominated as a Senate candidate last Saturday during a convention of the new party which had Sen. Glen Taylor, vice-presidential candidate of the Third Party, as feature speaker. 5-14-48

He appeared at the Negro Burdell school with his white attorney. Refusing to sign the affidavit tendered him by poll manager H. L. Dunn, the Negro senatorial candidate said he was a registered Democrat and had a right to vote.

His attorney, Tom Johnson, declared Marshall's civil rights had been violated and the matter would be carried to court.

A near fist fight was said to have broken out at the school polling station.

Two other members of the newly organized party, linked with Henry Wallace, said they voted in the primary. A Negro physician, Dr. C. W. Dyer, who is vice chairman of the party, said he signed an affadavit and voted. Another Negro member of the party, A. L. Thomas, said he voted without signing the pledge.

Charlie Block, Chairman of the Bibb County Democratic Party, remarked he had instructed all poll managers to insist of voters affirming the pledge.

Saying he would follow his attorney's advice, Marshall explained he didn't sign the pledge "because I don't know what will happen between now and the general elec-

What a splendid spirit of civic consciousness! What a noble gesture such a thing can be to all Atlantans, particularly the parents of these young people, many of whom no doubt, are negligent of their duty and responsibility in getting registered themselves!

Witness also a few days earlier, nearly 500 young people who responded to a similar call at the Booker T. Washington high school. Our two high schools at last taking their place in the Atlanta community. What a great example for our colleges to emulate, even now!

Over 25,000 Fulton Negroes Ready For Vote

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Citizens of Fulton County demonstrated their interest in the forthcoming gubernatorial campaign by chalking up a new record of 131, 630 registered voters as the voting lists closed Saturday at the Courthouse. Tue. 5-4-48

On the election rolls are 25,267 Negroes of which 2,677 registered since January 1.

At the same time Chief Deputy Registrar Howard Mashburn reported 12,595 white qualified bringing their total to 106,363.

This year's total topped the previous record registration set for the 1946 elections, in which the total registration was 122,000 of which 100,000 were white.

Fulton registration, according to law, closed at 5 p. m., Saturday six months ahead of the Nov. 2 general elections. Georgia law permits State registrations to continue until July 2.

SAVANNAH, Ga.—A vicous conspiracy to deny 1,800 Negro citizens the right to vote was charged against powerful Georgia political figures in a suit filed here Friday in which the disfranchised persons asked punitive damages amounting to nearly half a million dollars.

The suit named Superior Court Judge Earl Camp, State Representative Herschel Lovett and members of the Laurens Board of Registrars and Laurens Board of County Commissioners, and claimed that 1,800 Negroes had been denied the ballot. Sat. 6-5-48

Meanwhile two of the registrars—Marvin W. Watson and Ancil Chavous—suddenly resigned from the board. Watson stated that he had suffered a nervous breakdown and Chavous announced that he intends to run for the General Assembly. 342 Sat. 6-5-48

In the petition filed by Atty. Dan Duke of Atlanta, former State Attorney General, it was charged that Negroes' names were barred because of their race from the registration list, which violated their civil rights.

Eight Negro citizens of Laurens County were named specifically in the suit which asked for a total of $55,000 damages.

Attorney Duke said that the eight persons included four college graduates, three ministers and a school teacher. The plaintiffs declared that they and other Negroes had voted in past Democratic primaries.

The Federal suit seeks to force the registrar to restore the purged names to the voters' list. A hearing on the petition is to be held in Savannah, June 26.

Constitution Reports 100 To 1 For Thompson

According to a report in the Atlanta Constitution, Negroes voted 100 to 1 for Governor Thompson in Atlanta's balloting in the September 8 primary.

The article as carried by the Constitution was as follows:

"Atlanta's two preponderantly Negro precincts—Third Ward "B" and Fifth Ward "H"—bloc voted largely in yesterday's primary.

"The score in the important races in Third Ward, Precinct "B" stood: 'Governor — Thompson 1,138, Talmadge 11; Lt. Gov. — Persons 762, Griffin 84; Congress — Davis 36, Mankin 1,139; Solicitor General — Duke 1,475, Webb 594. Fri. 9-10-48

"While they pooled their votes in the State and congressional races, for the most part they split their votes in local races.

"Fifth Ward "H" followed the same pattern for the most part.

Laurens Negroes Given Chance To Reregister

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Wed 342 6-16-48

DUBLIN, Ga. — (SNS) — In the wake of indignant repercussions in the wholesale purging of Negroes in Laurens county, county registration lists were reopened Tuesday and those purged were being permitted to re-register to vote.

The first expose of the wholesale purge was convered in a local newspaper story. Shortly thereafter, aroused Negroes hired attorney Dan Duke to institute a civil suit against the board of registrars for damages, claiming that their names were illegally dropped from the voters' list.

At the time of reregistration, T. C. Keen, county tax collector said he was reregistering any of those who were purged for failure to appear before the board of registrars at a seies of hearings which began last November. Wed 6-16-48

His stipulation was that personal applications have to be made if prospective voters desire their name to be among the eligible voters.

DEADLINE JULY 1

Registration deadline is set for July 1.

Another stipulation cited by the tax collector was that he would register only those who are qualified to vote in accordance to state laws.

The chairman of the county board of registrars, E. S. Baldwin, has been asked to file a copy of the list of voters with him, Mr. Keen asserted.

Filed last Saturday, the list was said to have omitted about 70 per cent of the Negroes who qualified in the 1946 general election.

It was said that the majority of Negroes had been purged because they faild to answer summonses for a hearing before the registrars.

Mr. Keen said he expected to hold a conference with Mr. Baldwin concerning the reregistering and unless the conference should result in a change of plans, reregistrations would continue until the deadline date.

No Secret Vote

To the Editor of The News:

"SPARTA, Ga.—(AP)—Few Hancock County Negroes voted in the state primary Wednesday, although over 1,300 were registered. There was a parade of Ku Klux Klansmen on the Saturday night preceding the primary.

"There were 197 Negroes who voted in the Sparta precinct; 195 voted for M. E. Thompson and two for Hoke Willis."

I would like to know how the writer of this article, that appeared in The Dothan Eagle, secured his information as to how the Negroes cast their vote. I have always believed that my vote was secret, but it appears that I have been led to believe wrong. If this does violate the ethical code of newspaper men, I wish you would put it in your column, "Voice of the People." I think all should know that not only these Negroes' vote could be published but by the same token their votes are subject to the same treatment.

80,000 GA. NEGROES VOTE MAINLY FOR TRUMAN

(34e)

ATLANTA (ANP)--Nearly complete tabulations from Georgia precincts Thursday revealed that President Harry S. Truman garnered an overwhelming majority of the some 80,000 Negro votes cast in last Tuesday's general election.

Associated Negro Press

Final returns from Atlanta's Fulton county precincts 3-B, 3-A and 5-H, predominantly Negro areas, showed that Truman accomplished better than a two-to-one victory over Republican nominee Thomas E. Dewey. In precinct 3-B, located at E. R. Carter school, the totals showed 1,504 for Truman and 656 for Dewey. Precinct 3-A, located at Walker Street school, showed a Truman total of 330 votes, compared to Dewey's 128, while at Precinct 5-H, located at David T. Howard High school, 682 votes were cast for Truman and 342 for Dewey.

Chicago Illinois

Unofficial tabulations of Negro votes from other Atlanta precincts where whites and Negroes cast their votes together showed majorities for Truman.

Negroes braved inclement weather conditions to report to the polling places in Atlanta and over the state. In many areas, officials reported that Negroes were outvoting whites, in relation to total registrations.

Henry A. Wallace's slate got less than 200 votes from the predominant Negro precincts and figured small in the total state vote. Reports were that most officials refused to count the votes cast for Larkin Marshall, candidate for the U. S. senate on the Progressive slate, and others of his party.

The States Righters polled few, if any Negro votes.

The Republicans had made a real bid for Negro votes in Georgia, but had been fought down to the last campaign day by Democratic stalwarts.

John Wesley Dobbs, Prince Hall Masonic grandmaster and vice chairman of the Republican state central committee, conceded his defeat with the following statement:

"The majority of citizens of the greatest democracy the world has ever seen have spoken. Their verdict cannot be wrong, because 'the voice of the people is the voice of God.'"

Commented Atty. A. T. Walden, president of Georgia Negro Democrats, who met Dobbs in a pre-election debate:

"President Harry S. Truman's election conclusively proves two things. First, that even in the area of politics the American people admire a man of genuine sincerity who possesses honest convictions which he dares to advocate courageously and unflinchingly in the face of apparently insuperable odds; second, that the people of America believe that the liberal Democratic party is the guardian of the welfare and liberty of the common man."

Registration of Voters Nears Record of '46

The Constitution

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Registration of voters for Georgia's Sept. 8 Democratic primary today was headed toward the record set in 1946.

Tues 7-13-48

With 61 counties yet to report registration lists in Secretary of State Ben Fortson's office are only 296,411 voters short of 1946's 1,077,949.

The total for 98 counties, including Fulton, Chatham and Bibb, was 781,538 registered voters, including more than 103,000 Negroes. Still missing is populous Richmond County.

Atlanta Ga

Broken down as far as possible the 1948 figures showed 642,425 white voters and 103,002 Negroes.

The discrepancy between these two figures and the total is explained by the fact that several county clerks, who are charged by law with making the returns, failed to break down the lists by color.

The Negro vote is expected to go slightly above the 1946 figure of 118,000. This number is unofficial, since the Secretary of State's office in its official accounting of the 1946 voters gave only the combined total.

A study of the 1948 figures available so far brought this information to light:

The ratio between white and Negro voters in Bacon County is 4,888 whites to one Negro.

One unit vote in Chattahoochee County is equal to 132 ballots, while in Fulton County, with a total registration of 130,588, one unit vote is the quivalent of 21,764 ballots.

A simpler breakdown would be to say that one vote cast in Chattahoochee has the same voting power as 494.5 in Fulton. Of course, these figures are based on the assumption that all those qualified to vote do so. The actual ratio would depend on how many really cast ballots Sept. 8.

Tues 7-13-48

Three counties—Fayette, Union and Webster—reported no Negroes qualified to vote.

Hancock, which has a white registration of 1,792, with the Negro registration totaling 1,341, has the highest percentage of Negro votes.

In the vast majority of the counties, however, the Negro vote registration is negligible and can be discounted as an election influence in all but the most unusual circumstances.

Such a circumstance would be a 50-50 split in the white vote, with the Negroes voting in a bloc.

There are exceptions, of course, besides Hancock. Chatham County has a powerful Negro vote—20,700 out of a total registration of 65,200.

Fulton has 24,294 registered Negro voters. Muscogee has 3,916 Negroes out of a 25,412 total. Bibb County, with a total registration of 33,000, has 9,000 Negro voters.

Under Georgia's vote laws, the county unit system, which is similar in setup to the Federal Electoral College system, prevails.

Each of the State's 159 counties is allotted two or more unit votes, depending on population, up to a total of six. The popular vote within the county determines for whom the entire unit vote shall be cast.

Tues 7-13-48

Eight counties have six unit votes, 30 have four and the remainder two.

Thus, it is possible for a candidate to receive more popular votes than his opponent and still lose the election.

White Supremacy, Terror Rule Win for 'Hummon'

The Courier

(Special to The Courier)

ATLANTA, Ga.—Paced by a slaying, beatings, last-minute voter purges, fiery crosses burned by the KKK and new "delaying tactics," Georgia's white supremists last week made a mockery out of the Constitution and returned Herman Talmadge, son of the late 'Gene, to office as their Governor.

Sat 7-17-48

Agents of the FBI were conducting a thorough investigation into the shooting of 28-year-old siah Nixon, Alston, Ga., turpentine worker, by Johnnie Johnson, young white logger of that own, after Nixon had insisted on carrying out his desire to vote in spite of being told not to do so. Johnson is jailed in Alston and his brother is being sought. Nixon was the father of six children.

BLACKJACK, BRASS "KNUCKS"

A Negro poll worker hired by supporters of M. E. Thompson, Talmadge's opponent, was beaten with a blackjack and brass knuckles by a white man in Montgomery County while another white man stood by with a cocked shotgun leveled at his head. This Negro managed to make his way to Atlanta after the beating, and reported to the FBI there.

Newest strategy in the overall effort of the white supremists to nullify or reduce the heavy Negro vote expected against "Hummon" was the "delaying tactics" used by white Augusta registrars who wasted twenty minutes per Negro voter asking foolish questions while a long line of Negroes waited to cast their ballots.

Sat 9-18-48

DELIBERATE DELAY

An election official said: "I believe we can kill at least twenty minutes per Negro. That will slow only three to vote each hour. There are going to be plenty of Negroes standing in line when the polls colse at 6 P. M." The long line didn't move an inch in fifteen minutes, a reporter said.

Meanwhile, throughout the length and breadth of the State Negro Georgians were asking themselves what was to happen to those who had dared oppose race-baiting "Hummon." There were some Negroes who supported Talmadge in his bid for the gubernatorial seat.

NEGRO TALMADGEITES

In some downstate counties it was reported that Negroes were politically bargained into supporting the Talmadge ticket. The Albany Tribune carried an advertisement signed by Dr. J. W. Holley, former president of Albany State College, urging Negroes to support Talmadge because of pledges allegedly made to Negro education by his late father.

Fiery crosses of the Ku Klux Klan blazed in at least three Georgia areas on election eve night. Intended as warnings to Negroes, they flared in Valdosta, home of Acting Governor Thompson, in the northern part of Bulloch County and in Houston County near a church and a store owned by Negroes. Services in progress in the church continued uninterrupted.

Sat 9-18-48

CASKET ON PORCH

In Bulloch County hooded men reportedly put a small casket on the front porch of the home of a Negro near a church. Few Negroes voted in Valdosta and it was believed the KKK cross-burnings had their effect. Elsewhere in other sections of the Second and Eighth Districts, Negroes voted in large numbers, A total of 142,491 were registered.

On the day before the election some 558 Negro registrants were stricken from the Spaulding County registration list, with registrars holding the lists until the late afternoon of the election eve day before turning it over to election officials. It was then to late for any action to restore the stricken names.

Sat 9-18-48

NO CHALLENGES

A suit had been filed in Federal Court at Brunswick to prevent such a purge, but Judge Frank Scarlett merely warned the registrars after holding a conference with them at which they promised "to abide by the law." Several other instances of voting bars were reported but so thoroughly was Talmadge victory job done that no challenges are expected.

Bloc Voting Disproved

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta Ga

Sunday 8/1/48

The Georgia Commission on Interracial Cooperation has conducted a critical analysis into the bloc voting charges which have been bandied about on political platforms, in newspapers and in the columns of political writers against Negroes in Georgia since 1946, when the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals granted them their constitutional right to participate in the Democratic primaries. The pamphlet, which requires about 25 minutes or less of reading time, finds that the Negro's voting history of the past two years shows:

First, that Negroes will vote in a bloc only when White Supremacy is the issue in a state election; second, that Negroes will vote in a bloc in municipal and county elections against candidates who show a disregard for the rights of Negroes; and third, that in those counties where his right to vote has come to be accepted, and it is the practice of all candidates to bid for the Negro vote as they do for the whites, they will not and have not voted in a bloc. Then the book goes into specific cases in specific counties over the state showing among other things, that the Negro vote has exerted a wholesome influence on the whites, because it has awakened them to a new interest and responsibility in government, and that politicians, columnists and a host of dubiously authoritative observers, have got to change their theme song and learn the facts about the Negro vote.

The pamphlet is useful, we think in a great number of ways, in that it points to the fallacy of the politicians and the newspaper critics who write overtime in an effort to condemn the Negro vote, baseless as that has been proved, while never having a word of condemnation against the farm bloc, the labor bloc or if you please the southern bloc.

The utter fallacy of The Albany Herald's reasoning of last November in decrying the Negro bloc vote against the incoming Mayor James (Taxi) Smith, was pointed out by the study. A great part of that fallacy, we think, lies in the fact that the Herald's new editor and publisher, a northerner, lacked the essential facts about the character and worth of the Negro leaders of Albany, whom it characterized as "thoughtless," together with the fact that it went off without the information on the background of Mr. Smith and his Talmadge support. Mr. Smith is being charged with aiding the purge against Negroes, now going on in Dougherty county.

Georgia Leads with Jump From 20,000 to 125,000 Since 1940, Study Shows

The Iowa Bystander

Thur 7-22-48

De Moines Iowa

(34e) Ga.

Atlanta, (NNPA)—The number of qualified colored voters in the South has tripled since 1940, according to a report prepared by Luther P. Jackson, professor of history at Virginia State College, for the Southern Regional Council.

"Regardless of reaction and demagoguery," Dr. Jackson declares, "it seems highly improbable that the progress made by the Negroes as voters during the 1940 decade will wane."

For the South as a whole, the report shows, the number of qualified colored voters increased from 211,000 in 1940 to 645,000 in 1947, the latter figure representing 12 per cent of the colored population of voting age.

Leading the Southern States in this increase is Georgia where the enrollment is estimated to have jumped from 20,000 to 125,000 between 1940 and 1947.

The latter figure represents 18.8 per cent of the estimated 663,716 colored persons of voting age in the State.

Thur 7-22-48

The study, shows that the border state of Oklahoma has the highest percentage of its eligible population qualified as voters. The estimated number of colored persons of voting age in Oklahoma is 168,849. Of that number an estimated 50,000 or 29.6 per cent, are qualified to vote.

Tennessee ranks next highest in percentage. The State has an estimated 309, 456 colored persons of voting age, of whom an estimated 80,000, or 25.8 per cent, are qualified to vote.

Over One Per Cent Vote

The estimated number of colored persons of voting age in Alabama is 521,000, of whom an estimated 6,000 or 1.2 per cent, are qualified to vote. Reasons given for this low percentage of estimated colored voters in Alabama are "heavy poll tax, severe restrictions in registration, inadequate statewide Negro leadership, and general apathy."

The estimated number of qualified colored voters in Arkansas is 47,000 out of an estimated 270,995 of voting age, representing 17.3 per cent.

Florida has an estimated 316,640 colored persons of voting age, of whom an estimated 49,000, or 15.4 per cent, are qualified voters.

In Louisiana

Thur 7-22-48

Louisiana has an estimated 563,754 colored persons of voting age, of whom an estimated 10,000, or 2.6 per cent, are qualified voters. The report discloses that slightly more than one-half of the qualified colored voters in Louisiana are in New Orleans. In a majority of the sixty-four parishes in Louisiana, the report asserts, there are no qualified colored voters because registration in rural Louisiana is very difficult and the illiteracy rate is very high.

Mississippi has an estimated 563,754 colored persons of voting age, of whom an estimated 5,000, or 0.9

North Carolina has an estimated 493,175 colored persons of voting age, of whom an estimated 75,000, or 15.2 per cent, are qualified as voters.

The South as a whole has an estimated 5,069,805 colored persons of voting age, of whom the estimated 610,000 qualified voters make 12 per cent.

Although seven Southern States retain the poll tax, the report declares only in Mississippi, Virginia and Alabama does it, "constitute a significant barrier either by the amount of money to be paid, by the time and method of payment, or by its cumulative features."

Severe Qualifications

On the basis of a state-by-state inquiry into voting practices, Dr. Jackson concludes that it is registration which is most commonly used as a means of discrimination against potential colored voters. This is accomplished, he states, by registrars who make severe application of qualification requirements against colored persons only, by policies of evasion, and by deliberate insults or threats at registration places.

It was found, however, that there is relatively little opposition to colored persons becoming registered voters in Southern cities of a population of 25,000 or more. "In Memphis, Atlanta, Jacksonville, or New Orleans," says the report "that may qualify with as much ease as they may in any Northern city."

The study points out that "it is not always the barriers to voting which disqualify the colored people, but sometimes the absence of a voting consciousness among them." The reason for this lack of interest is attributed in part to the fact that many colored churches and schools have not taken an active part in educating colored citizens in civic responsibility.

Practical benefits that have come to colored people as a result of their voting include the construction of additional colored parks, playgrounds, schools, and other public facilities and services, and the employment of colored policemen.

Dr. Jackson points to the colored vote as a healthy influence on Southern politics in general. "Holding the balance of power in many instances," he writes, "their vote has been a factor in diriving out of office city machines of long duration, in favor of more liberal office-holders."

Now We May Know For Whom We Are Voting

Daily World

(34e)

The action of the state legislature Saturday in amending the election law now makes it possible for the voters to know for whom they will be voting in the national contest for president and vice president next Nov. 2. And of course this action by the General Assembly is to be commended by those who believe in the right of the people to have a chance to make a free expression of their choice of those to hold public office.

Tues 10-5-48

Atlanta Ga.

It is true, however, the new law did not go as far as Gov. Thompson, who called the special session, had hoped it would go, yet it was a great step forward in that it will give all the candidates for the two highest national offices a chance to have electors placed in the ballot without the necessity of presenting a petition bearing the names of 5 percent of the states voters.

The Turman-Dewey-Wallace groups have already named their electors and it is probable that the Thurmond or Dixiecrat ticket will also enter a set of electors, making a possible four-way fight for Georgia's twelve electorial votes. This means that the state's Negro vote will be more important this year than ever before in the nation's history This vote, about 175,000 strong, could well be the deciding factor.

The Civil Rights issue is the most important question in the campaign as far as our group is concerned. Then we should ask ourselves two questions: (1) which one of the candidates is most sincere over the Civil Rights issue? (2) which one who has a chance of election who would show the necessary determination to push through to enactment into law at least a part of the program?

Tues 10-5-48

President Truman in our opinion is the answer to both the above questions. He has been most forthright in his advocacy and tangible action about the program even to the extent of alienations of a large segment of his own party. We are convinced of Truman's sincerity. On the otherhand, Gov. Dewey has been strangely silent on the question of Civil Rights. Also apparently with his knowledge his running mate has been making recent 'State' speeches.

Moreover, President Truman is head of the party which we feel could persuade the south to accept at least a portion of the Civil Rights program with a minimum degree of resistance. This is an important election and we hope every voter will do his duty on Nov.2 as a good citizen and cast his vote.

Johnson Negroes Shun Vote; 241 'Not Interested'---Judge

The Constitution 34e

Atlanta, Ga. Thurs. 3-4-48

WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga., March 3—(AP)—Only one lone Negro approached the polls here Wednesday and even he didn't vote.

Before the polls opened for the Johnson County Democratic primary this morning, the Ku Klux Klan had staged a night parade and a speech-making around the County Courthouse.

But City Judge W. C. Brinson said he didn't believe the Klan affair had anything to do with the absence of the city's 241 qualified Negro voters from the polls.

"The Negroes," said Brinson, "are just not interested in county affairs." Four-hundred Negroes were registered to vote in the election for 10 officers, but there were no reports of any participating.

Brinson, who is also Chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee, said the one Negro who approached the polls asked if he were registered.

The Negro was told his name was on the books as a voter, said Brinson, but made no attempt to vote. The Constitution

Tuesday night 300 klansmen and klanswomen paraded around the town square and then burned a cross on the courthouse lawn.

Incumbent Sheriff Dewey Hall had a 258-vote majority over three other candidates in returns Wednesday night from seven of eight precincts. Only the Wrightsville precinct was out. Other candidates for Sheriff were Cary W. Mallette, L. S. Smith and Roland Attaway. Atlanta, Ga.

Incumbent Clerk of Superior Court Carnage Harrison led his opponent, J. Harry Rowland, by 19 votes. No returns were available on the three commission districts. Thurs. 3-4-48

Unopposed candidates were W. C. Brinson, Judge of City Court; Mrs. G. W. Gannon, Ordinary, and Jack C. Brantley, Surveyor.

The Governor explained that the county primaries were local affairs and as such the state has no right intervening. The state patrolmen will only concern themselves with abridgement of state laws, he said. 3-25-48

Despite the fact that the Klan had burned a cross Saturday night at Old Marion Church at Dry Branch, Ga., in front of the Twiggs County Courthouse, Jeffersonville, and on the lawn of William Hart of Jeffersonville, voters here braved the threats and intimidations to exercise their right to vote in the county elections. Tues. 3-23-48

Brunswick Negro Voters Back Liberal Candidates

Tues. 3-16-48 Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

BRUNSWICK, Ga.—(SNS)—Negro voters supported liberal officeholders offering for re-election and a referendum to isssue $450,000 in general ad valorem bonds to construct a new casino and boardwalk on St. Simon Island, and to provide for Negro beach facilities in the recent Glynn County election. 3-16-48

Support for the incumbents came after a plea by a candidate for support because his father was good to Negroes years ago when he was a local physician. However, this was not enough to have the majority turn their backs on Tax Commissioner J. M. Exley, Harry F. duBignon, clerk of Superior Court, M. E. Owens, sheriff, and Atwood Freeman for County Surveyor. Tues

Preference was shown for Tax Commissioner Exley who has been in office ten years and has a consistent record for fair play in dealing with Negroes. Voters cited the fact that his office had been fair in registering them when other parts of Georgia was attempting various subterfuges to halt Negro registration.

The election was a hotly-contested one in that all kinds of tricks were tried by some segments of the community to elect candidates that were not acceptable to the vast majority of the people. Daily World

An effort to unseat Dr. S. McDaniel, whose sensational testimony at the trial of Warden H. B. Worthy and four guards in connection with the Brunswick Prison massacre, showed he approved of sweat boxes for Negro prisoners, failed.

Voters approved the bond issue which will guarantee a $100,000 beach site and recreation area in the county. A sum of $50,000 from a County Real Estate deal will be added to the bond total to make $150,000 for the recreational facility. Tues.

Atlanta, Ga.

The Negro vote was much lighter than expected because of threatening weather. The total vote on the bond issue was 2,400 for and 1,990 against. A total of about 4,800 were cast in the entire county. 3-16-48

The closest race was that for the post of tax commissioner, where incumbent Exley managed to retain his office by a narrow margin of 98 votes. This race was close all the way, with Vassa Cate who opposed Exley, taking a 32-vote lead for the city precincts. Exley's strength in the county made the difference.

In only one of the Dougherty County races did Negroes cast their ballots with any noticeable unanimity. Citizens In All Walks Join Voters Campaign

(34e) Ga Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

The Negroes in Atlanta are taking on the "new look" in civic affairs. They are beginning to feel they have a civic duty to participate in the civic matters. They are registering in large numbers daily in order that they may become qualified voting citizens in Fulton and DeKalb Counties. Tues.

Last week Principal C. N. Cornell and Prof. R. E. Cureton of Booker T. Washington High School, in cooperation with the All-Citizens Reistration Committee, had the registrars from the Fulton County Court house to come to the school to register more than 500 students and others living in the vicinity of the school. 4-13-48

Prof. Charles Gideons of David T. Howard School registered nearly 300 people at the D. T. Howard School a few days later.

The Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity in cooperation with the All-Citizens Registration Committee, co sponsored the first in a series of registration booths at the Booker T. Washington Hi Evening School of which Milton White is principal. Approximately 500 persons were registered. J. C. Long, Chairman of the 3rd Ward, helped to make this effort a success.

LOCAL COLLEGES GIVE ASSISTANCE

Many organizations and individuals volunteered their services in this project. Miss Margurite Akins, Assistant Dean of Women at Clark College, led a group of eligible Clark students to the registration booth. Miss Sara Perry of the Veterans Guidance Center of Atlanta University volunteered her services at this booth. Dean B. R. Brazeal, of Morehouse College was responsible for a large number of students from the college, who not only registered but helped in the registration of others. The student chapter of the NAACP of Morehouse College and the local chapter of the Southern Negro Youth Congress at the college canvassed from door to door in the third ward to help stimulate interest in this campaign.

Mrs. E. R. Carter, local school teacher, Rev. I. A. Sherman precinct leader of the third ward, Miss Y. Latten of David T. Howard High School and Clarence D. Coleman, Community Organization of the Atlanta Urban League, served as aids during the registration.

Members of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity were on hand to organize and supervise the booth. Members of the fraternity included: C. A. Bacote, chairman of the All-Citizens Registration Committee, Nelson C. Jackson of the National Urban League, I. H. Burney, president of Eta Lambda Chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha, Charles Greenlea, J. Stanley Tatum, Milton White, William Sullivan, Noah Willis, J. Q. Dougherty and members and pledgees of the Alpha Phi Alpha Chapters of Clark, Morris Brown and Morehouse colleges. The next booth is scheduled to be held at Big Bethel AME Church of which Rev. D. T. Babcock is pastor. This booth will be held Tuesday April 13 from 10:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

BAND TO PLAY

Through the cooperation of the principal of David T. Howard High School Prof. Charles Gideons and Prof. Kenneth Days the director of the band, the band will play a concert in front of Big Bethel Church from 12:00 to 1:00 p.m. during the registration period. Pictures are to be taken of all ministers who lead their congregations to the booth. A loud speaker will be on hand to give passers-by desired information concerning the registration campaign. New Lists Fail To Restore Names Of Nearly 1700

Laurens County Democratic Primary was held here Wednesday with new registrations lists. Out of a previously reported total registration of 2250 Negro registrants, only 785 were qualified to cast ballots in the Wednesday's primary which includes restoration of about 70 names upon application following the wholesale purge of some 1,600 or 1,700 Negroes. Daily World

The militia district officials used the lists furnished them by the board of registrars—and only those lists—board chairman Baldwin stated. 34e Ga.

Negro leaders of Dublin, through their attorney, Dan Duke, of Atlanta, had filed suit for damages of $250,000 plus court costs in Federal District Court at Savannah Saturday, against officials who purged them and other Negroes from the lists. Among those named in the suit included Judge Earl R Camp, Rep. Herschel Lovett, the board of registrars and the Chair-cratic Executive committee of Laucratic Executive committe of Laurens County. Thurs. 6-3-48 Atlanta, Ga.

Attorney Duke told a group of Negro leaders of the Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic clubs recently that he is advising the purged voters not to re-apply for registration, since it was crystal clear that their rights were violated by those directing the purge.

GRIFFIN, Ga. (SNS)—Attempts to purge Negroes from voting in Georgia primaries broke out again Monday—this time in Griffin where 1,500 registered Negroes voters were summoned to appear before the Board of Registrars to determine their qualifications. 7-30-48

The challenged voters were ordered to appear Monday and "from day to day" until all "questionable registrants" are examined. Fri.

The subpoenas were issued through the Sheriff's office and brought remarks from Board members R. L. Addleton that they were issued only in cases where "there are any doubts" about qualifications.

Although the registrar said subpoenas would be issued to any whites whose qualifications were doubted he was non-committal as to whether any whites had been challenged. 7-30-48

The challenged Negro citizens have employed the services of two Atlanta attorneys to represent them before the board. They are S. B. Wallace and Frank Bowers. Fri.

Of the 77 voters who appeared Monday, 19 were disqualified. They were questioned by Registrar Addleton. Other members of the board are T. E. Mann and Hug Anglyn.

Official records show that about 10,000 whites are registered as compared to 1,800 Negroes.

Giving everything it promised the Georgia Voters League attracted one of the largest crowds to Grayson Stadium ever to witness an affair of this kind. The spirit of independence and freedom was followed through from the gates to the final speech and benediction. The sports program got underway at 2:30 P.M. with the West Side Stars and East Side Scorpions in a fast and interesting game of soft ball. Two other local teams, The Savannah Red Sox and the Tatemville Tigers, followed with a baseball game which held the interest of spectators fro mthe beginning to end.

State Democrats Map Drive Against Purge

34(E) Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Alarmed Negro political leaders, who are deeply concerned over "purge tactics" in some sections of the state, gathered in Atlanta Thursday morning to discuss methods of combatting the outbrea madge-forces in several Georgia counties.

Ga. Fri.

The special meeting was called by the Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic Clubs, through its President A. T. Walden who pointed out that hostile political forces have started purges in Mitchell, Chatham, Laurens and Spaulding counties on a wholesale scale, now that the gubernatorial campaign in the state is heading towards the home stretch.

Even while the meeting was in progress, news of another purge on a huge scale was developing in Dougherty County, of which Albany is the county seat.

One of the most flagrant examples of a mass purge was cited as Mitchell County, where Camilla is the leading town, and which is the home of House Speaker Fred Hand. In Mitchell County the remaining 113 voters of 1300 purged in 1946 were stratched from the voting lists.

Fri. 7-31-48

After a thorough discussion the political conferees voted a resolution which directed Atty. Walden to contact Atty. Gen. Tom Clark, requesting that the Federal Bureau of Investigation investigate purges, and which urged Negroes over the state tc disregard signing a petition to place a Wallace slate on the ballot.

Among the leaders present were O. C. George, and J. F. Carter, Albany; J. M. Atkinson, Brunswick; Dan Young, Monroe; O. W. Weaver, Athens; Wm. P. Randall, Macon; Ray Ware, Athens; M. J. Hadley, Waycross, and George W. Lumpkin, Waycross.

Atantans present were A. T. Walden, C. A. Ccott, and W. R. Cochrane.

Atlanta's eight-man division of Negro policemen went on duty for the fourth consecutive weekend Saturday. They had previously been assigned to Auburn avenue - Butler Street vicinity and worked in close proximity to their precinct station, located at the Butler Street YMCA.

Yesterday, however, a change was observed when four of the officers were seen patrolling two congested areas on the West side of the city.

This gave "Westsiders" their first opportunity of observing Negro officers performing duties in that section of the city.

Atlanta, Ga

Two of the officers were assigned to the Hunter - Ashby Street vicinity while two others were stationed at Mitchell and Davis St. The remaining four saw duty in and around the precinct station.

Wholesale Purge Of Race Voters Seen In Ga. County

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Va. Sat. 8-7-48

By C. LAMAR WEAVER

ATLANTA, ~~Ga~~—(NNPA)—The wholesale purging of colored persons from the voting registration lists in Spalding county continued here last Thursday as the Board of Registrars resorted to delaying tactics in challenging some 1,500 registered colored voters who had been summoned before it to determine whether they are qualified to vote.

The procedure is having its effects on Spalding county white folks. Housewives are finding themselves without maids, farm owners without hands, and gar-

The subpenas, issued through the sheriff's office, ordered the colored voters to appear Monday and "from day to day" until the cases are disposed of.

ARE DISQUALIFIED

Of 592 persons, who had been examined up to last Thursday, 209 have been disqualified. Because of delaying tactics, 206 of the disqualified were stricken from the list because they failed to answer their subpenas.

Two Atlanta attorneys, S. B. Wallace and Frank Bowers, have been retained by colored citizens of the county to represent them before the board.

Mr. Wallace charged that the registrars had planned to have the voters read and interpret sections of the Constitution of the United State and of Georgia.

PLAN PANNEL

This plan was not followed, he said, when it was pointed out that interpretation of the Constitution was not required of persons of good character and who understood the duties and obligations of citizenship under a republican form of government.

No white voter has been challenged and it appears unlikely that any will be. No challenge can be made after August 20. If the registrars drag out the purging of colored voters long enough, time will not permit any white voters to be challenged.

GLARING DIFFERENCE

Official records show that 10,000 white voters are registered in Spalding county as compared to 1,800 colored voters.

White and colored citizens of Spalding county are linking the purge to the forces of Herman Talmadge, gubernatorial candidate. Although the Talmadge faction of the Democratic party has never carried this county, well informed sources believe that efforts are being made to reduce the number of colored voters gubernatorial candidates.

Anti-Negro Vote Charge Denied In Dougherty

The Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Wed. 8-4-48

Constitution State News Service.

ALBANY, Aug. 3—T. A. Kemp, a member of the Dougherty County Board of Registrars, today denied charges filed with Federal Judge Frank Scarlett by Albany Negroes that there is a conspiracy afoot here to prevent wholesale numbers of Negroes from voting in the September primary.

Kemp said he had not been informed of the action, filed by Atlanta attorneys. He said voters had been subpoenaed but that more whites than Negroes had called, and that the reason was for the purpose of clearing up routine questions, the duties of registrars.

The registrar specified that some voters on the list have identical names, that some addresses are confusing, and that some places of residence are not clear.

An Albany Negro, the Rev. M. F. Adams, officer at large of the Democrats Club, which instituted the court action, said he and several other members of the club went to the Dougherty courthouse recently for two or three days and "saw only Negroes being questioned by the registrars." He said the Atlanta attorneys were engaged and that they are not NAACP lawyers.

Another Negro, C. W. King, President of the club, said when he went to the courthouse those called before the board were predominantly Negro. "We didn't know what was going on," he said, "and we wanted to find out."

Judge Orders Spalding To List Negroes

The Constitution

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 20—(AP)—The Spalding County Board of Registrars was ordered today to register Negro voters without discrimination and to halt any hardships imposed on them because of race.

Sat. 8-21-48

Federal Judge Frank Scarlett ruled in a prehearing conference between attorneys for Negro plaintiffs and the Registrars. His order was similar to one last Friday directed against the Twiggs County Board.

Atlanta, Ga.

The Spalding Registrars agreed to adhere to the law, as interpreted by Judge Scarlett. Their plea had been that any violation of the law had been due to ignorance and not intent.

Negro registrants in Spalding County complained that they were required to await around the courthouse three and four days before being allowed to register. This endangered their jobs, they said.

Scarlett specifically directed the registrars to refrain from working any hardship on the Negroes seeking to register.

The case was left open on the records, Judge Scarlett said, in event of further complaint.

Negro Leaders Say Registrars Discriminate

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Judge Scarlett Orders Hearing August 20th

Wed. 8-11-48

ALBANY, Ga.—(SNS)—A legal halt to wholesale purging of Dougherty county Negro voters was asked Monday when two Atlanta attorneys filed a petition with Federal Judge Frank M. Scarlett, in Brunswick, charging the Board of Registrars with scheming and conspiring to deprive Negro voters of their just rights of suffrage and of civil rights solely on account of race.

The petition was accepted and it was ordered by Judge Scarlett that the Registrars show cause on August 20, why they should not be enjoined from striking the names of Negro voters from the registration lists and restore those already stricken.

Wed. 8-11-48

The petition was filed by Attorneys Hal Lindsay and Frank A. Bowers in behalf of three plaintiffs and approximately 3,000 other Dougherty county Negroes similarly situated. The listed plaintiffs are Charles B. Driskell, Erasmus Dent and J. B. Brown.

Among other claims, the petitioners allege:

(1) They have fullfilled all requirements of registration and are thereby qualified to vote.

(2) That the Board of Registrars, comprising T. A. Kemp, C. R. Hodges and O. E. Waddell, was recently appointed by Judge Carl Crow, of the Superior Court of the Albany Judicial Circuit, and shortly after taking office conspired to deprive the Negro voters of their vote rights.

(3) That the Registrars summoned every person on the Negro registration list to show cause why he should not be disqualified.

(4) In their summoning of Negroes the Registrars deliberately conducted it in such a manner to make it impracticable for some to answer.

(5) That the summons failed to show on what grounds the Negroes were being challenged.

Ordinarily the petition would have been presented to Judge T. Hoyt Davis, of Macon, who presides over the Middle District of Georgia, since Albany lies within its juridiction on federal matters. However, in view of his absence from the bench because of illness, it was presented to Judge Scarlett of the Southern District.

Daily World.

The petitioners cited an example where one summons submitted through the mails was postmarked just one day before the challenged person was ordered to appear. When the summons was delivered at the person's home he had departed on his daily work and did not receive it in his hands until late that afternoon. The summons ordered this person to appear at 10 o'clock that morning.

Regular procedure for serving summons is to have assurance that persons for whom they are intended receive it in their hands.

According to the petition, the mails have been literally flooded with summons and holds little assurance that they will reach the intended receivers in time to act accordingly.

Moreover, the petition alleges that the Board of Registrars has asserted that those striken from the voters' lists may appeal to the next term of the Superior Court of that County. The next holding of the Dougherty County Superior court is set for September 20. As such, a favorable ruling to the appealers would come too late for them to vote in the September 8 Democratic Primary.

The petitioners claim they are systematically being discriminated against solely on account of race. They ask for such ruling that would entitle all persons on the registration lists to vote in the coming elections and for a like ruling in behalf of those stricken during the purge. In addition the petitioners requested that the Board produce at the hearing all necessary books and records to insure clarification of the issues involved.

Wed. 8-11-48

Meanwhile, Registrar Kemp denied the charges Tuesday. He claimed that more whites had been summoned than Negroes. Members of both races have been summoned to clear up routine questions, he added.

In his observation of the Board hearings, in Albany Negro leader, Rev. M. F. Adams, said for the last two or three days he saw only Negroes being questioned. Rev. Adams is an officer in a local Democratic Club.

Sat. 1-31-48

The letters warned that if any one of those to whom the notes were sent attempted to vote, "all of you will be out of business in this community." More than 200 registered to vote here refused to be frightened and cast their ballots in the hotly contested race.

The town is located in Jefferson Davis Parish. Atty. A. P. Turead of New Orleans, president of the Louisiana State NAACP, immediately requested the U.S. Department of Justice to investigate and to prosecute any violation of Federal civil rights. Copies of the letter were also sent to U.S. Attorney Tom Clark and to postal inspectors.

KKK Acts To Halt Race Vote In Louisiana

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

By Associated Negro Press

LAKE ARTHUR, La.—A definite attempt to discourage Negroes from voting in the Louisiana gubernatorial Democratic primary on Jan. 20, in fact a direct threat obviously designed to frighten Negroes and keep them from participating in the election, was brought to light here last Friday by the Louisiana State Association of NAACP branches. Sat. 1-31-48

According to the organization's officials, Howard Higginbotham, a resident of this city, received a "warning" through the mails on Friday telling him that he and eight other Negro voters would "be out of business" if they voted in the primary. The letter, postmarked, "Lake Arthur, La., Jan. 15, 5 p. m., 1948," was signed with a crudely drawn skull and cross bones and the letters "KKK."

The letter states:

"Warning: Leader, if you or any of 8 voters try a act on 20th it will mean that you will be out of business. If one vote of the 8, you shall be the one to pay:—Emma Collin, Roosevelt Collin, Rodney Collin, Albert Cheney, Booker T. Brown, you and your wife. (signed) KKK."

This town is located in Jefferson Davis parish of Louisiana, where there are more than 200 Negroes registered as voters. The group mentioned in the threatening letter includes all of the Negro registered voters in Lake Arthur, the other registered Negro voters residing in Jennings and other towns of the parish. Journal & Guide

Notified of the threat, Atty P. Turead of New Orleans, president of the State NAACP conference, immediately requested the United States Department of Justice to investigate and to prosecute any violation of civil rights. He sent copies of the letter to postal inspectors and the United States Attorney general and urged an immediate probe of the condition and the protection of Negroes desiring to exercise their franchise in the primary. 1-31-48 Norfolk, Va.

Late Saturday, Mr. Turead said he was awaitng a reply from government authorities.

NEW ORLEANS — Despite the promise of the United States Attorney General last November to investigate plans by some Louisiana parish officials to conduct lily-white democratic gubernatorial primaries, qualified Negro voters were left at the mercy of parish politicians again last Tuesday with the result that many Negroes are known to have been denied the privilege of voting, it was disclosed Saturday by the Louisiana State Conference of NAACP Branches.

Negro voters in Jonesboro, located in Jackson parish; and in Lecompte, located in Rapides parish, were denied the right to vote in the second Democratic primary on Tuesday, February 24.

This happened also on January 20 in Jonesboro and Lafayette, Louisiana, according to Attorney A. P. Tureaud, president of the conference.

When the first instance occurred, it was reported to the United States Attorney General and the Deparment of Justice, however, no action to date has been taken, Mr. Tureaud pointed out.

On Tuesday in Jonesboro, a dozen or more Negro voters appeared at the poll about 7 a.m. and conferred with Deputy E. L. Thompson and C. C. Mobley, watcher at the polls, the NAACP Conference stated. The Negro citizens were told, "This is a white man's primary", it was learned, and they were further told that it was belived Negro participation in the election would cause trouble between the races. Harper Cox, a business man, was quoted as saying he was not in favor of Negroes voting in the primary at all.

At the January 20 primary, Negroes were shown a letter purportedly from the Louisiana Attorney General's office stating that only members of the white race could vote in the election. This letter was not produced Tuesday but no Negroes were permitted to vote.

Following the first primary, the matter was reported to the Earl K. Long headquarters since persons heading the movement to bar Negroes were known to be working in favor of the other candidate Mr. Long, it was learned, advised conference leaders to take the matter up with persons at his headquarters in the parish.

Mr Tureaud reported the chasing of Negroes from the polls at Lafayette and Jonesboro to the Justice Department but received no assurance that Negro voters would be protected at the second primary. Thus he complained this week for a second time stating:

"Negroes in Jackson parish were denied the right to vote which is constitutionally a denial of fundamental right secured to these citizens." He requested that the matter be given attention by the justice department with a view to prosecution of the guilty parties.

Previously, Mr. Tureaud had asked an investigation of the sending of threatening notes endorsed "KKK" to prospective Negro voters in Louisiana.

In November, 1947, Assistant Attorney General T. Vincent Quinn promised Daniel E. Byrd, then president of the state NAACP conference, the Justice Department would investigate the schemes to deny Negro voters participation in the Louisiana elections if the NAACP would furnish additional evidence.

Further evidence was furnished the department, the state conference officials pointed out, but twice since Negroes have been chased from the polls when they sought to vote.

His Kind Hurts The South

No matter how we may view it, whether North or South, the radio broadcast of Mississippi's race-baiting Governor Fielding Wright, last Sunday morning is a most unusual appeal to the baser elements of the South, when he said that all Mississippi Negroes who oppose the fight against Truman's civil rights program should move out of the state.

Atlanta 34 C, Ga.

The Negro population of Mississippi is about the same proportion as the whites. For the most part, they dot the fields and factories as "hands" in a vicious plantation system. Their education, according to the last Federal census, is lower than any Southern state, counting South Carolina in for good measure. The State's proudest recent favorite son is the late Senator Theodore Bilbo. But Rankin is no fiddler behind him. And from any standard of measurement, the rest of the South like the rest of the Nation, look upon Mississippi as one big disgrace to the family of States. People, (you may want to call them leaders) like Governor Wright are the ones that gave their State such a bad name.

Thu 5-13-48

Surely Negroes support the Truman's civil rights program. Surely the day is coming, even in Mississippi when Negroes are going to enjoy protection of life and limb under the guarantee of those civil rights. And we hope and believe that Governor Wright will live to see the day come when those things will happen, even against his best wishes and earnest prayers. It is a strange sight to see and hear men pledged to uphold law, appealing to others to deny justice to Negroes, who like in Mississippi, form half of the population.

This action, a victory for southern Negro and white masses who are fighting for the right to vote, comes as a blow to Dixiecrat fascists who attempted to tighten voting qualifications in Mississippi.

The amendment, introduced by white supremacist Sen. Eastland requiring voters to have "good moral character," was recognized by the white voters as a trick to disqualify them. Much opposition was based on the almost unlimited authority that would be invested in the appointive election commissioners to disqualify a voter.

Mon. 10-4-48

Harlem was still wide awake at 5 a.m. Sunday morning. As the cabs and private cars shot past a dingy, poorly-lit store on 5th Ave. near 112th St., people riding in them gaped at the crowd both inside and outside of the store. They wondered especially at the long heavily-policed line leading from it, and extending half-way down the block.

The people on that line had been waiting since 9 and 10 p.m., waiting to be registered.

The law says that everyone who is on line at 10:30 p.m., when the polls close, must be registered. At this particular polling place for the 9th election district in the 14th Assembly District, Manhattan, the line had extended around the corner and half-way down 113th St. when closing time came.

At 4 a.m., there were still 50 people on that line. The person who registered at that time had been standing there since 9 in the evening, a wait of seven hours. It was not until 5:55 a.m. in the morning that the last person was signed up and the books closed.

What manner of people were those who stood all through the night out in the early morning cold so they could be sure to cast their ballots? Why were they there?

They were obviously working people, some Negro, others Puerto Rican. More than half were women, and many were young. A very large proportion were first voters.

Why do you stand on line for eight hours to cast a vote? we asked a Mrs. Jones, whose handsome West Indian face was lined with the cares of a workingclass housewife.

"It is one of the few privileges a poor American has," she answered.

Later, after she had registered, we asked her how the people in the line would vote in the congressional contest.

95 PERCENT MARCANTONIO

"More than 95 percent for Marcantonio," she said.

Earlier in the evening, a group of youngsters had entertained the waiting line with songs accompanied by banjoes, but the cops had forced them to quit.

Daily Worker

This was not the only overcrowded polling place in Puerto Rican Harlem. Three others had closed their lists at 1:30 or 2 a.m. Why?

At a hurriedly-summoned press conference at 10 p.m. that evening, Rep. Vito Marcantonio had given the answer.

New York, N.Y.

In 1946, he charged, there were 20 election districts covering the area. This year they had been cut to 10 despite the fact it was a presidential election.

CHARGES SLOWDOWN

Not satisfied with this, Marcantonio maintained, the two major parties ordered a slow-down of registration, aimed at discouraging the people.

Mon. 10-4-48

He accused John Ellis, his GOP opponent, of giving the order for the slowdown. Tammany leaders aided and abetted it.

Despite complaints to the Attorney General's office, the slowdown continued through the week, compelling lots of people to quit and to come back Saturday. The Attorney General, Marcantonio claimed, was more interested in "investigating" phony literacy test charges which proved to be busts.

He demanded that newspapers which had been showing such interest in East Harlem investigate this treatment of the people there, and he also called for a state investigation.

10-4-48

At about 3 a.m., Tammany district leader Mort Shavers came around with his Assemblyman Hulan Jack. They growled at the cops that there was no "control" over the line and demanded their interests be "protected," by which they meant they were highly displeased at the big registration in the district.

Manuel Medina, Jack's ALP opponent, just grinned.

The 10 election districts in the 14th that are predominantly Puerto Rican registered some 10,300, or more than a 1,000 each. Generally, a district with 900 registrants is considered very large. These 10 districts are part of Rep. Marcantonio's 18th congressional area.

Governor Promises To Probe Vote Bar In Nine Counties

RALEIGH, N. C.—Signed affidavits by Negroes charging that they were denied the right to register by election officials were received by high Government officials last week. 5-21-48

The petitions charged county registrars with wilful and criminal abuse of discretionary powers.

Miss. Mary Price, Greensboro, N. C., chairman of the Progressive party, and Tinsley L. Spraggins, Raleigh, N. C., State representative of the NAACP, presented the petitions to Governor R. Gregg Cherry and Raymond Maxwell, Secretary of the State Board of Elections. The complaints came from nine counties covering the entire State.

GOVERNOR PROMISES ACTION 5

Governor Cherry offered to handle this matter in a routine fashion. He said, "I favor the registration of all qualified persons," and promised to turn the matter over to the Election Board as he had done previously with a letter from Miss Price which charged denial of registration to Negroes.

Miss Price charged that qualified Negroes in Brevard, N. C., are being denied the right to register.

REGISTRANTS

THREATENED

According to Miss Price, Police Chief B. F. Banther told prospective Negro registrants, "There is no registration place for you in Brevard," and "if you make a noise about this you will be asking for trouble."

Chief Banther denied this version. He said Fred Shufard, county election chairman, told the Negroes there was no one to register them until after lunch, because the registrar had refused the job.

In Spring Hope, N. C., a similar situation was found by this reporter who investigated these charges of Negroes in the Eastern part of the State.

In Warren County, of which Warrenton is the county seat, Registrar David Limer opened the doors at the precinct about 9 o'clock and proceeded to give it a good housecleaning while Negroes waited to be registered.

One ex-GI, after being challenged for forty-seven minutes and after receiving a lengthy lecture was permitted to register.

In Fairmont, N. C., Registrar Van Beach resigned rather than register Negroes. Wilburn Lewin, lumberman, who succeeded Beach, had only registered one Negro, Calvin C. Haggins, an ex-GI, by press time. 5-27-48 oJhn McMillian and Harvey Leonard, a farmer and father of eight children, two of whom served in the Army, were told by Stafford to start writing the Constitution. Leonard and McMillian began at 10:45 and at 12:07 Stafford told them to get their lunch and return and finish writing. At that time Leonard and McMillian had completed almost two legal size pages neatly and legibly.

Charles Stafford, registrar in the Chamber of Commerce office, told this reporter that he would register anyone who could qualify.

Other incidents were reported elsewhere.

Negroes Win Fight to Register in N. Carolina

Daily Worker

DURHAM, N. C., Oct. 17.—Hard won victory came to the Negro citizens of Oriental, N. C., last Saturday when with the help of the Progressive Party, they won their two-year struggle for the right to register to vote.

Mon. 10-18-48

34e

Every trick in the book had been used to keep them disfranchised, on their four previous attempts to register. But 11 Negroes on Oct. 9, made history in Pamlico County, it was announced by C. O. Pearson, Progressive candidate for Attorney-General.

New York, N.Y.

"We thank you people who helped remove 'the stones from our heads'," the citizens of Oriental wrote to the Progressive Party, which gave them legal assistance.

In Supply, N. C., as well, Negroes were registered for the first time in 50 years, as a result of the legal fight initiated by Tinsley Spraggins, treasurer of the Progressive Party of North Carolina

WARN REGISTRARS

Every registrar in the state was put on the spot when the Progressive Party mailed to each of them copies of previous court decisions in which registrars have been heavily fined for refusing to register qualified applicants. "The Progressive Party is pledged to carry to the courts any cases where there is evidence of the infringement of the rights of citizens, white or Negro." The registrars were warned.

Mon. 10-18-48

Representatives of the party paid a visit to Gov. Gregg Cherry, and left with his an exhaustive study by Spraggins on registration denials in North Carolina for the last eight years. It demanded that immediate safeguards be taken to prevent repetitions this year.

USE LEGAL DODGE

The Oriental case is typical of many in rural eastern counties in North Carolina. One ruse after another had been used by successive registrars, in the past. In the spring of 1946, when four Negroes tried to register, they were told to read and write five pages of a large, fat book printed in fine type. They started the laborious task but were stopped and told to come back some other time. The next Saturday, they went back and were told to read a section of the Constitution dealing with presidential electors and explain what it meant. The registrar refused to register them because their explanations did not satisfy him.

Mon. 10-18-48

Two years later, over 20 people tried to register. The registrar's place had been taken by a woman with a serious speech impediment. This woman dictated passages from the Constitution for the applicants to write. They offered to copy passages out of the book, but she insisted on dictating, which made the task impossible because they could not understand what she said.

Mon. 10-18-48

On another occasion, the registrar required the passages dictated to be letter perfect. Any word misspelled or any punctuation differing from that in the text was treated as ground for rejection. All the applicants were again rejected, one young veteran because he had left out one period.

On yet another attempt, 14 persons applied and were told that a law had been passed about 1901 that prohibited their being registered and they could not be registered until this law was repealed.

Mon. 10-18-48

This year, however, when the Progressive Party was prepared to bring suit against the registrars, friendliness replaced hostility, and for the first time since Reconstruction, the Progressive Party has broken down the wall of disfranchisement in rural, eastern North Carolina.

Pastor, Wife Denied Vote; Progressive Party Sues

The Worker Sun 12-5-48

New York, N.Y.

DURHAM, N. C.—The Progressive Party of North Carolina has filed charges with Mr. David E. Henderson, U. S. District Attorney in Charlotte, North Carolina, accusing the Chairman of the Henderson County Board of Elections and a precinct registrar in Hendersonville of violating federal criminal laws by refusing to register Negroes to vote in the recent general election.

34e

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Davis

The accused are L. T. Dermid, election board chairman, and M. Hoke, registrar in the City Hall precinct. They are charged with refusing registration because of race or color to Rev. and Mrs. Thomas J. Davis, 320 Fifth Avenue East, Hendersonville, N. C.

The complaint was filed on November 18 by Tinsley Spraggins, Progressive Party treasurer, on behalf of the Progressive Party and the NAACP. It was accompanied by sworn affidavits of Rev. and Mrs. Davis.

REV. DAVIS, a minister of the Missionary Baptist denomination, charged that he made three separate attempts to register, on October 9, 16 and 23. The first time he was refused because he was unable to answer the question: "Who arrests the sheriff in case he becomes a criminal?"

On the second occasion, he charges that he was compelled to write parts of the state Constitution from dictation in a poorly lighted place, although white applicants were being registered without taking any such test. On October 23, he says the defendants told him he could not even try to register, because of having been refused the week before.

Mrs. Davis' affidavit asserts that she was required to write parts of the state Constitution from dictation for ten minutes in a noisy room and was rejected because of one misspelled word and faulty punctuation.

IN A STATEMENT issued on the filing of the charges, O. O. Pearson, Progressive Party legal adviser, said: "Our North Carolina law requires that a person must be able to read and write in order to register to vote. It does not require that he must be a lawyer or a first-class stenographer. Even where the test given is confined to the question of literacy, the registrar is still violating federal law if he systematically applies the test to Negro applicants, but not to white applicants.

"The facts set forth in the Davis affidavits make a clear case of deprivation of federal rights under cover of state law. The Progressive Party and the NAACP will insist that Mr. Dermid and Mr. Holt be prosecuted to the limit for this federal violation and will continue to investigate and follow up all similar cases until the last vestige of undemocratic and illegal discrimination in regard to suffrage is eradicated from our state.'

The Passing of Judge Williams

The Black Dispatch

Sat 9-18-48

Oklahoma City

Death last week of former governor of Oklahoma, Robert L. Williams, gives room for pause to examine the progress that has been made in race relations in this state during the past thirty-three years. Governor Williams found himself in the governor's chair at the time the Supreme Court invalidated the infamous Grandfather law, and the state was seething in 1915 with false propaganda regarding Negro domination. In Territorial days, Negroes had quite a bit to do with things political. One black man was assistant Territorial auditor at Guthrie, and in the Indian territory side the white settlers had long been agitated because of the social, economic and political liberty of the Freedman.

Governor Williams immediately called the legislature of Oklahoma into extraordinary session in 1915 for the purpose of enacting legislation to substitute for the invalidated Grandfather law. It was in that year Oklahoma's vicious registration law saw the light of day. It was an infamous arrangement by which registrars conspired during the ten-day period of registration to prevent Negroes from qualifying for the ballot.

The new law provided for registrars who were not required to live in the precinct where they registered; were not required to register at specific hours, or to maintain a fixed place of registration. The law strangely provided no penalties for failure to register voters. Many registrars when caught by eagle-eyed black citizens, would abscond with the statement that they did not have their registration books with them.

The Black Dispatch was born in November 1914, and the struggle for the ballot was one of our first and most significant battles for the rights of Negroes of Oklahoma. Although everyone knew what Governor Williams had in mind when he called the legislature in session, the newly inaugurated chief executive headlined other important matters in calling the legislature into being, although in the body of the document he called attention to the need for changes in the election laws. As a matter of fact, great stress was laid on the need for stiffening of Oklahoma laws relating to gambling and usury, and the governor in calling the legislature, caused the unwitting to assume that this was the major reason for convening the legislature.

Sat 9-18-48

The Black Dispatch immediately countered with front page editorials which we caused to be placed on the desk of each one of the legislators, in which we discussed "Usury" and "Gambling," but we slanted our discussion to show the legislators the gambling chance they were forcing black men to take in the realm of citizenship, and the usurous price sons of former slaves had to pay to live in the state of Oklahoma. We were able to pay the pages at the door of the legislature to place copies of the Black Dispatch on the desks of the solons, and beginning with the first distribution there was an uproar, for we openly charged this legislative session would attempt to circumvent and go around the decision of the Supreme Court. We sent our paper also direct to the governor's office, as we have always done.

It does not seem so exciting now, but we recall one morning during this turbulent period, we received a letter from Governor Williams in which he advised, "You remind me of a fellow walking around with a chip on his shoulder trying to get someone to knock it off." This was in response to a heated letter we had written to the governor respecting the action of the legislature, and his reasons for calling it into session.

Few of those who live in Oklahoma know of that dismal period when Negroes in Oklahoma City used to hire hay racks and remain loaded and ready to dash to a given spot, while others crept about stealthily locating the registrar. We recall one night when two loads were rushed to Walnut Grove to no avail. It is a pleasure to look back on this period now, when we realize the persistency and courage generated then has blossomed into a period when all black men and women may vote in this state without let or hindrance.

Following his governorship tenure, "Our Bob," as his friends called him, was elevated to the federal bench in the western district of Oklahoma. Quite naturally he did everything as a judge that would give full implementation to his state registration act, and it was not until the NAACP took charge of the cases in Wagoner county several years later that any progress was made in the suffrage struggle. For instance, Judge Williams ruled that the 1700 Negroes attempting to register in Wagoner county would have to file 1700 individual cases, whereas, the contention of the NAACP was that the filing of one case should adjudicate the right of all Negro citizens of that county. We finally got such a ruling in the appellate court and launched the I. W. Lane case, which was finally won.

Negroes really got their heads together when news was circulated that Judge Williams was a candidate for the circuit court of appeals. Violent opposition was taken to this attempt to elevate him to a higher judicial position, and the opposition was based upon his attitude towards the Negro vote in Muskogee and Wagoner counties. But cooler and more sensible reasoning prevailed. It was finally agreed that it would be better to boost Judge Williams upstairs and and get him out of Oklahoma environment than to keep him on the bench at Muskogee, where he was constantly required to hear suffrage matters. The deceased probably died without knowing that the unanimous endorsement he received from Negro lawyers of Oklahoma and other prominent black men and women, had a hidden motive that served best the civil rights of Negroes.

The reasoning of Oklahoma Negro leadership proved sound. Surrounded by more liberal jurists coming from northern sections, nothing of Judge Williams' sectional notions regarding suffrage obtruded during the long tenure he served on the circuit court. The deceased lived long enough to discover that a free ballot in the hands of Oklahoma Negroes would not destroy the state; that Negroes sitting on juries could capably find justice in courts of law by the side of white men, and that the invalidation of residential segregation would not destroy amicable relationships between the two races. All of this has happened since the day Governor Williams signed the infamous registration law. Despite his narrow views on race, we have always had a type of admiration for the courage and audacity Judge Williams gave to his convictions. He was undoubtedly the victim of false propaganda, regarding race, imbibed during his boyhood years in Alabama, and was unquestionably sincere in beliefs on that subject.

Negroes Lose Ballot Fight in Oklahoma

TULSA, Okla. —(U.P.)— An injunction to keep the word "Negro" from appearing after their names on a ballot was denied two Tulsa Negroes by a three-judge panel headed by Federal Judge A. P. Murrah.

An appeal to the United States Supreme Court was planned.

Judge Murrah said that since the plaintiffs both are members of the same race, no discrimination has been shown. Both plaintiffs are candidates for justice of the peace.

MURRAH told the Negroes' attorney:

"You are claiming that the word 'Negro' constitutes discrimination. By asking us to agree with you, you are asking us to recognize that the word is discriminating. In point of law the word 'Negro' means nothing."

Check Again, Mr. Marlow

34e

Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Wed. 2-11-48

Mr. James Marlow, an able writer who turns out a daily editorial column for the Associated Press, has fallen into the usual error of those who write about the South without intimate knowledge thereof, and we trust Mr. Kent Cooper will inform him about primaries under the one-party system, which we don't like, either. Wed.

In his editorial for yesterday Mr. Marlow attempts to prove that very few persons vote in the States where the poll tax and the one-party system is in vogue, so to speak. Constitution, Wed.

He selects as proof the 1944 Presidential election returns and demonstrates from the figures that in Mississippi and South Carolina only about five percent of the people voted. 2-11-48

What Mr. Marlow failed to say in his editorial was that very few persons vote in any of the elections because there are no opposition candidates. Therefore, his figures are meaningless. The election, as the Federal courts have been pointing out to South Carolina, is in the primary. If Mr. Marlow will look up the primary figures he will find that a great many persons vote, much more than five percent. He also will find that last year, in both Mississippi and South Carolina, a great many Negroes voted. But, he is quite right when he says that this was not too popular. Atlanta, Ga.

But, not enough people do vote—even in primaries, and so we trust that Mr. Marlow will continue to agitate us.

Voters Tripple In Southern States

34e

Atlanta Daily World

Wed 7-14-48

The number of Negro voters in the South has tripled since 1940, according to a report prepared by Luther P. Jackson, Professor of History at Virginia State College, for the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta, Georgia.

For the South as a whole, the number of Negro voters increased from 211,00 in 1940 to 645,00 in 1947 the latter figure representing 12 per cent of the Negro population of voting age.

Atlanta, Ga.

Leading the Southern States in this increase is Georgia, where Negro enrollment is estimated to have jumped from 20,000 to 125,000 between 1940 and 1947. But the study shows that it is the border State of Oklahoma which has he highest percentage of its eligible Negro population qualified as voters—29.6 per cent.

Although seven southern states retain the poll tax, the report declares, only in Mississippi, Virginia and Alabama does it "constitute a significant barrier either by the amount of money to be paid, by the time and method of payment, or by its cumulative features."

Daily World

Atlanta Ga.

REGISTRATION BARS

On the basis of a state-by-state inquiry into voting practices, Dr. Jackson concludes that it is registration which is most commonly used as a means of discrimination against potential Negro voters. This is accomplished, he states, by registrars who make severe application of qualification requirements against Negroes only, by policies of evasion, and by deliberate insults or threats at registration places.

Daily World

It was found however, that there is relatively little opposition to Negroes becoming registered voters in Southern cities of a population of 25,000 or more. "In Memphis, Atlanta, Jacksonville, or New Orleans" says the report, "(Negroes) may qualify with as much ease as they may in any Northern city."

7-14-48

The study points out that "it is not always the barriers to voting consciousness among them." The reason for this lack of interest is attributed in part to the fact that many Negro churches and schools have not taken an active part in educating colored citizens in civic responsibility.

Atlanta, Ga.

BENEFIT NOTED

Practical benefits that have come to Negroes as a result of their voting include the construcion of additional Negro parks, playgrounds, schools, and other public facilities and services and the employment of Negro policemen.

Dr. Jackson points to the Negro vote as a healthy influence on Southern politics in general. "Holding the balance of power in many instances," he writes, "their vote has been a factor in driving out of office city machines of long duration, in favor of more liberal officeholders."

It would be erroneous, the report concludes, to claim that the increase in Negro voters in the past eight years seriously threatens "white supremacy." For "in spite of the gains made by Negroes as voters during the decade of the 1940's, it is correct to say that the whites have liekwise been advancing, and in most States at a faster rate.... In Florida, the ratio is about 14 to 1; in Virginia, 20 to 1 and in Louisiana, 100 to 1."

But Threats Fail To Halt Record Poll

The Defender

34e

Sat 11-6-48

MEMPHIS — Violence unmatched since the end of Reconstruction in 1876, flared in the South Tuesday, as Negroes marched to the polls in larger numbers than ever before in history.

But Tuesday was a day of beatings, arson, and threats, that many grandfathers will talk about for generations. It was also a day on which many a Negro citizen asked himself: "Am I still in the United States?"

Chicago Ill

Despite this the Negroes voted. Their efforts were made easier in some cases by watchers employed by the NAACP, who flashed reports of irregularities to election officials. The Republicans, and in Alabama, Louisiana, and So. Carolina and Mississippi, even Democrats, helped them. The Democrats helped in order to offset the threat of the State Rights Dixiecrats, and the Republicans to help make capital of the split of the Democratic party.

High feelings that characterized the election were caused in great measure by the candidates themselves through their stands on civil rights. The inflammatory statements of Gov. J. Strom Thurmond appealed to traditionally violent southern elements.

Henry Wallace's southern tour and his open flaunting of Jim Crow customs helped get up the backs of southern die hards. President Truman's program for anti-lynch laws, FEPC and other rights measures further widened the breach that came in Philadelphia.

On the eye of the election, torchlight parades that were part political rally and part threat of force, were the order.

Nonetheless in the urban sections of Texas, Georgia, Virginia, Tennessee, North and South Carolina, and even Alabama, the Negro vote was desperately wooed. In many instances, the clashes that occurred in these states were between Democrat and Dixiecrat whites, over Negro voting.

However, in Florida, a gang of hoodlums were reported as beating two ex-GI's whom they suspected of election activities. Marauders near the Georgia line of South Carolina were accused of firing a Negro farmer's barn.

Negroes in Mississippi reported to NAACP watchers that they were victims of a slowdown in identification. While lines of whites moved rapidly, Negroes said they stood in line for hours trying to convince polling place officials of their identity. In smaller communities the old poll tax gag was pulled—even though poll tax on federal elections is illegal.

In several small southern communities, members of the Ku Klux Klan, in full bed-sheet regalia, staged election eve demonstrations in an effort to keep Negroes from the polls.

Sat 11-6-48

In others, whites, armed with shot guns loitered near the polls hoping to frighten timid Negroes seeking to vote. However, they made no move to prevent Negroes fro mcasting their ballots.

The unprecedented bitterness of the South, although it did not break out in violence in every area was caused by two realizations. For Negroes, this election involved their personal stake in civil rights and economic and social democracy. For die hard whites, it meant that the tide of civil rights must be turned back now before it swamps the entire Jim Crow system.

Vote Desperately Sought

In the North by contrast, the Negro vote was desperately hought by both major parties and the Progressives. In few elections has the "balance of power" factor been so important. President Truman demonstrated this when he wound up his campaign in Harlem. Dewey yielded to it with some last minute concessions to Negro aspirations. Wallace had long sought to make the Negro vote the core for his third party.

For every cracked skull, and for every broken home as a result of election and pre-election violence, thousands of Negroes asserted themselves at the polls. They will do it again and again. And no other presidential candidate can go to the white house without taking full account of this.

Let Negroes Vote

34e

Editor Constitution: I have lived in the South, and I know its problems. Negroes want desperately to vote. Let them. Amend the Constitution of your State to permit it. But let it be clearly understood and written into the amendment that they must vote for a white man. There can be no widespread objection to this. The wise among the colored population will realize that, in the fitness of things, the whites must be leaders in the South. After all, it is their land, conquered by them, and developed by their brains and money. But because they are the rulers, they have a responsibility to the Negro. They are bound to take care of his welfare, and insure him from acts of tyranny and violence.

The Constitution

Atlanta Ga.

I believe that there are very few whites who do not want to do right by the Negro, though naturally they do not want to do anything to impair their own position in the land. We need to reconstruct the Negro viewpoint. Shown in the right perspective, he can be brought to see that it is just and proper to vote for a white man, circumstances being what they are, and that it will be a tremendous step forward; that he will be helping to insure that the very best men in his State are returned to office.

The world is changing. Here in the United States situations are developing that must create a very great and prosperous South. The South must get ready for it. Already it is being looked upon as the best part of the United States to which to transfer factories and industries, or to start new ones. Our industries and our money will be safer there than along the Atlantic seaboard of our New England States, should an atomic war come. The big industrial cities of our coasts will be certain targets.

An exodus of industries to the South will mean a bigger white population, and more jobs for Negroes. Out of this must grow a greater prosperity and contentment for them as well as for the whites. With liberty to vote, without fear, racial feeling and bitterness will die of itself.

Political Revolution

Struggle Between Solid South and Negro Voters Eyed

The Courier Sat 2-21-48
Pittsburgh Pa.
(34)

By TRUXTON KING
(Courier Staff Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA—The greatest political revolution since slavery was abolished hangs on the outcome of the struggle between the solid South and the Negro voters of the Nation. The legislative recommendations made to Congress by President Truman two weeks ago have brought nearer that inevitable clash—and it must be won, if the Negro's status as an American citizen is to be substantially improved.

President Truman, in an effort to implement into law much of the report of his Commission on Civil Rights, made specific recommendations to Congress, which, if enacted into laws, would go far toward raising Negroes to the level of citizenship.

These recommendations not only included anti-lynch bills, FEPC legislation, and anti-poll tax laws, but they also covered discrimination in our transportation systems and educational institutions.

34e

It was worthy of note, too, that the President made certain specific statements concerning discrimination in the Armed Forces. He told Congress and the Nation that he had given instructions to Secretary of Defense James Forrestal about that matter, one which has been a sore spot for a long time.

Mr. Truman said: "I have instructed the Secretary of Defense to take steps to have the remaining instances of discrimination in the armed services eliminated as rapidly as possible. The personnel policies and practices of all the services in this regard will be made consistent."

He had taken note of the condition, which undoubtedly he must have observed at close range while he was Senator from Missouri and chairman of the Senate's Investigating Committee probing discriminations in the wartime Army and Navy.

He said that progress had been made since the close of the war in that direction, but his instructions were intended to implement that progress with direct action.

Although we attribute to President Truman the utmost of good faith, his attitude may have been influenced to some degree by the candidacy of Henry Wallace. All political experts know that Wallace is especially strong with the Negro people, and that if the intelligent Negro vote of the Nation was to be retained by the Democratic party, President Truman would have to appear as attractive to the Negro voters as Henry Wallace.

The reaction of the South to the Truman recommendations has been volcanic. In Jackson, Miss., 4,000 wildly cheering and stomping citizens demanded that the Truman program be opposed at all costs, even to the point of the South's seceding from the Democratic party.

On the floor of Congress, race-baiting Eugene Cox of Georgia said "President Truman's program sounds like the platform of the Communist party. The Harlem district of New York is still wielding more influence with the Administration than the entire white South."

A group of Southern senatorial leaders have discussed plans of abstaining from voting for Truman in the electoral college, thereby throwing the election to the Republican candidate.

Southern political leaders are disturbed by the turn of events because they know that Mr. Truman's action is bringing closer the decisive contest between the Negro voters of the North and the solid Democratic South.

These Southern leaders know that in this contest, time is on the side of the Negroes, as the Negro forces are bound to be strengthened by continued migration of Negroes to the North, while Southern forces cannot hope to grow stronger.

Southerners know that this fight within the Nation for the abolition of racial prejudice has an ally in the United Nations Organization. Although this organization may not have the power to legislate peace between the nations of the world, it is a powerful form of public opinion and the darker and mixed races of the world view with critical alarm America's attitude toward her Negro citizens.

These Southerners know that because of these factors, their clash with the Negro citizens must become more acute with time.

It was not until the Democratic Convention of 1944 that Negroes became a factor in a national convention of a major party in American politics. That convention was made tense by the antagonism between representatives of the Solid South and delegates coming from the populous metropolitan centers of the North, where the Negro is a political factor.

At that convention, James F. Byrnes, Secretary of State and former Justice of the Supreme Court, was bowled out as a candidate for Vice President because a South Carolinian would be objectionable to Negro voters of the North. And Henry Wallace was sidetracked for the Vice Presidency because he was objectionable to the Solid South.

During the last years of President Roosevelt's regime he was experiencing greater difficulty in keeping in the same party these two diametrically opposed forces. Many Negroes believed that Roosevelt was conceding too much to the South in his efforts to placate them on matters vitally affecting the interests of Negroes. For it must be conceded that on purely racial matters the late President Roosevelt was far from a stalwart champion.

It now appears that President Truman has discarded the struggle between these two forces which marked the late years of Roosevelt's regime, and is determined to insist upon a policy of fairness and squareness to the Negro voters of the Nation. It must be assumed that President Truman was fully aware of the political consequences of his action and considered that not only justice, but good politics was on his side.

What are the political positions of these two opposing forces?

The Solid South, consisting of Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Texas, Alabama, Arkansas and Oklahoma, has 125 electoral votes. These States are in the unfortunate position of having no place to go. They have always been Democratic except when three of them went Republican when Al Smith was the Democratic candidate for President in 1928.

These States could not go Republican without hurting the Republican party nationally. For the Republican party is as anxious as the Democratic party to obtain the Negro vote. These States would hardly go Republican, because the Republican party is supposed to be as liberal on the Negro question as the Northern wing of the Democratic party, and they would therefore have nothing to gain by a change of party on the race issue.

President Truman and other Democratic leaders must be aware that despite the threats and vows of the Solid South there is little or no likelihood that these States can be so offended that they would leave enmasse the Democratic party.

The great advantage that the Negroes have over the South is that they do have some place to go. And, in addition, they have grown sufficiently intelligent politically to be free from the domination of any one party. This is one of the great contributions that the late President Roosevelt made to the Negro people: he freed them from their serfdom to the Republican party.

Prior to the Roosevelt administration, 95 per cent of the Negro voters of the North voted Republican. Since 1933 Negroes have been independent in their political support, and have largely divided their votes in accordance with their best racial interests.

So both the Republican and Democratic parties of the Nation must and are vying for the Negro vote, with each knowing that whether it receives Negro support or not will largely depend upon its record with regard to the Negro people.

Each party also knows that victory in the 1948 Presidential race will go to that candidate who receives the overwhelming support of the Negro people. This is conclusively proven by an analysis of the electoral votes of the Northern and border States in which Negroes hold a balance of power.

The five million Negroes now in the North are strategically distributed so that they are the balance of power between the Republican and Democratic parties in New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, California, Kentucky, New Jersey, Indiana, Kansas, Maryland, Missouri, West Virginia, Tennessee and Delaware. These States have an electoral vote of 274, or eight more than the 266 electoral votes necessary to elect a President.

There can be no doubt that the Negroes hold the balance of power in these States, as their numbers in these localities have been greatly increased by the last exodus from the South which began during the last war and is still continuing. The number of Negroes in Northern metropolitan centers is now so great that it would be foolhardy for any party seeking a national victory to ignore the interests and welfare of these citizens.

From solely a political point of view, Negroes have become a more important force in national politics than their historical enemy, the South. For the Negro vote largely controls 274 electoral votes, while the Solid South can muster only 125.

Negro leaders have been conscious that this showdown fight with the South had to be won before their interests could be protected by adequate national legislation. They knew that as long as the South was a more important factor in the Presidential race than the Northern vote of Negroes, not only the Democratic party, but the Republican party as well, would not exert sincere efforts on behalf of protective legislation for Negroes which would offend the South.

They know that these Congressional fights over FEPC, poll tax and anti-lynching bills were mere sham battles, and that they could easily have been won for the Negro people if Congressional leaders had considered the Negro vote more important than the vote of the South.

They know that the filibusters of the South can easily be overcome, and that the Senate will vote for cloture (which would limit debate) and crush Southern opposition if there is sufficient political strength supporting beneficial Negro legislation.

Negro leaders have awaited the day when fate would put in the hands of their people sufficient ballots to overcome the cruel barbarism of the South. It now appears that that day is at hand. And that the Democratic party, traditional party of the South, has chosen to take up the fight of the Negro and let the chips fall where they may so far as the Southern States are concerned.

Judge J. Waties Waring Calls On Truman

S. C. Jurist Approves Equal Citizenship Rights

Sat. 12-11-48

WASHINGTON, D. C. — A federal jurist, who attracted nationwide attention in July, 1947, by declaring illegal South Carolina's white Democratic primary system, last Thursday said he believed colored people should be treated as American citizens.

Sat. 12-11-48

Judge J. Waties Waring of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of South Carolina made the statement to reporters after a White House visit with President Truman.

Judge Waring told reporters that he had come to see the president only to ask how he was and congratulate him on his election.

He told the president, he said, that some other people in South Carolina besides himself had voted the Truman-Barkley ticket, but not very many.

CIVIL RIGHTS

Asked whether he had discussed civil rights with the President, Judge Waring declined to comment.

Replying to a question as to how much support he had found among the white people in South Carolina for the position he had taken ordering the State Democratic Party to enroll colored voters and allow them full participation in party affairs, he said: "I find a large, incoherent support."

He explained that he had received many letters and had had many personal interviews in which individuals expressed support, but they were all confidential, and nobody in public life in the state had expressed any sympathy.

Asked whether he supported the President's civil rights program, he replied:

'What do you mean? Do you mean the Negro should be treated as an American citizen? Yes."

Asked about anti-lynching legislation, Judge Waring said he believed lynchers should be tried in federal courts. He said federal courts in the South probably would not convict them but there would be a much better chance of conviction.

Judge Waring called the poll tax "stupid", but said its abolition was a matter for the Congress.

"I believe that the Federal Government should protect all of its citizens in their civic rights and should see that they are treated as Americans," he declared.

Asked whether he had asked for the appointment with President Truman or had been invited to come to the White House, Judge Waring declined to say. Reporters afterwards speculated as to whether he was being considered for a higher judicial post.

Richland County Democrats Will Obey The Law

The Richland county Democratic executive committee, taking matters into its own hands in the absence of any remedial action by the state party authorities, has decided to open the Democratic enrolment books in Richland to Negroes as well as whites.

The decision was not announced in these precise words. What John I. Rice, county chairman, said was this:

"The books of enrolment are ordered open immediately; enrolment will proceed according to law."

S.C.

But to allow enrolment to proceed "according to law" means also to proceed contrary to the Democratic party rules, for the rules forbid the enrolment of any save "white Democrats."

Thurs. 6-10-4

By this act the committee has probably saved the Democratic party leaders in Richland county from the ignominy of trial and punishment for contempt of the federal courts, which have decreed that there can be no racial discrimination in the party and the primary.

Columbia S.C

The Richland committee had to construe that any rule of the Democratic party which conflicts with the opinions of the federal courts is null and void, as, of course, it is.

But this decision and this construction of the rules result in two systems of enrolment within the party and the state. In Richland and elsewhere where those in charge of the books have exercised the same right Negroes are allowed to enroll. In other sections they are denied the right to enroll, but allowed to vote without enrolment if they are qualified electors, a right denied the white electors, who do not also enroll.

And obviously there should be only one enrolment system for the state. The state Democratic convention, reconvened for this purpose, must change the rules to bring them into conformity with the decisions.

And to do this requires more than the change in the rules that the Richland committee has put into effect. The qualified Negro Democrats now are denied any voice in the party's affairs and are denied the right therefore to have their views represented in the party's choice of a nominee for the highest offices in the federal government, the presidency and the vice presidency.

Columbia, S.C.

The whole scheme adopted by the state convention was a scheme for evading Judge Waring's decision while pretending to accept the letter of it. Any primary conducted under it, as the party will discover when a new case is brought before the federal courts, will be an unlawful primary.

And this fact ought to have some interest for South Carolinians and particularly those South Carolinians who are candidates for the Congress. The Republicans now control both House and Senate. Barring a miracle, they will control both House and Senate next year, by even larger majorities.

By the constitution each house is the judge of the qualifications of its own members and the Republicans majority might decide that the South Carolina Senator and Representatives, chosen in an unlawful primary, were not qualified for seats in the Congress. South Carolina's representatives in the Congress, chosen in the primary, might therefore be denied their seats which could be given to the Republican candidates in the general election, if any, or the seats held vacant until properly qualified Representatives and Senators, according to Republican standards, should present themselves to be sworn.

This creates a situation too serious to allow the timidity of the politicians, who want to retain control of the party, to stand in the way of a second state convention to get the party and the primary into conformity with the law, the second convention which was anticipated when the convention recessed instead of adjourning.

Already there has been too much time wasted.

Negroes Vote In South Carolina's Primary As Party Seeks Legal Out

Chicago Defender

Chicago Illinois

COLUMBIA, S. C.—A day after the U. S. Supreme Court upheld the right of Negroes to vote in the South Carolina Democratic primary, 600 Negroes cast ballots here for their choice for public office, April 22.

It was the first time Negroes voted in such large numbers since white terrorists robbed them of the ballot in 1876.

Quick to salvage whatever they could of their autocratic rule from the court decision in favor of Negro voters, officials of the party issued an order calling for strict adherence to the letter of the ruling that "qualified" Negroes could vote.

Sat. 5-1-48

Dig Up Loopholes

Ability to read and write any section of the state constitution and ownership of property assessed at $300 or more are optional registration requirements.

The party order was seen as having two immediate effects which mean that the battle for the vote is still not won. They are:

Confining actual party membership to whites

2. Restricting Negro participation to the primary vote only as stated in the court order.

In this manner, Negroes will not be able to participate in party conventions, or to have a voice in the selection of candidates. Since the ruling did not cover general elections, a new court fight may be necessary to secure this right.

Sat. 5-1-48

Undaunted by the last ditch fight of the state Democratic organization were George A. Elmore, who brought the successful suit against the party, and his wife. They cast their ballots here and reported no irregularities.

In another section, however, the ballots of four Negroes were given to them in envelopes marked with their names.

Another Negro voter was John H. McCray, chairman of the South Carolina Progressive Democratic Party, the organization formed to combat the "closed club" white party.

Sat. 5-1-48

James M. Hinton, president of the state NAACP conference also cast his ballot without being molested. He said. "I'm happy as a lark. The election officials were very courteous."

S. C. DEMOCRATS OPEN BOOKS TO NEGRO DEMOS

The Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(ANP)—After a two hour session behind closed doors, Democratic party chiefs of the Richland County Democratic executive committee announced last week that the party books would be opened immediately. This has been considered as meaning that Negroes would be allowed to become members of the Democratic party.

Chairman John I. Rice made the following statements:

Thur, 6-17-48

"The books of enrollment (in the several wards and precincts) are ordered open immediately. Einrollment will proceed according to law."

Although Rice did not come out with a direct statement that Negroes would then be allowed to register, most observers believe that this is what his statement means. Rice said that this enrollment would proceed according "to the law of the land."

This 'law of the land" is believed to mean compliance with recent federal court rulings against the Richland Democrats which have given Negroes the right to vote in the state primaries despite a state law which gave political parties the right to choose their own membership. Under this law the Democrats excluded Negroes. This, in, effect, denied the colored people the right to vote because in this state the primaries are the real elections.

Thur

With the reopening of party books to voters Negroes have until June 22 to register. The books had been closed June 2 on advice from Christie Benet, a party attorney in the federal suit against the group by a Negro.

Although the meeting started out as an open meeting, sentiment changed when Walter H. Smith said: "I move we take all of the boks out and open them. The people in my ward (ward 7) want the book opened. I move we put the books in all the wards and go ahead and enroll."

Before any action could be taker on this motion, another motion aclled for an executive session and another asked that it be held behind closed doors. The group voted 17 tc 11 in favor of the closed meeting and all observors, including newspapermen were barred.

RULES CHANGE HINTED

Altthough Chairman Rice said the meeting was held to consider routine business, it is believe that the discussion was centered on the ruling of Federal Judge J. Waites Waring that "qualified Negro electors" be allowed to vote in the primaries, and also on the party oath which would have to be changed if Negroes vote.

Although Rice did not clarify the statement that the books would be opened it is assumed that Negroes would be allowed to become members of the party. J. M. Hinton, state president of the NAACP, said that he had written the Richland chairmen for such a clarification.

What the Richland county action means to the rest of the state is open to speculation only. In this county, the party officials and committeemen were the defendants in the federal case, but this was not so in othr counties.

Action by the state committee was not determined either. State head Baskin said he had no official statement on the actions of the county group. He told of a citizens' committee which called for a chance in the primary oath and a chance in orders to delegates to the national convention requiring them not to vote for President Truman or any other candidate who advocates civil rights legislation.

He said, "I have been receiving letters by the dozens so fast that I can't comment on every one of them However, most of the letters indicate that the people are satisfied with the action of the Democratic party in South Carolina.

In many instances the criticism of the party is the result of misinformation on the facts."

He added that he had made no decision on whether to call another state executive committee meeting.

Columbia's Ninth Ward List Shows 1,400 Negro Voters, Only 300 Whites

The Defender

By JOHN H. McCRAY

Chicago Ill

COLUMBIA, S. C.— Completely unmindful of threats posed by the Ku Klux Klan, rabble-rousing of Dixiecrats, and proud of their hard won right to vote, nearly 35,000 of the 40,000 enrolled Negro Democrats went to polls and dropped in their first ballots in a primary Tuesday, August 10.

Excepting about 300 who voted in a municipal election here April 20, it was the first time Negroes voted in a primary in South Carolina.

The South Carolina primary became operative in 1898. Negroes who were Democrats prior to that time had voted under the convention system.

Line Up Early

Even before polls opened at 8 a m. long lines had formed. In several heavily populated districts over the state, these appeared almost untouched when polls closed at 6 p. m.

At ward nine, Columbia's largest and at which 1,400 of the 1,700 enrolled persons are Negroes, exhausted workers looked up to see more than 100 left out when closing time came.

There wasn't a single incident reported anywhere in the State. A week before, Rep. L. Mendel Rivers in the first district at Charleston and others had predicted there would be blood shed.

For several weeks, leading to the primary, the Ku Klux Klan had reared its head, with cross burnings and parades reported here, in Aiken and other counties.

Burn Crosses

Sat 8-21-48

In fact, Monday night, on the eve of the primary, klansmen erected and fired two huge crosses, one on either side of the Storm Branch Baptist church in Aiken county, where James M. Hinton, state NAACP president, addressed a packed building on voting procedures.

Two nights earlier, klansmen had staged a 75 mile parade from the border of Georgia to the state capitol and back, the motorcade holding several cars with Georgia licenses.

In Saluda county, one enrollee showed up with a KKK letter of warning. He was among the first to vote Tuesday morning.

At the Storm Branch church, Negroes applauded and almost lifted the rafters with laughter when Hinton suggested: "Tell these white folk they better save this wood they are burning. They tell me there is a lumber shortage on, and that wood is going to be hard to get this winter."

Voting Quiet

The nearest to "incidents" reported during the balloting came from Charleston and Columbia.

Negroes voted generally against certain candidates and in numerous instances, candidates they had selected were victorious, got into the runoff on August 24 or ran close races.

Sat 8-21-48

Although U S. Senate Burnet R. Maybank was victorious, he had little backing from Negroes, who came out in large numbers at Charleston, his home city, and other places because of their great dislike for his stands on lynching and anti-poll tax legislation, as well as his denunciation of President Truman.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—In its issue for Aug. 12, The Nashville Tennessean carried the following editorial: "Tennesseans, long accustomed to Negroes voting, will note without the slightest surprise that South Carolina is still on the map following its first general primary in more than a generation in which colored citizens voted—a primary without an untoward event or an unexpected development.

ORDERLY ELECTION

"The election was orderly, as it should have been. The results would probably have been the same if the 30,000 Negro voters had not cast their ballots. Pitchfork Ben Tillman, who ruled the wild white primaries that followed the exclusion of the Negroes from the polls, could not have believed his eyes had he seen the 1948 drawing-room-mannered primary.

"An interesting angle of the election was that Senator Maybank and his four unsuccessful opponents for the Senate all denounced the decision of Judge J. W. Waring which opened the election to Negroes, leaving the latter to take their choice.

"As in the Upper South for decades, so in the Lower South Negro voting will soon be an accepted part of the political picture and South Carolina's long fight to avoid the inevitable will be quickly forgotten. Significantly enough, it was South Carolina itself which made the decision.

WORING A "BLUE-BLOOD"

"The judge who smote down the subterfuge that the Democratic party was a private white political club and then cast aside the last-ditch scheme of excluding Negroes by test oaths was a Charlestonial of long family standing.

"True, he was a Federal district judge, but he was one of their own instead of a 'damyankee' in impatiently calling on his native State to 'rejoin the union.'

"The problem of the South hereafter is not whether Negroes shall vote, but whether they shall vote intelligently. The same may be said of the overwhelming majority of the whites who by the poll tax have also been excluded from the polls. The first and best step is the conferring of the suffrage itself. For South Carolina Negroes, school may be said to have opened.

"Meanwhile, as to the outcome of the Senatorical race, it may be observed that Senator Maybank's easy victory demonstrates among other things the advantage which incumbency and patronage control give in a State where only a small minority of citizens vote."

Race Vote Controls Southern Elections

Negro voters in two Southern States went to the polls last week and cast their ballots in decisive fashion. They completely dominated the nomination of a Democratic candidate for Governor of Arkansas who backed civil rights and defeated a Dixiecrat. In South Carolina 35,000 turned out—voting for the first time since 1876 in the Democratic primary of that State. There were no "incidents" reported.

35,000 Vote in S. C. Without Any 'Incidents'

(Special to The Pittsburgh Courier)

Sat 8-21-48

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Bucking Ku Klux Klan warnings and determined to walk "Freedom Road" again, 35,000 of the estimated 0,000 who enrolled for Democratic primaries Tuesday, went to the 1,565 polling places in South Carolina without incident.

There wasn't a single "incident" reported, which belied the "blood-shedding" cry made in Congress the week before by First District Representative L. Mendel Rivers of Charleston.

The nearest thing to an "incident" occurred at Ward Nine in Columbia. The threatened trouble there was because Negroes, numbering 1,400 of the 2,700 enrollees at the largest precinct in Richland County, were not casting their votes for candidates who very much wanted and needed them.

Sat 8-21-48

CHARLESTON, S. C.—Robert Figg, an attorney for white South Carolina Democrats, said here Saturday that his group will appeal the decision of Federal Judge J. Waties Waring if the judge issued a permanent ruling forcing admission of Negroes into the Democratic party.

Long before polls opened at 8 A. M., Negroes had formed lines which, in the heaviest precincts, appeared almost untouched when voting ceased at 6 P. M.

One woman at Columbia's Ward Nine seeing the zero hour come and her chance to vote gone, wept softly. "All my life I have waited for this day," she cried. "Now it passes along without me."

GA. KLAN INVADES

True to rumors, Klansmen strove desperately to dampen the voting spirit of citizens who had assiduously for six years. Several crosses had been reported burned here and elsewhere in the State following a court order of July 16, under which Negroes gained the right to enroll, as well as vote, in the primaries.

Saturday night, a Klan motorcade, believed to have begun at the Georgia border line, within a mile of Augusta, Ga., drove withing the shadow of the South Carolina capitol dome, returning over the same route. A huge white cross adorned the hood of the lead car. Participants wore robes. Several of the cars bore Georgia license plates. There were several reported appearances on election day eve.

James M. Hinton, State NAACP president, reported that when he arrived at the Storm Branch Baptist Church in Aiken County to address a capacity audience on voting Monday night, two eight-foot crosses flamed, one on either side of the church. However, residents paid it little attention and almost lifted the rafters with laughter and applause when he suggested: "Tell these white folk they better save that wood they are burning; they tell me there is shortage of lumber on and that wood is going to be very hard to get this winter."

Sat 8-21-48

Whatever fear whites may have had over Negro voting disappeared during the day. Several whites were observed jostling Negroes in lines at Charleston. Prepared for such incidents, the Negroes merely smiled, stepped back to allow superfluous room, and said not a word. At receiving this treatment, and under jeering from non-offending whites, the jostlers would redden. But this disappeared by noon.

Another theory was also evaporated Tuesday. Workers for various candidates were busy appealing and passing out cards to these first-time voters, suggesting that even in hard-hearted South Carolina, men aspiring to public office want only votes

MARSHALL PLEASED

Thurgood Marshall, special NAACP counsel who had spent a week in the State before and through the election, reported from Charleston early in the day that white persons had expressed surprise to him and others that Negroes came out to vote in the Sunday best.

Despite having only about 10 per cent of votes cast in the primary, Negroes saw many of their personally selected candidates go into office, get into the runoff primary on Aug. 24, or make it a very hot race for their single opposition.

As a sort of symbolic climax to the day, the first primary votes they had cast in a South Carolina primary, these new citizens held a testimonial for Thurgood Marshall at Allen University and gave him a Hamilton wrist watch, two boxes of white shirts and a portable radio.

CALHOUN FALLS, S. C.—Told that white mobsters planned to "finish him" for having voted in Democratic primaries Aug. 10, and just released from a hospital where a severe beating and slashing had sent him, the Rev. Archie Ware, 66, pastor of four Baptist churches and moderator of the Savannah Valley Baptist Association, fled his home here last Saturday night and one week later had also fled the State.

The successful elderly pastor who owns an attractive home here on Lee Street, nine acres of land elsewhere in the town and operates a modest grocery, had been brutally beaten by a group of four or five men led by a man he recognized as John Black, a candidate for the office of county auditor in the primary, slashed in three places and advised against continuing to preach in churches, some of which he has pastored for thirty-one years.

Fleeing first to Oconee County and the sanctuary of friends, the Rev. Mr. Ware went to Columbia where his pitiful story was told to State Progressive Democratic and NAACP leaders Tuesday.

His stitches, eleven in the left thigh, and thirteen in the right side, were removed by a Columbia physician, and the minister left in the custody of a daughter and two sons for Evanston, Ill.

34e

Behind are his terror-stricken wife, Mrs. Georgia Ware; a son, Calvin, and 40-year-old invalid daughter, Miss Lottie Belle Ware.

The Rev. Mr. Ware said he attempted to enroll at the establishment of one Samuel J. Dixon, enrollment clerk for the Calhoun Falls precinct, July 19—three days after U. S. District Court Judge J. Waites Waring of Charleston, had issued a temporary injunction, under which Negroes won the right to enroll in the Democratic party with whites.

Sat 8-28-48

At first, Dixon told him the books weren't there; disputed with the fact that county Democratic chairman J. Nichols had announced they were in Dixon's custody, the later is quoted as exploding: "I don't give a d——n. I'm not a gonna write down the name of one d——n n——r in these books."

The Rev. Mr. Ware left but returned July 20 and finding the book in custody of two young white men at the time, did sign his name in them. Immediately, he rushed out and caused around two hundred other Negroes to enroll within two or three days.

However, enrollment ended abruptly when a man the minister identifies as John Black, candidate for county auditor, threatened Harold Bryant, a Negro who had affixed his name to the books.

No Negroes attempted enrollment after this incident.

The Rev. Mr. Ware went to cast his first Democratic vote Aug. 10, between 10 and 11 A. M. Parking his car one block from the Calhoun Falls white high school gymnasium, where balloting took place. About a score of white men were standing before the building with two city officers. Black was among the spectators, he said. He identified the officers as Bill Powell, local police chief, himself and candidate for the office of county sheriff in the primary, and "Liver" Moore, an officer.

Sat 8-28-48

"I spoke to all of them politely," the Rev. Mr. Ware continued, "and went into the building to vote. They looked up my name and gave me my ballots. After marking these, I dropped them in the boxes, got my hat and started out.

"As I stepped out of the door, Mr. Black confronted me with a club. Seeing he intended to hit me I threw up my hands and caught some blows and backed towards where the officers stood.

"When I reached the officers and noticed they weren't going to protect me, I turned quickly to my right and must have dropped my hands a little, because Black hit me on the side of my head two or three times.

"The blows stunned and slowed me. One of the men stabbed my thigh, but I was able to twist and turn enough to break out of the ring and ran towards my house, which wasn't more than two blocks away.

"I made it for about 150 yards, but collapsed. There, on my back, I warded off Mr. Black's club and did my best to keep them from cutting me to death. One of them, however, slashed me with a hooked-nose pocket-knife in right side of my stomach. He had threatened first: 'I ought to cut your d——n throat'."

The pastor said an arrival pleaded with Black and the others, "Don't cut him anymore. That's enough," which apparently saved his life.

He made his way some 300 feet to the office of Dr. Ward, white, who gave him first aid and then took him to the Memorial Hospital in Abbeville, fifteen miles east of here.

Of the approximately two hundred Negroes enrolled to vote here, the Rev. Mr. Ware, so far as could be ascertained, was the sole Negro voter.

Sat 8-28-48

Expecting violence by Klan-inspired whites, employers of Negroes had advised them against attempting to vote. However, the Rev. Mr. Ware said he hadn't had such advice and added: "I heard about it after I got out of the hospital. I don't know if it would have made any difference anyway.

"The time has come for our people to take the necessary chances for their rights. If I cannot help to show the way, then I don't deserve the respect and support my people have bestowed upon me. My head is bloody, but unbowed."

Affidavits and other materials incidental with his case have been filed with the U. S. Department of Justice. State leaders at Columbia were also probing for possible State-sponsored legal action.

SOUTH CAROLINA'S 35,000

Some 35,000 colored citizens voted in South Carolina's Democratic primary election last week.

They were able to do so because Federal Judge J. Waties Waring, a native Charlestonian, had threatened jail terms for any persons who denied colored people the right to vote.

Last week's voters had little to choose from among five candidates for the U. S. Senate, all of whom were bitter in their denunciation of Judge Waring. They had to vote for what they considered to be the best of five bad candidates.

Baltimore, Md

Next year, however, and the year after, they are likely to get men who will be more considerate of their interests. No State-wide candidate, even in South Carolina, can long sneer at 35,000 persons who go to the polls.

BASKIN MAKES RULING

White Persons Must Enroll, Only Negroes May Vote On Registration Certificates

White persons must be enrolled members of the state Democratic party if they wish to vote in party primaries, state party executive chairman W. P. Baskin has ruled. Unlike Negroes, they cannot vote on their general election registration certificate.

The Charleston county Democratic executive committee chairman, Francis F. Coleman, said he had this ruling from Baskin in a telephone conversation yesterday.

Coleman explained the ruling was requested when many persons had the impression here that presentation of a general election registration certificate at the primary polling places would permit them to vote.

This applies only to Negroes, Coleman said Baskin ruled, in conformity with a recently-upheld federal court decision that the party must give "qualified Negro electors" a vote in its primaries.

The general election registration certificate is evidence, the party has held, that the holder is a qualified elector.

The court decision made no mention of qualified white electors.

Baskin's ruling is merely a restatement of the action taken by the state Democratic convention last week, but was made in answer to inquiries by persons who apparently misunderstood the action of that body.

What the convention did was to use the term "qualified elector" as used in the Waring court opinion holding that Negroes must be allowed to vote. The convention voted to let only those Negroes vote in the primary who are "qualified electors," or who hold general election registration certificates.

As to white persons, they may vote by signing the party's enrolment books. They are not required to be qualified electors, under the convention's action, and Baskin explains today that they cannot use their registration certificates, even if they have them; they must enroll to qualify.

S.C. Told Political Party Not Same as Private Club

The Afro-American

Baltimore, Md. Sat. 1-24-48

Decision Outlawing White Primary Upheld; Similar Orders to Other Southern States Cited

RICHMOND—"The fundamental error in defendant's (South Carolina's) position consists in the premise that a political party is a mere private aggregation of individuals, like a country club, and that the primary is a mere piece of party machinery."

Around this statement, the Fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals based its decision upholding the July, 1947 ruling of U.S. District Judge J. Waites Waring which outlawed the white primary in South Carolina and ordered the State "to rejoin the Union."

"No election machinery," the appelate court stated further, "can be upheld if its purpose or effect is to deny to the Negro, on account of his race or color, any effective voice in the government of his country or the State or community in which he lives."

Furthermore, the decision pointed out, "The disfranchised can never speak with the same force as those who are able to vote."

Acting for Group of People

The entire decision follows:

This is an appeal from a decree adjudging that colored people are entitled to vote in Democratic primary elections in South Carolina and enjoining defendants, who conduct such elections from denying to colored electors the right to vote therin.

Plaintiff, who has brought this as a class suit in behalf of all colored electors similarly situated, is a colored man duly qualified to vote under the Constitution and laws of the State of South Carolina.

He has been denied the right to vote in the Democratic primary of that State by rules promulgated by the Democratic Party limiting the right to vote in the primary to white persons.

The defendants are officials of the Democratic Party of South Carolina, who have charge of the primary in the county and precinct where plaintiff resides.

Legal Question the Only One

The only question presented by the appeal is the correctness of the declaration as to the right to vote contained in the decree appealed from and the validity of the injunction therin granted.

Plaintiff contends that the decree should be upheld under the 14th and 15th Amendments of the Constitution and the provisions of the Civil Rights Acts.

Defendant contends that, because there has been no statutory regulation of primaries in South Carolina since the repeal in 1944 of the statutes relating thereto, the constitutional limitation on State action relied on by the plaintiff is consequently no jurisdiction in the court to grant declaratory or injunctive relief.

Considered Selves Private Group

They argue that defendants in the action complained of were acting, not as State officials, but as members of the Democratic party which, they say, is a voluntary political association which can exercise unrestricted choice of membership.

The Afro-American

There is no dispute as to the facts, which are fully and fairly set fourth in the opinion of the District Judge. See Elmore et al, v. Rive et al, 72 F. Supp. 516. They may be briefly summarized as follows:

Baltimore, Md.

For half a century or more the Democratic Party has absolutely controlled the choice of elective officers in the State of South Carolina.

Sat 1-24-48

The real elections within that State have been contests within the Democratic party the general elections serving only to ratify and give legal validity to the party choice.

Few Vote in General Elections

So well has this been recognized that only a comparative few persons participate in the general elections. In the election of 1946, for instance, 290,223 votes were cast for governor in the Democratic primary, only 26,326 in the general election.

In South Carolina, as in most other states of the Union, the primary had become an integral part of the election machinery recognized and regulated by law.

Article II, sec. 10, of the State Constitution of 1895, directed that the Legislature provide by law for the regulation of party primary elections, and pursuant thereto a complete set of primary laws had been adopted and were in effect when the Supreme Court of the U.S. decided, the case of Smith v. Allwright, 321, US 649, holding that the right in a primary election held under State law might not be denied on the ground of race or color.

Governor Defies Court

Immediately following this decision, the then governor of South Carolina convened the State Legislature and recommended that it repeal all laws with relation to primaries with the avowed purpose of preventing voting by colored persons in the Democratic primaries of the State.

Pursuant to this, recommendation, the primary laws of the State were repealed and the Democratic primary was conducted thereafter under rules prescribed by the Democratic Party.

That the primary when conducted by the party fulfilled the same function in the election machinery of the State and was managed in practically the same way as when conducted under State law does not admit of doubt.

Procedure Explained

With respect to this, the District judge, after describing the procedure when the statutes regulating the primary were in effect, went on to say:

> "In 1944 substantially the same process was gone through, although at that time and before the State Convention assembled, the statutes had been repealed by action of the general assembly, heretofore set out.
>
> "The State convention that year adopted a complete new set of rules and regulations, these, however, embodying practically all of the provisions of the repealed statutes. Some minor changes were made but these amounted to very little more than the usual change of procedure in detail from year to year.
>
> "In 1946 substantially the same procedure was used in the organization of the Democratic party and another set of rules adopted which were substantially the same as the 1944 rules, excepting that the voting age was lowered to 18, and party officials were allowed the option of using voting machines and the rules relative to absentee voting were simplified."

The Afro-American

The question presented for our decision is whether, by permitting a party to take over a part of its election machinery, a State can avoid the provisions of the Constitution forbidding racial discrimination in elections and can deny to a part of the electorate, because of race and color, any effective voice in the government of the State.

It seems perfectly clear that this question must be answered in the negative.

Baltimore

Can't Be Considered Private

In the summing up of their argument, counsel for defendants say in their brief,

Md.

"Plaintiff has no more, right to vote in the Democratic primary in the State of South Carolina than to vote in the election of officers of the Forest Lake Country Club or for the officers of the Colonial Dames of America, which principle is precisely the same."

The party may, indeed, have been a mere private aggregation of individuals in the early days of the Republic, but with the passage of the years, political parties have become in effect State institutions, governmental agencies through which sovereign power is exercised by the people.

Voice of People Involved

Party primaries are of more recent growth.

Sat,

Originating in the closing years of the last century as a means of making parties more responsive to the popular will in the nomination of candidates for office, they had been adopted by 1917 in all except four of the States of the Union as a vital and integral part of the State election machinery.

Encyclopedia of Social Sciences Vol. 6 p. 396.

The relation of the primary to the election was well stated by Mr. Justice Pitney in his concurring opinion in Newberry v. U.S. 256, 232, 285, where he said:

> "It seems to me too clear for discussion that primary elections and nominating conventions are so closely related to the final election, and their proper regulation so essential to effective regulation of the latter, so vital to representative government, that power to regulate them is within the general authority of Congress.
>
> "It is a matter of common knowledge that the great mass of the American electorate is grouped into political parties, to one or the other of which voters adhere with tenacity; due to their divergent views on questions of public policy, their intersts, sentimental and historical.
>
> "So strong with the great majority of voters are party associations, so potent the party slogan, so effective the party organization, that the likelihood of a candidate succeeding in an election without party nomination is practically negligible.
>
> "As a result, every voter comes to the polls on the day of the general election confined in his choice to those few candidates who have received party nominations, and constrained to consider their eligibility, in point of personal fitness, as affected by their party associations and their obligations to pursue more or less definite lines of policy, with which the voter may or may not agree.
>
> "As a practical matter, the mass of voters is predetermined when the nominations have been made."

As primaries have become imbedded in the election machinery of the country, there has come gradually a recognition by the courts of the functions they perform and the application of them to the laws relating to elections.

Ruling on Classic Case

In the Newberry case, supra, decided in 1921, the Supreme Court, by a bare majority, had held the Federal Corrupt Practice Act not applicable to a primary election held for U.S. Senator under a law adopted prior to the 17th Amendment.

The Afro-American

In Classic v. U.S. 313 U. S.299, decided in 1941, however, it was expressly held that a primary was an election within the meaning of Article 1, Section 4, of the Constitution; and the court pointed out that the Newberry case could not be considered authority to the contrary.

Baltimore, Md.

Defiance in Texas

In Nixon v. Herndon, 273 US, 536, a Texas statute forbidding colored persons to participate in Democratic primaries was held violative of the 14th Amendment.

Following that decision, the statute was repealed and a law enacted authorizing the executive committee of a political party to prescribe who might vote in its primaries, and under it the Democratic executive committee adopted a resolution limiting participation in the Democratic primary to white persons.

Sat. 1-24-48

The exclusion of colored persons from voting pursuant to this resolution was held violative of the 14th Amendment in Nixon v. Condon 286 U.S. 73, the court saying:

"The test is not whether the members of the executive committee are representatives of the State in the strict sense in which an agent is the representative of his principal.

"The test is whether they are to be classified as representatives of the State to such an extent and in such a sense that the great restraints of the Constitution set limits to their action."

Overruled in Smith Case

The Texas law was again amended to eliminate delegation of authority to the executive committee, and thereupon the Democratic State Convention, without statutory authority for so doing, limited the right to participate in the Democratic primary to white persons.

The Afro-American

The exclusion of a colored man from voting in the Democratic primary pursuant to this action was held not violative of the Constitutional right in Grovey v. Townsend 205 U S. 45; but Grovey v. Townsend was expressly overruled a few year later in Smith v. Allwright, supra, 321 U.S. 649, where the court said:

When primaries become a part of the machinery for choosing officials, State and national, as they have here, the same tests to determine the character of discrimination or abridgement should be applied to the primary as are applied to the general election.

State Can't Deny Right

"The U.S. is a constitutional democracy. Its organic law grants to all citizens a right to participate in the choice of elected officials without restrictions by any State because of race.

"This grant to the people of the opportunity for choice is not to be nullified by a State through casting its electoral process in a form which permits a private organization to practice racial discrimination in the election.

"Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be thus indirectly denied. Lane v. Wilson 307 U.S. 285, 275.

"The privilege of membership in a party may be, as this court said in Grovey v. Townsend 295 U.S. 45, 55, no concern of a State. But when, as here, that privilege is also the essential qualification for voting in a primary to select nominees for a general election, the State makes the action of the party the action of the State."

Baltimore, Md.

It is true, as defendants point out, that the primary involved in Smith v. Allwright was conducted under the provisions of State law and not merely under party rules, as is the case here, but we do not think this a controlling distinction.

State Guilty With Party

In King v. Chapman, 62 F. Supp. 639, it was held that because the Democratic primary was an integral part of the electoral process of the State of Georgia, a colored man might be excluded from voting therin.

The judgement in fovor of the plaintiff was affirced on appeal (Chapman v. King, 5 Cir. 154 F. 2d 4600 in an opinion based on the ground that the State collaborated in the primary and put its power behind the rules of the party.

Sat. 1-24-48

The appellate court intimated that it did not consider "of great legal significance" some matters to which we attribute importance; but, while we have great respect for that court, we are, of course, not bound by these expressions of poinion.

It is worth noting, however, that the court emphasized in its opinion that "it (the State of Georgia) adopts the primary as a part of the public election machinery."

Specific Rule Not Needed

Where this is done as a matter of fact and custom, the presence or absence of statutory regulation of the primary does not seem a matter of controlling importance.

State law relating to the general election gives effect to what is done in the primary and makes it just as much a part of the election machinery of the State by which the people choose their officers as if it were regulated by law, as formerly.

Elections in South Carolina remain a two-step process, whether the party primary be accounted a primary of the general election, or the general election be regarded as giving effect to what is done in the primary; and those who control the Democratic party as well as the State government cannot, by placing the first of the steps under officials of the party rather than of the State, absolve such offcials from the limitations which the Federal Constitution imposes.

Limited by Constitution

When these officials participate in what is a part of the State's election machinery, they are election officers of the State de facto if not in de jure, and as such must obsrve the limitations of th e Constitution. 1-24-48

Having undertaken to perform an important function relating to the exercise of soverisnity by the people, they may not violate the fundamental principles laid down by the Constitution for its exercise.

The Afro-American

Cf. Steele v. L. and N.R. Co. 323 U.S. 192; Kerr v. Enoch Pratt Free Library 4 Cir. 149 F. 2d 212. As said in the case cited, "We know of no reason why the State cannot create separate agencies to carry on its work in this manner, and when it does so, they become subject to the constitutional restraints imposed upon the State itself."

Subtle Discriminantion Scored

Even though the election laws of South Carolina be fair upon their face, yet, if they be administered in such a way as to result in persons being denied any real voice in the government because of race and color, it is idle to say that the power of the State is not being used in violation of the Constitution.

As said in Yick v. Hopkins 118 U.S. 356, 373-374, "Though the law itself be fair on its face and impartial in appearance, yet, if it is appliedd and administered by public authority with an evil eye and an unequal hand, so as practically to make unjust and illegal discrimination between persons in similar circumstances, material to their rights, the denial of equal justice is still within the prohibition of the Constitution."

Protction of Right Ordered

It is pointed out in the case of U.S. v. Classic, supra, 313 U.S. 299, that the right to vote in the primary and to have one's vote counted is to be protected, not only where State law has made the primary an integral part of the procedure of choice, but also where in fact it effectively controls the choice, as is unquestionably true in South Carolina. The court said in that case:

Baltimore, Md.

"From time immemorial an election to public office has been in point of substance no more and no less than the expression by qualified electors of their choice candidates. Long before the adoption of the Constitution the form and mode of that expression had changed from time to time.

"There is no historical warrant for supposing that the framers were under the illusion that the method of effecting the choice of the electors would never change or that, if it did, the change was for that reason to be permitted to defeat the right of the people to choose representatives for Congress which the Constitution had guaranteed.

"The right to participate in the choice of representatives for Congress includes, as we have said, the right to cast a ballot and have it counted at the general election, whether for successful candidate or not.

"Where the State law has made the primary an integral part of the procedure of choice, or where in fact the primary effectively controls the choice, the right of the elector to have his ballot counted at the primary is liekwise included in the right protected by Article 1, Section 2.

Sat.

"And this right of participation is protected just as is the right to vote at the election, where the primary is by law made an integral part of the election machinery, whether the voter exercises his right in a party primary which invaribly, sometimes or never, determines the ultimate choice of the representative.

1-24-48

"Here, even apart from the circumstance that the Louisiana primary is made by law an integral par t ofth ep smiirf nhtr- ET TAa part of the procedure of choice, the right to choose a representative is in fact controlled by the primary because, as is alleged in the indictment, the choice of candidates at the Democratic primary determines the choice of the elected representatives."

An essential feature of our form

"Starting with the study of the report of the President's Civil Rights Committee, we proclaim as our immediate objective the furthering of the study of this document and announce our intention to work toward the abolition of segregation now in public assemblies and on common carriers."

One clause affecting educational institutions in the report of the committee on by-laws was voted down by the group after fears were expressed that its adoption would have a tendency to 'drive away some persons' not willing yet to go quite so far.

The Afro-American

That clause would have committed the organization to the task of working "for the opening of all institutions of higher learning to students on the basis of academic qualifications, not on the basis of race or religion."

Three Vice-Presidents

Under the by-laws adopted, the group will have a president, 3 vice-presidents, 2 secretaries and a treasurer as principal officers. These, and heads of five committees—legal, program, membership, liaison and publicity—will constitute the executive board.

Principal officers are to be elected annually for 1-year terms, while committee chairmen are to be named by the president and approved by the executive board. Elections are to be held in June of each year, officers elected taking office in September.

Baltimore, Md.

Monthly meetings are to be held from September through June and on call during July and August. Call may be issued by the president or any five members of the body. Annual fees are $1 for general members, 50 cents for students and $5 for "contributing" members.

The Rev. Thomas Allen of the Virginia Council of Churches served as temporary chairman until the group was organized formelly Wednesday night. 1-24-48

SOUTH CAROLINA

The Man They Love to Hate

Time

For the first time in history, South Carolina Negroes voted freely last week in the Democratic primary; by evening of election day nearly 35,000 had cast their ballots. To old families in the mansions along Charleston's historic Battery, as to most South Carolinians across the state, this was sacrilege. But proud Charleston spent its bitterness on the cause, rather than the effect of this enormous social change. It charged it all up to cold-eyed, 68-year-old Federal Judge J. Waties Waring.

Mon 8-23-48

Chicago Ill

Antique Grandeur. Judge Waring was one of Charleston's own. He was born of an old and honored family; he married a Charleston girl. He was appointed to the bench January 1942 on the recommendation of the late Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith. Until he was 65, he abided by the insular mores of Charleston's first families and devoted himself to the dusty grandeur of Charleston's traditions.

Associated Press

Judge Waring

Cause.

Three years ago, after 32 years of marriage, he and his wife got a Florida divorce (South Carolina has no divorce laws). The judge married a Connecticut woman. He was instantly ostracized. He did not take it well. Charleston lawyers complained that he grew more vituperative and irascible month by month. But as time wore on, he also grew more liberal in his opinions. His onetime friends did not consider the possibility that an elderly man might gain a new and deeper understanding of justice and the law. They whispered that he was "out to get his revenge."

Last July they were sure of it. Judge Waring ordered the Democratic Party to open its enrollment books to Negroes and permit them "full participation in party affairs." He went even further. When a white man, Senatorial Candidate Alan Johnstone, rose to protest, the judge had him forcibly ejected. He told the crowd of Negroes who jammed his courtroom: "It is a disgrace when you have to come . . . and ask a judge to tell you how to be an American." Mon 8-23-48

He was jeered and denounced. When lightning struck a house next to his summer cottage on Sullivan's Island beach, its owner nailed up a neatly lettered sign: "Dear God, He Lives Next Door." Every man entered in South Carolina's senatorial race vilified him during the campaign. Congressman L. Mendel Rivers sought to institute impeachment proceedings against him, cried: "Unless he is removed . . . there will be bloodshed. He is now in the process of extracting a pound of flesh from the white people of South Carolina because, through his own actions, he has been ostracized from their society."

Exaggerating

The Record Columbia, S.C. Tues. 1-13-48

The Charleston News and Courier quotes one of the "representatives" of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored Peoples as proclaiming that "the courts have given the Negroes in South Carolina a new freedom by opening the Democratic primaries to them" and that "they will vote in large numbers."

This greatly exaggerates the effect of the district and the circuit court of appeals decisions.

Negroes in limited numbers have voted in South Carolina primaries before now and Negroes have always had the right to vote in the general elections. If they had wanted to take over the state government of South Carolina less than 25,000 votes would have given them the elections in 1930, 1934 and 1942. 1-13-48

But not even 25.000 wanted to vote.

Lynch-Trial County Lets Negroes In Primary

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Mon. 6-14-48

By JOHN N. POPHAM.

Special to The New York Times and The Courier-Journal.

Greenville, S. C., June 13.—In action unprecedented in the history of this region, the Greenville County Democratic Executive Committee has decided to open its roll books and ballot boxes to permit Negroes to vote in the party primaries.

The move came just 13 months after an all-white jury of 12 men here had voted to acquit 23 fellow townsmen who admitted participation in the lynching of a Negro accused of slaying a taxi driver.

The decision struck at the party-primary control of the state executive committee and convention. It also emphasized the paradoxical picture in which a community with a record of efforts to improve race relations became the focal point of national attention because of the lynching trial.

3 Issues Disputed.

The Courier-Journal

The committee broke with the state control on three main issues. They were the opening of the roll books to Negroes, permitting Negroes to vote on the same basis with whites, and the setting aside of a new registration oath that would have been obnoxious to Negroes. Louisville, Ky.

Greenville County, with 175,000 people, has the largest population of any county in the state. The committee's action was regarded as one of the most important developments in the state's political annals. Political observers here said the decision stemmed from "enlightened leadership." Mon.

There have been reports that Richland County, where Columbia, the capital, is located, made virtually similar decisions recently, but no public announcement has been made, and Greenville officially is the first county to take such action. 5-14-48

Anderson Negroes Vote In Primary For Initial Time

The Record Columbia, S.C.

ANDERSON, May 25—(AP)—Negroes voted in a municipal primary here today for the first time in history. About 100 of the 4,608 registered voters were Negroes. They voted to nominate a mayor and seven aldermen.

The candidates for mayor are William C. Johnston and David Martin. Tues. 5-25-48

The ballot also included two referendum questions: whether there should be a city manager, and whether later elections will select aldermen on a city-wide rather than upon a ward basis.

Go To The Polls And Vote Today

The Record

Columbia Democratic voters, whites and Negroes, go to the polls today to select two nominees to city council, with nomination being equivalent to election.

Every qualified person—and the qualifications are for this one election, coming immediately behind the supreme court's decision, different for the two races since there was no opportunity for the Negroes to enroll after the court's decision was announced only yesterday—should vote. Columbia S.C.

For there are vital issues at stake in the primary, issues relating to city finance and improvement, affecting every taxpayer and every citizen. Tues. 4-20-48

The primary offers these taxpayers and citizens a chance to make a choice. If they choose wisely the city of Columbia may benefit, if the three members of city council, already in office, will cooperate with the new members to carry out their programs outlined in the campaign. Or, if this doesn't happen, then the citizens may remedy this in the next election. 4-20-48

But to exercise this choice every qualified voter must vote. The choice made should be the choice of the majority of the qualified voters of Columbia, not simply the choice of the politicians who too often control elections in Columbia and everywhere through default of the voters. Tues.

Baskin Backs Negro Voting Right In SC

The Record Columbia, S.C.

BISHOPVILLE, May 25—(AP)—Chairman W. P. Baskin of the state Democratic executive committee has assured "qualified Negro electors" that they may vote in party primaries this summer. Tues.

Baskin said in a press statement yesterday: 5-25-48

"Every qualified Negro elector will have the opportunity of voting in the coming Democratic party primary as a matter of right under Democratic party rules by taking the party oath and presenting his registration certificate.

"As state chairman, I shall see that the rule is carried out."

He referred to a rule recently adopted by the executive committee and the state party convention.

It complies literally with a federal court decision that "qualified Negro electors" cannot be barred from primary voting.

Two state Negro leaders have said they planned to ask further federal court action to give Negroes "full and complete participation in all party matters." Tues.

The new party rule makes no mention of Negro participation in party affairs, other than primary voting. 5-25-48 executive committee to allow the Negroes to enroll. He said he had not instructed all, but only those who asked.

This county is where the first test case for the Negro primary voting right originated.

A Negro, George Elmore, filed suit to force the Democratic party to permit him to vote in its primaries. A federal court ordered the Democrats to let "qualified Negro electors" cast ballots after the United States supreme court refused to hear an appeal by the Democrats.

342 S.C.

At the state convention here, the party's rules were changed to allow the Negro to vote. Two standards were set up. The Negro was required to swear to an oath which pledged support of segregation on social and educational levels.

A Negro newspaper editor, John McCray, chairman of the State Progressive party (Negro) said he had attempted to enroll this morning but was unable to locate the party's books for his ward.

Hinton, in announcing his enrolment, asked that Negroes throughout the state enroll.

Voting Fever Hits Charleston As Some 5,000 Enroll To Vote

BY (MRS.) E. M. PARKER

CHARLESTON, S. C. — Charleston stacked up ~~its largest~~ number of "meaningful" Negro voters by Tuesday, with around 5,000 already enrolled to vote in summer primaries and Progressive Democratic leaders driving to double the number by the July 31 noon deadline.

Tempo of the voting consciousness which has descended upon the city is evident in attendances at several meetings held within the past two weeks, the individual efforts of leaders to build up enrollment and the designation of true and tried leaders as official spokesmen for the voters.

1,400 HEAR HINTON

More than 1,400 jammed into historic Emanuel AME Church last Tuesday night to hear addresses by James M. Hinton, state N. A. A. C. P. president, and the Rev. Frank Veal. Then on Friday night more than 600 others gathered in Morris Brown AME Church to hear reports on the Democratic National Convention by County Progressive Democratic chairman Dr. W. W. Jones and state Progressive Democratic executive secretary, A. J. Clement, Jr.

At the Friday night meeting, official spokesmen for the Negro Democrats were chosen and citizens were warned against following the leadership or counsel of any others numerous such persons now appearing to want to assume the leadership.

Sun.

SPOKESMEN DESIGNATED

The spokesmen designated were: P. S. Johnson and Mrs. Lucile Ford of the Mount Pleasant Section; Esau Jenkins of Johns Island, W. E. Prioleau of Union Heights, Mrs. Ethyl R. Brown and Robert F. Morrison, county chairman Dr. W. W. Jones and first state vice chairman of Progressive Democrats, John H. Green, all of Charleston, as well as Mr. Clement, Jr.

All of these have been long associated with the Progressive Democrats and their election by citizens as a whole was an expression of confidence in their ability and honesty.

Numerous individuals have been praised for their efforts to build enrollment. Among them is Mrs. Ellen Davis of the Five Mile section, who single-handedly got 51 persons in her community to enroll by Monday and was hiking this number the first of the week.

Less Than Hundred 'Qualified' Negro Voters Cast Ballots For Councilmen

The Record
Columbia, S.C. Tues 4-20-48

Columbia white Democrats—and a few Negroes holding municipal general election registration certificates—went to the polls today to nominate two of four candidates seeking city council seats in a Democratic party primary election.

Following a United States supreme court decision which opened party primary elections to "qualified" Negro electors, W. P. Baskin, state Democratic party chairman, yesterday invited Negroes holding municipal general election registration certificates to vote in the Democratic primary, despite protests from some party members who argued that Negroes, not enrolled on the Democratic party books, had no more right to vote than whites who had not enrolled on the party lists.

A total of 53 Negroes and 3,991 whites had cast their ballots as of 2 p. m. today. Negroes were recorded as voting in ward one (four); ward two (six); ward three (six); ward four (four); ward nine (31); ward ten, two).

Whites voted as follows: Ward one (391); ward two (163); ward three (257); ward four (293); ward five (151); ward six (295); ward seven (150); ward eight (242); ward nine (149); ward ten (175); ward eleven (310); ward twelve (390) ward thirteen (221); ward fourteen (249); ward fifteen (323); ward sixteen (192).

The Record

All Goes Smoothly

Columbia's Negroes who were properly prepared to vote in today's municipal primary election reported "Everything went smoothly" as they cast their ballots for the first time in a Democratic primary election.

John H. McCray, editor of the Lighthouse and Informer, voted at 8:03 a. m. in Ward three—possibly the first Negro to present himself under the Supreme Court action of yesterday—and cast his ballot.

An hour later, James M. Hinton president here of the NAACP, voted in Ward nine.

"The election officials were very courteous," he said. Following him were J. C. Artemus, and C. P. Ingram.

Columbia, S.C.

Hinton, who has long been active in the court proceedings to obtain voting right in the Democratic primaries, said he was "happy as a lark" at the manner in which today's voting was being conducted.

He anticipated no difficulty.

Up to early this afternoon the election machinery had worked with smoothness and no incidents. Voters commented on the competency of the managers and their helpers, the clerks.

Tues

Marion A. Parks, of the city Democratic executive committee, who made several tours of the voting places, had the highest praise for the managers, who are unpaid.

"They are doing an excellent job," Mr. Park said this afternoon.

Historical Background

Today's election was the first time since 1876 that Negroes voted freely in a meaningful South Carolina election.

4-20-48

In 1876 Wade Hampton was elected governor of the state. The Red Shirts, foes of carpetbaggers and scalawags who were in power, steered his election to success.

Since then, Negroes have been effectively excluded from participation in election matters, either through stiff general election qual-

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 20—(AP)—South Carolina Negroes exercised their new-won Democratic primary voting rights here Tuesday.

Wed.

They balloted in a meaningful election for the first time since carpetbag rule was overthrown in 1876.

Only a comparative handful of qualified Negro electors turned out to vote in a city primary to select two Council nominees.

The Negroes' new voting right victory was effectively dimmed, however, by a State Democratic Party order for strict adherence to the letter of a Federal Court ruling that "qualified Negro electors" could vote.

Qualified electors, and only qualifield electors—those defined by state law as registered to vote in general elections—were allowed to cast primary ballots

Otherwise, voting was limited to enrolled white Democrats.

Eligible for the City's party primary were 12,000 white Democrats enrolled on party membership books and appoximately 500 Negroes registered by the City for a May 11 municipal general election.

The Constitution

The Party's strict adherence to the Federal Court decision, which was made final Monday by Supreme Court refusal to review the case, was seen as having these effects:

Atlanta, Ga.

1. Confining party membership to white Democrats.
2. Restricting Negro participation to the primary vote.

LETS NEGROES VOTE, IS ACCUSED OF BIAS

(The Associated Press)

[illegible]

Charleston, S. C., Oct. 21.—An official of the Democratic party has accused Federal District Judge J. Waties Waring of permitting "personal bias and prejudice" to affect his decision admitting Negroes to the party.

Fri. 10-22-48

An affidavit of bias filed here by John E. Stansfield, state executive committeeman from Aiken county, charged that Judge Waring has a "personal bias" in favor of the Negroes by which he may "be prevented from or impeded in rendering judgment impartially between the parties of this cause.

[illegible]

Stansfield is one of more than 80 defendants affected by a temporary injunction handed down July 16 by Judge Waring in which the jurist ordered the Democratic party to admit Negroes to full participation in party affairs.

A hearing on a permanent injunction still is pending.

Cabell Denies Effort To Get Negro Votes

Columbia Record
Columbia, S.C.

CHARLESTON, July 30—(UP)—State Rep. Nathaniel W. Cabell said he answered an unequivocal and emphatic "no" when asked yesterday by Negroes if he were seeking their vote support.

342 S.C.

Cabell said he got a mimeographed letter from Dr. W. W. Jones, an official of the Progressive Democratic (Negro party) party, asking the direct question, "are you interested in Negro support in the August primary?"

Cabell said he replied "I consider your letter an attempt to make a deal with me."

He said the letter from Jones informed him "we have been approached by those seeking the same office you aspire to, asking your support."

Fri. 7-30-48

Cabell quoted the letter from the Negroes further:

"You can see our viewpoint in the matter. If you are not interested in Negro support, or if you are interested in Negro support, we are asking you to communicate with the undersigned by letter, or by personal contact."

Cabell said he replied to the letter: "My answer is unequivocally and emphatically no."

NEGRO VOTE IN SOUTH CAROLINA BELIEVED BEHIND TRUMAN WHO DIDN'T CARRY STATE; DIXIECRAT OFFICIAL PUSH STATES' RIGHTERS BALLOTS OFF ON UNSUSPECTING NEGROES

BY MODJESKA SIMPKINS

Columbia, S. C.__ (ANP)--Election day saw Negroes throughout the state going to the polls for the first time to exercise their right to the ballot. Just how many qualified electors there are in the state, how many voted, and for what party is not known, for several reasons.

However, this much is known. Negroes for the most part were determined to vote for Mr. Truman because of his stand on civil rights; they were determined to vote Democratis--and were of that mind--because for four years the fight waged by the Citizens committee, NAACP and Progressive Democratic party focused attention on voting Democratic without intending to do so, by emphasizing the importance of the right to vote in the Democratic primary--the election that counts. Associated Negro Press

It is impossible even to estimate how many registered but could not vote because of the poll tax. South Carolina has 46 counties, and as many versions of her election law according to the interpretations og the law given by registration officials. In some counties, one may vote by paying the tax of the previous year; in another, it is a cumulative tax of 10 or more years, according to when the male Negro became of age.

Chicago, Illinois

It was reported that about 35,000 voted in the Democratic primary in August, but then the poll tax was not involved. It can be assumed that not more than 40,000 voted election day. There were no Negroes in the races election day.

Several underhanded tactics were discovered in operation at polling places. Chief among these was the palming off to Negroes of the States' Righters ballot. This resulted in hundreds of Negroes casting their vote for Thurmond--by mistake. Wed. 11-10-48

The election processes are in full control of Thurmondites. It leaked out some days ago before the election that election managers had been instructed to offer the Thurmond ballot to voters, particularly if they asked for the Democratic ballot. In addition, it was reliably reported that managers were to display only Thurmond ballots. In one place, election officials were seen to be stuffing Dixiecrat ballots into the hands of unsuspecting Negroes.

This happened in several cases throughout the state, and in at least one in Columbia, before it was detected. In two local polls, the ballots were so mixed up--they lay right out in the open so anyone could see what another picks--that only the States Righters ballots were on top at all times. One had to hunt for the Dewey and Truman slates--the latter disappearing entirely for a time from one poll.

Each party in this state prints its own ballots, and sends them some days before the election to the clerks of courts. Election commissions are charged with seeing that the ballots get into the various boxes.

What actually happened this year, in one county, was that the election commissioners refused to pick up the ballots and ordered each party to get its ballots to the boxes, although the boxes always remain at the courthouses between election.

Only two counties, Spartanburg and Anderson, went for Truman. The GOPs distributed a quarter of a million ballots. They were sent to counties registered "return card requested."

Another note appeared in a news release originating in the Charleston News and Courier, white daily and carried by AP, which stated that the Republican Chairman J. Bates Gerald had "expressed the opinion that the objectives of the States Righters and the Republicans were not irreconciliable."

This was an effort to get Negroes to steer clear of the Republican ballot. I contacted Gerald by long distance and he said he had not talked to a reporter at any time. A check with the AP office uncovered the reporter who had rewritten the story, and disclosed that the Chronicle's article had begun "Gerald indicated...."

The reporter apologized and said he was willing to "do anything I can to overcome the error," but the article had already gone all over the state under the caption, "States Righters Asked to Join GOP." Whether this shied away many voters from the Dewey ticket is questionable, but there was an overwhelming surge to Truman.

The figures show that Thurmond received 89,400; Truman 30,498 and Dewey 5,101.

Negro Voters At New High

[illegible]

(34e)

SPARTANBURG, S. C. — What registration officials regarded as probably the peak Negro voting strength in Spartanburg's recent history was disclosed this week when it was said that 1,809 Negroes were eligible to vote in Tuesday's Presidential election.

The registration board said Negro voters comprised approximately 6 per cent of the total number of qualified electors in Spartanburg. The board revealed that 30,197 registration certificates were issued between Jan. 1 and Oct. 2.

It said that registration this year was about 3,000 more than ever recorded previously.

This white officer, meeting with a group of Negroes, said he just couldn't understand it at all. Shavis, he said, was actually the trusted and reliable liaison between the whites and his people, and as such he had the respect of the entire community. This officer, however, stated that Shavis had been contacted and was enroute to Perrine at the very moment. City officials regretted the fact that the runaway would not be present to take part in the "radio explanation" or "if he ran away, or if so, why?"

The radio explanation of the incident, made by several men who are allegedly sincere in their beliefs concerning the enjoyment of civil rights by Negroes, struck a responsive chord. Today, nobody in Perrine or Florida believes that Shavis was made to leave his family and his business. He has admitted since his return that he left the city to transact some important business in Hastings, Fla., and that before leaving Perrine, at the suggestion of Providence," he withdrew because of his incompetence.

White Students Rebel

The news behind the news, however, was intentionally and deliberately omitted by the white press, though their reporters were present during the meeting at the Republican club which was addressed by Speaker Martin. Several white students attending the University of Miami, on learning of the alleged threats made against Shavis' life, went beserk and two of them served notice that they were ready to quit the Republican party.

One of these students, majoring in "human relations," told his white audience that he was "ashamed of America." Said he: "If I had another home that I could claim, I'd go to it." The students vowed that they would work harder than ever before. to drive hate and prejudice from the south.

In the poll for seats in the Illinois General assembly, three more Negro Democrats came through. Corneal A. Davis will represent the first district; Charles M. Skyles, the fifth, and Fred J. Smith, the third.

Under the Illinois cumulative voting system one colored Republican salvaged a place in the state legislature. He was incumbent Charles J. Jenkins of the third district.

This election marked the first time that both major parties nominated Negroes for judge in Chicago. Republicans who were lost in the landslide were Alva Bates and Graham T. Perry, both attorneys. Each polled more than 650,000 votes.

Praising the nation for the election of President Truman, Rep. Dawson, one of the nation's leading Democrat powers, made the following statement:

"The American people have spoken. Their powerful mandate ushers in a new era of democracy. President Harry S. Truman stands today as the supreme champion of all American citizens, regardless of color.

"The people have given their answer to those who doomed him to defeat because of his courageous stand on civil rights. This is the first dawn of a better tomorrow - a brighter future for ourselves, our children and for all mankind.

"These facts make me eager to thank all my friends, associates and others who helped take the story of Truman's deeds to Negroes throughout America.

"The huge Truman vote which Negroes cast should stand as a glistening two edged sword to warn all who hold posts of responsibility that the Negro will fight to the last ditch in his cause."

Plan Will End Segregation In Colored School

Journal Guide
Sat 8-21-48
Norfolk, Va.

LONG BRANCH, N. J.—(NNPA)—The board of education took steps to end segregation at the Liberty Street School Monday, Aug. 2, at an adjourned meeting.

The board established a district for the Liberty Street School, but will permit all pupils now attending integrated schools outside the district to continue in these schools. Under the plan, however, all new pupils enrolling in September and thereafter must attend the school designated for the district in which they reside.

Parents who are members of the School Betterment Association and the local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had objected to this compromise proposal when announced by the board at its meeting last month.

Sat 8-28-48

ENROLLMENT DROPPED

Enrollment at the all-colored Liberty Street School dropped from 190 to 43 last September, when there were mass transfers to nearby integrated schools after the NAACP urged colored parents to withdraw their children from the segregated school.

1420

The board then set up a Liberty Street School district, but abandoned the plan for the remainder of the school year after vigorous opposition from many parents living in the district.

In reaching its new decision the board pointed out that the matter had been carefully discussed with representatives of the State Department of Education and local officials.

Negro Claims He Was Stabbed After Voting

Washington D.C.
Tue. 8-24-48

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 23 (U.P.).—A Negro minister filed an affidavit with the Justice Department today that he was clubbed, stabbed and left for dead while two policemen looked on after he voted in the August 10 Democratic primary.

3440

Post. 8-24-48

Ware named the man he said was the leader of his attackers and the two policemen who, he charged, watched the incident without lifting a hand.

The incident occurred at Calhoun Falls, in Abbeville County, Ware said. Abbeville Sheriff Chester Fleming said he had made a formal investigation of the charges but had not taken any action "because there weren't any eyewitnesses that I could find." He said Calhoun Falls police professed to know nothing of the affair.

Ware, 66, related in his affidavit that he voted at the Calhoun Falls gymnasium, exercising the right assured Negroes by a recent United States Supreme Court decision invalidating the South Carolina all-white primary.

Mayor Says City Flooded With Unsigned Letters

Wed. 11-3-48

Nashville, Tenn., Nov.1(AP). Mayor Thomas L, Cummings said Monday that Nawhville's Negro sections are "flooded" on this election eve with unsigned threatening letters attempting to keep Negroes from the polls.

Postmaster William Gupton said the mayor had called to inform him about the letters and that he had issued orders that postmen turn in samples of the letters given them by recipients.

The mayor said two of the letters contained crude scrawls in red pencil saying:

"Keep away from the polls Nov. 2.
"KKK
"Keep away form the polls Nov. 2
"KKK !
"The Klan Knows you."

The 'you was underscored but the letters were unsigned.

(In Atlanta Imperial Wizard Samuel Green said there is no Ku-Klux Klan organization "within 100 miles of Nashville' and that use of the name and symbol was a hoax. He offered the mayor and postal authorities "full co-Operation" in tracking down and apprehending the perpetrators of this hoax!)

The letters are being checked for fingerprints. "Hundreds of these letters have been sent to Negroes and I have had many calls about them," the mayor added.

The letters bore a Nashville postmark.

Negroes to Revolt

Pittsburgh, Pa.
34e

(Special to The Courier)

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—"Boss" Crump received his "dishonorable discharge" from Tennessee politics last week . . . "Mr. Crump" rules no more . . . after thirty long years . . . because Negroes remembered.

An aroused coalition of white and Negro voters—weary of the intimidations and fears inflicted on them by "Boss" Ed H. Crump's Memphis political machine and its machinations, rose in the might of their fury last week and swept the "Boss" and his minions right out of the political picture.

STUNNING DEFEAT

A stunning defeat administered at the polls in the Democratic elections here flung the handwriting up on the wall for white policemen who have—with total immunity—beaten Negro men and women into insensibility. For Negro school teachers it meant freedom from forced political activity to hold their jobs. Brow-beaten, bribed Negro citizens and harrowed raped Negro girls breathed easier.

All the pent-up hatred created by the activities forced upon Negroes by dominating white political bosses—and the same picture was and is true elsewhere in the South—burst on the Crump machine as voters swept Crumps' hand-picked choices from the political scene and there is joy and rejoicing here in Memphis. The spell of fear is broken.

Sat 8-14-48

Some thirty-five years had passed since Boss Crump rode into power on the Negro vote and Handy's immortal "Beale Street Blues." But last week he was swept into oblivion by the rising tide of awakened Negroes and liberal whites, backed by the Committee of Seven—seven white citizens who dared to challenge the hitherto impregnable Crump machine.

WHAT THEY REMEMBERED

Playing their role in the cataclysmic change which tore out the old pages from the book of Tennessee's political history and inserted brand new ones, Negro citizens here remembered many things. Among the things remembered were:

The Columbia "Race Riots," when the Crump-made Governor's Highway Patrol massacred innocent Negro citizens.

That 16-year-old Fred Jackson went to the electric chair crying his innocence into the Crump-made Governor's ears.

The infamous Memphis "boss" system, wherein for years the police have systematically beaten, brow-beaten and hounded respectable Negro citizens into submission or flight. (Bob Church, nationally known Negro Republican leader, and Dr. J. B. Martin Sr., prominent in the sports and political world, both are no longer residents of this great Southern metropolis.)

That two cops—white of course, for Memphis has no Negro policemen—raped two Negro girls two years ago and were freed; that two more cops were recently caught red-handed taking a bribe from an humble ice and coal man. That a few weeks later, two policemen knocked one of Eli Blaine's eyes from its socket—Eli is a Negro—and that all are at liberty now.

That before Blaine's blood stopped running, Viola Moore, a Negro woman, was beaten into insensibility and lay in John Gaston Hospital for three weeks completely sightless, and that the policemen who did it were exonerated by Police Commissioner Joe Boyle.

That Boss Crump's hand-picked Mayor, James J. Pleasants, forbade the Freedom Train to stop in "Crump City," and later went on the air with abusive and offensive language.

That just a few weeks ago, when a group of respected Negro leaders went into the Mayor's office to seek Negro police officers so the brutality could be stopped, the Mayor offered them nothing, but tried to get them to blindly sign a political endorsement; that stooges, allegedly paid Baptist preachers and stoolpigeons were sent out among them to keep the white bosses "informed what the n——rs are thinking and doing."

That Negro school teachers had been called and told by two high school principals: "You better vote as Mr. Crump says, your job is at stake."

That residents of LeMoyne Gardens, Foote Homes, Dixie, had reportedly been told that if they didn't vote for Mr. Crump they would have to move out of the Federal projects.

Sat 8-14-48

FBI ON HAND

Now the reign of fear is over. U. S. Attorney General Tom C. Clark covered Memphis with FBI agents and maybe for the first time votes were counted properly and Crump lost 30,000 people in Memphis. Boss Crump, 78 years old, had made and unmade Governors, Mayors, judges, Congressmen and ruled the Legislature as he would a child.

Brilliant, young Estes Kefauver, Chattanooga Congressman, was nominated by a 50,000 majority for the U. S. Senate over Crump-backed Judge John A. Mitchell. Chancellor Gordon, veteran of both wars, swept the State on a ticket of "Democracy versus Dictatorship."

It was the death knell for the Crump machine and its domination. All Crump candidates were defeated with the sole exception of two seeking offices of extreme insignificance.

EDITOR REBUFFS CRUMPITES

With the campaign reaching its peak, the Negro group which saw Mayor Pleasants, seeking Negro policemen, made a sweeping repudiation of Crump candidates and with Editor L. O. Swingler refusing to allow newspaper publication of an endorsement favoring Mitchell and Governor McCord. It hinted what was to come.

34e

Perennial Lieut. George W. Lee was elected committeemen from Shelby County by the Republicans and battle lines were being tightened for the stiff campaign between the GOP and Democrats for the national election, with the GOP hopeful of carrying Tennessee for the first time in thirty years of Crump.

Sat 8-14-48

B. Carroll Reece, ex-chairman of the GOP National Committee, is the GOP Senatorial candidate, and Roy Acuff is the Republican choice for Governor in the vote war which is to come.

But "Boss" Crump is no more.

Minority Vote Helped Ruin 'Crump Machine'

Boss E. H. Crump, 78, the "Red Snapper" of Memphis who got his power through control of the colored vote originally and who used it violently to eject anybody who crossed his path, is no more.

Like most of the "bosses" who ave gone down in the recent ears, he met his defeat last week t the hands of those same persons hom he trampled underfoot successfully for more than 30 years.

This election marked the first efeat of the Dixiecrats who are bitterly opposed to President ruman's civil rights program.

The tactics which Crump used put his men in office, from the overnor on down, boomeranged, d as a result neither of his candidates for Senator or Governor offered any serious competition.

Crump's power was broken as colored voters joined liberal whites to lift the "iron curtain of fear."

Sat 8-14-48

Strongly Against Truman

Some 400,000 voters flocked to the polls to defeat Governor Jim McCord seeking his third term with the backing of Crump, a leading Dixiecrat, who refused even to attend the Democratic National Convention because of his violent opposition to President Truman's civil rights program.

Judge John A. Mitchell ran a sorry third and Senator Tom Stewart, who left the campaign to return to Washington so he might stand guard against the advance of democracy and liberty, was left to heal his defeat wounds in retirement.

Sat 8-14-48

Liberal Kefauver Blasted

Brilliant young Estes Kefauver, Chattanooga Congressman, was nominated by a 50,000 majority for the Senate, while Chancellor Gordon Browning, 59, World War I and II veteran, swept the gubernatorial election on a ticket, "Democracy vs. Dictatorship."

Kefauver polled 152,489 votes to Mitchell's 78,596 and Stewart's 117,787.

Ads Fail to Get Results

In full page ads in Tennessee newspapers, Crump stressed the fact that Representative Kefauver had voted consistently with New York's ALP Representative, Vito Marcantonio.

Because the people wanted to regain their individuality and because they considered Kefauver a man interested in the welfare of the people, they gave him the Democratic nomination for the Senate.

Supported by both the AFL and CIO, Representative Kefauver has a good liberal record. Among other things, he has voted for the antilynching bill.

Almost as personal a defeat was that given Crump in the race for the Governorship. Browning had served one term as Governor under Crump, and then broke with him.

Campaigning on a "down with one-man rule" slogan, he polled 214,465 votes to 160,142 for the incumbent, Governor McCord, Crump's choice.

Voters Remember

Colored voters remembered the Columbia, Tenn., "race massacre" when the Governor's highway patrol shot innocent citizens. They remembered this time that 16-year-old Fred Jackson went to the electric chair crying in the Governor's ears his innocence.

They remembered the boss system where for years the police have systematically beaten, browbeaten, bribed, harrowed, criminally attacked colored girls and hounded respectable citizens into submission and flight.

They remembered that two policemen attacked two colored girls two years ago, and were freed; that two more were recently caught redhanded taking a bribe from a humble ice and coal man; later, two others knocked Eli Blaine's eye out and all are at liberty now and;

More Terror

They recalled that before Blaine's blood stopped running, Mrs. Viola Moore was beaten into insensibility. For three weeks she lay in John Gaston Hospital sightless. The police were exonerated by Police Commissioner Joe Boyle.

The voters had not forgotten that Crump's hand-picked Mayor James J. Pleasants forbade the Freedom Train to stop in "Crump City."

They remembered that when a group went to the mayor's office to seek colored police he offered them nothing.

Nor did they forget the paid Baptist preacher stooges and stool pigeons sent out among them to keep us informed "what the colored people are thinking and doing."

Teachers, Tenants Intimidated

Colored teachers resented being told by two high school principals, "You better vote as Mr. Crump says; your job is at stake." Residents of Le Moyne Gardens, Foote Homes, Dixie resented being told, that "if they didn't vote for Crump they would have to move out of the Federal projects."

There is more rejoicing in Memphis. Everywhere are seen smiling faces of people who have broken the spell of fear—it's like Joe Louis winning a prize fight.

U. S. Attorney General Tom Clark covered Memphis with FBI agents and maybe for the first time votes were counted and Crump lost. Some 30,000 people in Memphis told him he was through being their boss.

Iron Hand Rule

Crump made and unmade governors, mayors, judges, congressmen; ruled the Legislature as he would a child, now the people have unmade him. He announced he was going away for a rest.

In two years, the city government, the last loitering semblance of his power, must face an electoral which no longer fears him.

Aged and Feeble Now

Old Crump is so aged and feeble now that he does not get down to work so early as he used to do.

Some days he does not get down at all and the sight of the feeble old man trying to run the City of Memphis has emboldened newspapers and politicians to a startling revolt.

Not only are white people fighting Crump in the November elections, but colored people too are holding meetings and organizing and registering voters.

"A Benevolent Despot"

Crump is known as a benevolent despot.

Nobody believes him personally crooked, but everybody believes that during the election time the ballot boxes are stuffed and the ballots are counted or not counted as Crump wishes.

They say that his followers import colored and white people from adjoining States to vote regularly on election day, and that they actually vote the names on cemeteries.

There is nothing in the book of fraudulent elections that they haven't attributed to the "Crump machine."

Will Send Carload of Melons

Crump is the kind of city boss who gives colored people good schools, jim-crow parks, playgrounds, "likes to see them happy;" will send them a carload of watermelons for a picnic, pay for them out of his own pocket.

But the next day, he'll call in the colored leaders and tell them, "You are not going to have any Republican meetings in this city nor in this State, and if you do, you will be chased out of town."

His enemies say he gives checks of $100 or $200 to churches when they have anniversaries and rallies, that he looks on quietly while some colored bosses run the numbers game and deal in dope.

Colored Druggist Forced to Leave

However, Dr. J. B. Martin (he owns Chicago American Giants) and B. B. Martin (he owns the Memphis team) wanted to hold a meeting for Wendell Willkie in violation to Crump's orders; they found scores of police around the place of assembly.

Other police around his drug store searched and inconvenienced everybody who came in and went out. Dr. Martin had to leave Memphis and is now in Chicago where he holds a city position.

In the old days of Bob Church (his grandfather was a steamboat captain and owned a couple of million dollars worth of real estate in Memphis) was Republican boss.

When a Republican was in the White House, Mr. Church named the postmasters and Federal judges. When the Democrats won, Crump took over. Mr. Church is now in New York.

No Bar—But Negroes Don't Vote

Atlanta Constitution

RICHMOND, Va.—Oliver W. Hill, Richmond City Councilman and one of the very few popularly elected Negro officials south of the Mason and Dixon Line, today declared that there is very little bar to Negro voting in Virginia, either in law or practice, that does not apply equally to white persons.

34e

"In Richmond and other Virginia cities," Hill said, "there not only is no discrimination against Negroes in registration or voting but the registrars are very co-operative. For the most part, the same is true of Virginia's rural counties. So far as I have observed, the idea that Negroes in this State are afraid to register or vote is entirely unfounded."

Atlanta, Georgia

"Then why," I asked Hill, "do not Virginia Negroes vote more numerously?"

"For exactly the same reason white people in the South do not vote in proportion comparable with Northern States," he replied. "In Virginia, the poll tax—particularly the requirement that it be paid six months in advance of election with a three-year penalty for delinquency—is a serious obstacle to voting. But the really big reason for low Southern voting among both whites and Negroes is the attitude of 'what's the use? It will be the same anyhow.'

"In general elections this attitude of mind can be attributed to long prevalence of the one-party system. In the Virginia Democratic Primary it is due to the long-time dominance of a party machine, leading to a conviction that the machine nominees always win."

Sat-10-9-48

As candidate for councilman, running at large in Richmond, Hill received approximately 9,000 votes of which about 6,500 were cast by Negroes and 2,500 by white citizens. He was the ninth and last winner in a field of 29 aspirants.

Poll Tax

The poll tax in Virginia is $1.50 a year, cumulative for delinquency up to three years, plus interest and penalties which makes the maximum charge a little over $5.

The poll tax must be paid at least six months before election, a provision which absolutely precludes any material rush of new voters since the civil rights fracas at the Democratic National Convention.

Citizens who pay real estate taxes receive their poll tax bill and presumably pay it as part of their general tax assessment. Poorer persons, either white or colored, not receiving a mailed tax bill, have to remember to pay their poll tax and this six months ahead of election when politics may be far from their thoughts.

Bullet Vote

Republican and Democratic leaders agree that Negroes in Virginia, so far as they participate in the November election, will go overwhelmingly in favor of President Truman. They are equally agreed, however, that the Negro vote is not likely to be large enough to prove decisive in the State.

The Richmond Negroes have developed a marked tendency to "bullet voting"—that is, the selection of a particular candidate, especially a member of their own race, and voting for him alone.

Illustrating their disinclination to concentrate on a white candidate, James E. Gardner entered as a civil rights nominee for Congress in the Democratic primary in the Richmond district, with the reported backing of Councilman Hill and other prominent Negro leaders. He was overwhelmingly beaten by the incumbent Democratic Congressman, J. Vaughn Gary, a bitter opponent of the Truman civil rights program. There was little visible evidence of converted Negro voting against Gary.

In marked contrast, bloc voting by Negroes elected one of their race as Supervisor in Nansemond, one of the most heavily Democratic rural counties of Virginia.

With only 14 percent of its population and 22 percent of its eligibles voting, Virginia in 1944 was sixth from the bottom, among the 48 States, in election participation. It ranked higher in this respect than Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina, but it was well behind Louisiana, Tennessee, Texas and Florida.

Sat-10-9-48

West Virginia and Utah led the nation in voting participation with 83 percent of their eligibles at the polls in the 1944 presidential election. Following at the head of the list were Illinois and South Dakota, 82 percent, and Indiana, 81 percent.

Poll Tax Payment

Montgomery, Ala.

THERE are only 24 days left now in which a citizen may pay his poll tax so that he can be qualified as a voter.

Our Alabama constitution says that to entitle a person to vote in the state he must have paid, on or before the first day of February next preceding the date of the election at which he offers to vote all poll taxes due from him. Alabama Constitution, Sec. 178.

JONES

A later section of the Constitution (194) says that the poll tax required to be paid is one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50) a year by each inhabitant of the state over the age of 21 years and under the age of 45 years, unless such person is exempted by law.

This poll tax of $1.50 becomes due and payable on the first day of October in each year. It becomes delinquent on the first day of the next succeeding February.

The poll tax must be paid by each inhabitant of the state over the age of 21 years and under the age of 45 years, unless he is exempted by law from the payment of the tax.

Our Supreme Court has declared the rules to go by as to when a person becomes of age, or passes the age of 45 years, and the rules are these:

One who has become 21 years of age before the first day of October of any year is subject to the poll tax due on that day.

One who becomes 21 years of age after the first day of October of any year is not subject to the poll tax on that day, his poll tax being due on the first day of the next October.

One who becomes 45 years of age before the first day of October of any year is not subject to the poll tax due on that day.

One who becomes 45 years of age after the first day of October of any year is subject to the poll tax on that day.

The poll tax of $1.50 for each year must be paid in the county in which the person votes and legally resides at the time the tax is due. Payment of the tax in another county is unauthorized and without effect.

IT SHOULD be remembered that the poll tax must be paid for each and every year between the ages of 21 and 45 years. In other words, the poll tax is cumulative, and if you fail to pay it one year, then you must take it up the following year. For example, if a person of poll tax age failed to pay his poll tax for five years, then, if he desired to vote, he would have to pay these five years at $1.50 per year, which would be $7.50, and, in addition, pay $1.50 on or before the first day of February preceding the date of the election at which he offers to vote.

Stating the matter very generally, and not attempting to go into all the details, persons who have honorably served in the military, naval or air service of the United States between Jan. 1, 1917, and Nov. 11, 1918, or between Sept. 16, 1940, and Dec. 8, 1941, or who may serve in future wars are exempted by the state constitution from the payment of the poll tax upon obtaining a certificate from the probate judge. The law also exempts from the payment of the poll tax all persons permanently and totally disabled from following a gainful occupation and whose taxable property does not exceed $500. Proof of the claimed disability must be made to the probate judge of the citizen's home county.

The law does not permit any fee to be collected or charged when the poll tax is paid. No legal process can be issued to require a person to pay the tax. Payment of the poll tax is entirely voluntary. You don't have to pay it unless you want to, but if the poll tax is not paid as required by law by persons of poll tax age and who are not exempt, then the person can not vote. Mon 1-5-48

NOW is a good time to go by the office of your county tax collector and pay whatever poll taxes may be due from you. A good many people wait until the last day to make payment, and as a result the courthouse corridors are thronged with long lines of people. The tax collector and his assistants are but human after all and they can only wait on so many people during the day, and it's not much fun standing in line an hour or two to pay a poll tax which could have been paid from Oct. 1 on. Advertiser

Your public servants and friends in the tax collectors' offices in Alabama's 67 counties will appreciate it if you will now make your way to their offices and pay whatever poll taxes you owe. It will enable them to serve you better and more promptly, and you won't have to stand in line as you will have to do if you wait until the last day. Montgomery, Ala

Every dollar that is paid for poll taxes goes to educate Alabama's boys and girls, to help them become better and more useful citizens. I don't have the exact figures at hand but I expect close to 200,000 civic minded citizens to pay their annual poll taxes. I recall that in 1939 nearly half a million dollars went to education from the poll tax collections, and the various counties of the state to get many thousands of dollars for their educational expenses from the poll tax fund.

The payment of $1.50 a year is not an unreasonable requirement to vote. It's less than half a cent a day, less than the price of thirty soft drinks, less than the cost of a few packages of cigarets, and less than the price of a good necktie.

If you want to vote, and are between the ages of 21 and 45 years, and have no exemption, then go to the county tax collector's office today and pay whatever poll taxes are due from you. You will help the cause of public education, qualify yourself to vote, and be a better citizen.

Poll Tax Should Remain, Says Woman-

Tues.

Alabama's poll tax law should not be abolished.

East side, west side, Birmingham homemakers agree on this point. Only one of the 14 interviewed Monday morning thought the poll tax requirement should be repealed.

This one was Mrs. D. H. Greer, of West End. She feels the poll tax law is unfair, according to a strict interpretation of the constitution. Therefore, it should be repealed. Poor Mrs. Greer had been wrestling with the furnace. She admitted what she was thinking about it couldn't be printed.

Her neighbor, Mrs. B. R. Rogers thinks the poll tax system is best for all. So does Miss Mary W. Barnes who believes the poll tax law should be continued to benefit the schools of the state.

* * *

MRS. W. D. STEAD was just back from the W. S. C. S. meeting in Orlando, Fla. Her enthusiasm for Bok Tower, Cypress Gardens, the gorgeous azaleas and beautiful live oaks would do credit to Orlando's Chamber of Commerce. 3-9-48

Mrs. Stead is not opposed to poll tax for two reasons. First, she feels there should be some standards for voters to meet. Second, she thinks the tax goes to a good cause. For the privilege of voting, she feels $1.50 is little enough to pay. The News

But if the poll tax should be abolished, Mrs. Stead feels the state, not the federal government, should do it. She believes in states' rights. Negligence, not poll tax, keeps many people from voting, according to Mrs. Stead.

* * *

IT'S HARD TO BELIEVE Mrs. George A. Archer is old enough to have a 10-year-old great-granddaughter, but she has her picture to prove it. Mrs. Archer thinks the money from poll tax is put to good use, so she sees no reason for the tax to be abolished. The fee is a small price to pay for a voice in the government. The News

When you call on Mrs. W. H. Collins, you're greeted by a dog and a cat, almost identical in color. "Rusty," the part-Persian cat, is almost as big as "Honey," the cocker spaniel. "Rusty' will soon be 7 years old. He enjoys the distinction of being the oldest cat in the neighborhood. Birmingham, Ala

Mrs. Collins does not think poll tax should be abolished. But, she feels the cumulative feature should be removed. Payment of two or three years back taxes should be sufficient to regain ones vote.

* * * 3-9-48

THE LAST PERSON I called on in West End was Miss Mary Harlan. Monday was the first day she'd been allowed downstairs since a recent illness. Tues

Mary, who just turned 21 last month, hasn't voted yet. If the poll tax issue should come to a vote, she'd veto its repeal. She thinks the poll tax system should be retained. 3-9-48

Across town, in East Lake, Mrs. Roy Hitchcock favors poll tax payments. In her opinion, anyone who is interested in the government will pay the tax and should be allowed to vote. Mrs. J. T. Cage agrees.

Mrs. Walter Lovell was out in her yard. She's publicity chairman for the flower show the East End Council of Clubs is having in April. She is trying to decide that she'll have blooming then. She doesn't think poll tax should be abolished.

Neither does her next-door neighbor, Mrs. Emma Bolin, who was out in the back yard hanging up clothes. She feels the tax is a small amount to pay in return for voting.

* * *

A SUBSCRIBER to The News since 1904, Mrs. Bolin has always kept up with what's going on in the world. The bed of fragrant narcissus in her yard proves what the neighbors had said. Mrs. Bolin's garden is one of the prettiest in the block. And she does all the work in it herself.

"Anybody with any get-up and go-about them can find $1.50 to pay to vote," says Mrs. E. M. Hayes. Tues. 3-9-48

Mrs. Hayes, a dictaphone operator, moved her office from town to her home and has been delighted with the change. She has a special feeling for her house. She's lived in it since she was a girl.

* * *

MRS. M. C. COURTNEY had just come in the house from the back yard, where she was putting out some new plants. Her husband was there to give her some gardening advice. But her opinion was her own. She thinks poll tax should be continued. The News

Mrs. Bud Newman, next door, was looking over the remains of her "thrift" border. She'd decided she couldn't have three boys, two dogs and flowers, too. She's not worrying over flowers any more. Mrs. Newman, a native of Indiana, thinks the poll tax law should be continued as it is now. 3-9-48

We talked as she swept the walk and looked after one of her boys, Paul. As much as I'd like to see her again, I'm afraid I won't. Tues.

As soon as they can find a house, Mr. and Mrs. Newman are taking their children and their dogs to a small town. They want a place where dogs and boys can romp and play without bothering anyone's garden. 3-9-48

For The Poll Tax

The News

Ala. 34e(1)

To the Editor of The News:

The poll tax is only $1.50 a year and every cent of it goes to the schools. I doubt if this fact is known to many of those who make such a fuss about the poll tax. It is inconceivable that $1.50 a year could disfranchise anyone who genuinely desires to vote. A pint of cheap whisky costs more than $1.50, but this has not stopped drinking. A pair of cheap shoes costs five times the amount, yet no one goes barefoot. If you smoke one pack a day, your cigarets cost $76.65 a year. That is more than 50 times the amount of the poll tax. The $1.50 goes for education. the $76.65 goes up in smoke. The one-pack-a-day smoker who allows $1.50 to disfranchise him is more than 50 times more interested in smoke than in education. Such a man or woman is not fit for citizenship. Birmingham, Ala.

Abolition of the poll tax would deprive our schools of a source of revenue which they cannot afford to lose, and it would deprive some of our citizens of their only opportunity to contribute directly to education. I feel sure that no citizen, worthy of the name, would be willing to give up the privilege of investing $1.50 a year in the future citizenship of his state. 3-15-48 Mon

Our poll tax is a good tax and goes to a good cause. It is a progressive and enlightened measure calculated to promote better citizenship. It should be copied by every state in the Union. Certainly there must always be some restriction on voting. There could be no greater evil in a democracy than universal suffrage. Mon. 3-15-48

The poll tax is abundantly justified by its fruits. As a shining example, look at our splendid city government—how clean, how efficient, how able. There are no dark corners in our City Hall. The sunlight of publicity is welcome in every department, for there is nothing hidden. How inspiring it is to see democracy at its best here in our beloved city. Contrast this happy condition with that of cities in the North where there is no poll tax and where voting is almost unrestricted. Many of those cities are cesspools of vice and corruption, controlled by political racketeers and gangsters. Graft takes its cut from every public dollar. Criminals are shielded because they serve the political machine, and honest men are framed for opposing it. But you could vote up there without paying a poll tax.

Equality At The Polls

Times

To the Editor of The News: 34e(1)

The Alabama poll tax law should be repealed. Our federal constitution declares we shall have freedom of speech. Our state law denies that. A man must buy the privilege to speak his sentiments at the polls on election day. The poll tax law disallows "equal rights to all and special favors to none" because of the fact that a poor man who is unable to feed his family and also buy a tax receipt has neither the right nor the privilege to vote. Birmingham, Ala

The law should be repealed because its purpose was and is to disfranchise the Negro. Our government has decreed that the Negro shall be a free man. We owe him at least the privilege of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." We owe him any and all things we can reasonably do to help him to a higher standard of living and a higher plain of morals, and no man trying to reach these destinies should be disallowed to vote. 2-16-48

However, whether Alabama ever allows the Negro to vote, there is at least a probability that the Alabama Negro will vote at some time in the future, regardless of Alabama's efforts to keep him from voting.

If Alabama people could feel assured that the Negro would vote the Democratic ticket, they would be only too glad for him to vote. So now let us, for sake of argument, just consider that the Negro is voting and "what Alabama Democrats can do to win his vote."

Labor Leader Sues Against Ala. Vote Law

34e(1) Ala.

The Express

Dallas, Texas

MOBILE, Ala. — (ANP) — Mobile labor leader last week filed suit in which he charged that Alabama's voter registration laws violate the provisions of the 14th amendment of the constitution.

The plaintiff is W. N. Harrington business agent of the AFL Painters local. He instituted his action Jan 26 before the Mobile County Circuit court. He charged that existing laws restricting registration period violated the amendment in that he did "not gaurantee to citizens the right to register as electors at al times".

Sat. 2-7-48

Mr. Harrington challenged the acts fixing the registration period as the 10-day period beginning the third Monday of January of even numbered years; a law fixing the registration period in Mobile county as a four-month period October February of each year, and an ac fixing registration periods for veterans.

Anti-Poll Tax Bill

Jennings Perry

34e(1)

On the Barrel Head

PM New York, N.Y.

The National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax is giving a dinner at the Statler in Washington on the 24th in honor of George H. Bender, Congressman-at-large from Ohio. The price is $10 a plate, the guests can wear anything the law allows, and the honor is deserved.

Perry

Rep. Bender is the sponsor of H.R. 29, the free suffrage bill, also known as the anti-poll tax bill, which passed the House in the first part of this session. Lately, he has been writing to a lot of people asking them to urge their Senators to press for action on the bill and to break any filibuster that may develop against it. Thurs. 2-12-48

In his letter he says:

"We have struggled for freedom in the United States since the days of the founding fathers. That freedom is based on the right of every American to be governed by those he chooses through a free ballot. Any impairment of that right in any part of the union is a danger to the liberties of all. Yet ten million of our citizens in seven Southern states are denied the right of the franchise by the poll tax. . . ."

All that is as right as rain, and appropriate. The incongruous thing is that Rep. Bender should feel it necessary to write to the people to urge their Senators to pass the bill.

Rep. Bender is a Republican. The Republican Party is pledged by its platform to enact this legislation. The majority of the members of the Senate are Republican. The rest of the Senators are Democrats. The Democrats also are pledged by their platform to enact this legislation.

Who, one asks, is kidding whom? PM New York, N.Y.

Certainly not Rep. Bender, he is in earnest. But that there should be any question at all about the passage of the bill, to which both parties are pledged, points up a deceit in our political system capable of turning the stomach of honest men. For it is apparent that if the pledges of the parties are worth nothing, the whole people is being kidded, and the two-party system is as rotten as third-party advocates charge.

I think that what happens to this bill at this session will be, under the circumstances, an acid test of the moral fiber of the Republican and Democratic parties. The issue in the bill is freedom, it is the right of all citizens to choose their representatives through a free ballot. But the issue in what happens to the bill is whether the old parties are worth what it costs to feed them. Thurs. 2-12-48

Both issues are on the barrel head, now. The people do not have to wait to see what stand will be taken on the suffrage at the coming conventions. The stand was taken at the conventions four years ago, was written into the platforms four years ago. This is the pay-off time. The Senators in actual session have only to carry out the promises already given by their parties to strike the dark shadow of the poll tax from the next Federal elections. If there is any occasion for another free suffrage plank in this year's platforms, it will be because the free suffrage plank in the 1944 platforms of both parties will have been proved a fraud.

The only reason for a third party in the United States is to get something done that greatly needs doing that cannot be done any other way. That is the only reason for a second party—or a fourth or a fifth. It is argued that to start a new party is futile because it will have small chance at the polls. However, it also is futile to stay with old parties whose word is no good. New York, N.Y.

Rep. Bender ought not to have to beg for his bill. Its passage should be assured. But if his bill should fail, both old parties will stand convicted of contemptible breach of trust.

CIO's Carey Attacks Poll Tax As 'Dollar Sign' On Voting Right

The News, Birmingham, Ala.

Thurs. 3-25-48

WASHINGTON, March 25—(AP)—The CIO's James B. Carey today attacked the poll tax as a "dollar sign" pinned to the right to vote.

Carey, in a statement, told the Senate rules committee that the citizen of a state where the poll tax is a requirement for voting in federal elections can be deprived of his voting rights "because of his poverty."

34e(1)

The committee is considering a House-approved bill which would abolish the poll tax in states which have it: Mississippi, Tennessee, South Carolina, Alabama, Virginia, Texas, Arkansas and New Hampshire.

This was the last of four days of hearings on the bill.

* * *

CAREY, CIO SECRETARY-TREASURER, challenged arguments of opponents that the bill would be unconstitutional.

He said the Senate judiciary committee in 1942 decided not only that it was constitutional, but that the poll tax itself was "a clog on the ballot and an unconstitutional discrimination between rightful voters." The News

The seven states' poll tax laws, Carey said, were enacted "with the avowed intention and specific purpose of restricting large numbers of 'poor whites' and Negro citizens in the exercise of their right to vote."

He said the government is responsible for the protection of its citizens' dignity and integrity, and added: Birmingham, Ala.

"Government will be fulfilling this high responsibility by removing the dollar sign off the right to vote." 3-25-48

U. S. Amendment Held Necessary To End Poll Tax

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Tues. 3-23-48

Washington, March 22 (AP)—Alabama's attorney general insisted today that the only legal way to abolish the poll tax by federal action is to amend the Constitution.

Albert A. Carmichael led off the Southern opposition to anti-poll-tax legislation before the Senate Rules Committee. He said attempts to wipe out the poll tax by mere Congressional action are unconstitutional.

Alabama charges a $1.50 poll tax. Carmichael said that "irrespective of the merits or demerits . . . when and if this poll tax is removed, it should be done in the manner provided by law . . . by the Legislature of the State . . . or an mmendment to the Constitution." 3-23-48

The bill under consideration was approved by the House and reported favorably by a Senate rules subcommittee.

Bender said, "has been put to some strange uses from time to time, but never one more ridiculous than this. Thurs. 3-25-48

"The right of all the people to a free ballot is certainly a bedrock principle of American democracy." 34e(1)

Author Of Bill To Kill Poll Tax Blasts Measure

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

34e(1)

Thurs. 3-25-48

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP)—The poll tax serves only to protect "political machines" against the vote of the people, Rep. Bender (R), Ohio said Wednesday.

The author of the House anti-poll tax bill told the Senate rules committee that officials who have never faced a free election hate this measure.

"They hate it the way the devil hates holy water," he said.

Bender and others testified in support of the bill to abolish poll tax payment as a voting requirement in elections of federal officers.

The hearing will end Thursday with more testimony by the bill's backers. Thurs. 3-25-48

Views of opponents, including Governor Tuck of Virginia and Rep. Almond (D), Virginia who appeared Tuesday came in for attack Wednesday.

Bender said Tuck testified "the poll tax is a defense against Communism."

"The cry of Communism."

Dixie Wants To Hear About Poll Taxes

PM New York, N.Y.

Thurs. 3-11-48

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Dixie won a skirmish in the civil rights fight yesterday when the Senate Rules Committee agreed to hold public hearings on anti-poll tax legislation.

Previously, a three-man subcommittee had approved the bill without hearings. It said the facts were so well known there was no reason to argue.

Sen. John C. Stennis (D., Miss.) protested at a closed-door session of the committee, and Chairman C. Wayland Brooks (R., Ill.) scheduled a four-day hearing.

Brooks said the full Committee will hold the hearing here, probably starting a week from next Monday.

Southern governors backed Stennis in his protest. He said the hearings should be held in the seven Southern states which have poll taxes—Texas, Virginia, Mississippi, Arkansas, South Carolina, Alabama, and Tennessee. 3-11-48

Of all the Truman civil-rights proposals, the poll-tax-abolition bill seems least emotional and hardest to oppose. Only seven states retain such taxes. It is not really a racial issue, for the tax is directed as much against poor whites as Negroes. The tax has no economic value. It is indefensible in a nation that criticizes one-party Russia. If Republicans are sincere, they should be able to put through the repealer, even though the cumbersome Senate cloture procedure has been invoked only four times in thirty-one years.

Georgia repealed its own poll tax and the number of voters almost tripled between congressional elections, four years apart. The seven poll-tax states have 69 Representatives, whose election brought forth only 1.2 million votes in 1946. This is less than the total votes cast in one Ohio seat for congressman-at-large. GOP good faith will be tested by whether it really pushes this issue to a conclusion in the Senate.

ACTION DEFERRED ON POLL TAX BAN

Senate Rules Committee Votes 5 to 2 for Holding Public Hearings on Bill

New York, N.Y.

Thurs 3-11-48

By SAMUEL A. TOWER

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, March 10—Southern Senators gained a respite in their battle against civil rights legislation today when the Senate Rules Committee agreed to their demands and deferred action on an anti-poll tax bill until public hearings were held.

The measure, already passed by the House in this Congress, had received unanimous approval almost two weeks ago from a subcommittee of two Republicans and one northern Democrat. The subcommittee had held no hearings on the issue, on the ground that arguments pro and con had been thoroughly covered in the many previous bills proposed in Congress.

The poll tax ban was passed by the House in the three previous Congresses, only to be stymied in the Senate.

Vote for Delay Is 5 to 2

Times

The motion to conduct the public hearings was offered by Senator William F. Knowland, Republican, of California, and carried by a bi-partisan vote of 5 to 2 after Senator John C. Stennis, Democrat, of Mississippi and the committee's only Southerner, had entered a vigorous brief in behalf of the "time-honored" senatorial custom that allowed both sides to be heard on major legislation. 3-11-48

Senator Stennis was armed with the support of twenty other Senators from the South and the Governors and Attorneys General of the seven poll-tax states in his arguments for delay in virtually certain committee approval of the measure, a key point in the President's civil rights program.

The Mississippian acknowledged, however, that his group had formulated definite plans to deliver full-dress speeches, starting tomorrow, questioning the constitutionality of the poll tax elimination, if the committee had dispensed with hearings and approved the bill at todays session.

The Times

Disclaiming any organized filibuster, Senator Stennis maintained that the group would have been forced to bring the constitutional issue to the floor of the Senate "because it would have been the only forum left open to us." He conceded that the speeches would have impaired efforts in the Senate to bring speedy action on the European Recovery Program.

In other quarters it was pointed out that the leadership of the Republican Congressional majority had manifested responsiveness to a policy of keeping alive as long as possible the "family fight" within the Democratic party over civil rights questions.

The following Senators, in addition to the sponsor, supported the motion to defer action: Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., Republican, of Massachusetts, and Theodore F. Green of Rhode Island, Carl Hayden of Arizona and John Stennis, Democrats. New York, N.Y.

The opposition was represented by Senators William E. Jenner of Indiana, the subcommittee chairman, and Irving M. Ives of New York, both Republicans, with the support of some members present but not voting. Thurs.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People protested today to Senator Alexander Wiley, Repulican, of Wisconsin, chairman of a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee, against the brevity of hearings set by the subcommittee for consideration of legislation to permit fifteen Southern States to set up a joint system of regional schools. 3-11-48

ANTI-POLL-TAX BILL IS STAMPED 'RED'

34e(1)

Virginians, Led by Governor, Also Call It Unconstitutional, Violating States' Rights

New York, N.Y.
Wed 3-24-48

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, March 23—A parade of legislators and officials from Southern States filed before the Senate Rules Committee today to denounce a pending anti-poll tax measure as unconstitutional and an invasion of state's rights.

Gov. William M. Tuck of Virginia, flanked by Senators Harry F. Byrd and A. Willis Robertson, said that the "absolutely unconstitutional" proposal was first advanced in his state by the Communist party, then the Republicans, and "now a number of Democrats have taken it up."

In addition to maintaining that the measure, already passed by the House, dealt solely with a state rather than a Federal matter, the Governor held that it would break down state's rights, "one of the bulwarks against Communism now running rampant in Europe."

"Communism can best be opposed by preservation of the rights of the forty-eight states," he insisted.

Centralization of Federal authority was in line with the Communistic pattern, he added.

The Governor, from one of the seven states still maintaining poll tax payment as a voting requirement, stressed that without Federal interference the Virginia Assembly itself had approved repeal of the requirement. The question would be submitted to the voters for ratification next year.

Virginia's Attorney General-elect, State Representative J. Lindsay Almond, followed the Governor and asserted: The Times

"The amalgamated wolf-pack confederacy of Communists, Left-wingers and ultra-radicals who seek, with disguised bitterness and effrontery, to ravish the honor and sovereign integrity of the Southern states are certainly strange and unsanitary bed-fellows for some of my colleagues." 3-24-48

Senate Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina struck a theme carried on by many of the other witnesses that "agitation" from Washington had continuously marred state efforts to repeal poll tax laws. New York, N.Y.

All the witnesses, ending two days of argument allotted to opponents of the measure, held out only two ways for eleminiation of the requirements: State action or a Constitutional amendment.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—(UP)—Gov. William M. Tuck of Virginia said today that federal meddling with the poll tax might destroy bulwarks against Communism in the United States.

And he charged that some legislators were attempting to "destroy the constitution" by enacting President Truman's civil rights program.

Tuck told a Senate rules subcommittee that the states should retain the right to enact the poll tax as a voting qualification in federal elections. Tue. 3-23-48

"Federal legislation only serves to break down states' rights—one of the great bulwarks against Communism now running rampant in Europe," Tuck said.

He asked a hands-off policy by the federal government on the poll tax issue. He urged that Congress refrain from any action "destroying the constitution as some of you men up here appear to want to do."

The committee is hearing testimony from Southern political leaders who oppose abolishing the poll tax by federal action.

POLL TAX ATTACKED AS VOTE REQUISITE

New York Times

New York, N.Y.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, March 24—Proponents of the abolition of the poll tax as a voting requirement in certain states urged today before the Senate Rules Committee prompt action on a bill already passed by the House. Thurs.

The author of the bill, Representative George H. Bender, Republican, of Ohio, affirmed the right of Congress to abolish the requirement "as a restriction on the franchise in Federal elections" and "a denial of basic American rights." 3-25-48

"Hundreds of thousands of American citizens, Negro and white alike, will have an opportunity to cast a free ballot for the first time in their lives," he asserted.

In the most recent Congressional elections, he recalled, the total vote cast for all sixty-nine members of the House from the seven Southern poll tax states and their opponents was 1,244,000. He drew a contrast between this total and his vote of 1,281,000 as Congressman-at-Large in Ohio.

Others urging favorable action on the bill were Leslie S. Perry, representing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Mrs. Joy E. Morgan, in behalf of the Woman's Society of the Christian Service of the Methodist Church, and Irving Brant, author of books on the Constitution.

Stennis, Pepper Differ On Right Of Congress To Kill Poll Taxes

342(1)
The News
Birmingham, Ala.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—Two Southern senators differed sharply yesterday on whether Congress can abolish poll taxes as they apply to federal elections. Fri.

Sen. Pepper (D., Fla.) said it can; Sen. Stennis (D., Miss.) said it can't—not under the constitution.

They argued this at a Senate rules committee hearing on a pending anti-poll tax bill. The bill, already passed by the House, says a person shall not be required to pay a poll tax in order to vote in an election for federal officials.

Such legislation has been recommended by President Truman as part of his controversial civil rights program. 3-26-48

TODAY WAS THE FINAL day of the Senate hearing on the bill. The argument came after Pepper urged the committee to approve the bill.

Pepper said Congress can abolish the poll tax, as applied to federal elections, as an "unreasonable" limitation on the right to vote.

"Congress has the right to tell the states what is a proper limitation on the right to vote," he said.

Stennis said "the right to vote is conferred by the constitution to qualified voters," with states having the right to fix qualifications for their voters.

"No," returned Pepper, "it is a right conferred by the constitution and while it may be limited by the state, a state may impose no limitation or qualification deemed unreasonable by Congress."

STENNIS ASKED Pepper if, under the bill, states could keep poll taxes as a requirement for voting in state elections. Fri

Pepper said most likely they could. The News

"Then," asked Stennis, "wouldn't we have two sets of qualifications for voters, where the constitution says there shall be only one?" Birmingham

Pepper said (1) he didn't agree with that interpretation of the constitution and (2) tha if two sets did exist, and a state imposed such a burden on its voters, it would be up to the state, not the federal government, to remove the conflicting set of qualifications. 3-26-48

Dixie Poll Tax States Labeled 'Whipping Boy' By Holland

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Wed. 3-24-48

WASHINGTON, March 23.—(AP)—Southern poll tax states are being made the "whipping boy" in the civil rights program, Senator Holland (D), Florida, protested Tuesday.

342(1)

Holland testified before the Senate rules committee against the pending anti-poll tax legislation.

He said President Truman's civil rights commission had noted in its report that New Mexico and Arizona, by state constitutions, prevent Indians from voting.

But, said Holland, while the report suggested that those two states take action to eliminate the discrimination against Indians, it recommended federal anti-poll tax legislation.

"I don't know why this distinction," Holland said. "It is as if the South is not entitled to the same handling. No attention has been given to New Mexico and Arizona but the seven Southern states have been made the whipping boy."

The pending bill, which has passed the House, states that payment of a poll tax shall not be required of a voter casting a ballot in a federal election.

Southerners concluded two days of opposition testimony Tuesday, arguing chiefly that the bill is unconstitutional; that the states are given the right under the constitution to fix the qualifications for its voters.

Those favoring the bill will be heard the next two days.

Senator O'Daniel (D), Texas, told the committee not one word in the constitution says Congress shall have power to establish voter qualifications but that the constitution does delegate that right to the states. 3-24-48

"If some politically minded federal office holders believe they can get a few more votes to get themselves re-elected to office by changing the poll tax requirements in some states," O'Daniel said, "They will be wanting to change other state laws to suit their whims and it will be an endless struggle for voting advantage."

He said Texas poll tax is $1.75 a year, goes to the state school fund and was voted "to stop mass voting of 'repeaters' at elections." The Advertiser

"There was trouble on election days," he said, "and I can assure you that our people, white or black, do not want to return to the conditions of those days." Montgomery, Ala.

Governor Tuck of Virginia said repeal of his state's poll tax law is pending but "most if not all of those who favor repeal feel that it is a state, not a federal matter." Wed. 3-24-48

Asked by Senator Green (D), Rhode Island, committee member, to define a voter qualification, Tuck said he stood on his statement that fixing of voter qualifications is a matter for states to determine.

Anti-Poll Tax Bill Wins Committee Approval

The Senate rules committee has approved, by a vote of seven to two, the bill to outlaw the poll tax as a requirement for voting in federal elections.

The bill has already passed the House and if it should now pass the Senate would become law. For President Truman included such a bill in his so-called civil rights program and could therefore be expected to sign it. The Columbia Record

Supporting the bill, which would make it unlawful for any state or municipality to require payment of any poll tax as a prerequisite for voting in any national election, were the five Republican members of the committee—Chairman C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois, Senators Irving M. Ives of New York, John W. Bricker of Ohio, Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska and Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa—and two of the four Democratic members—Senators Theodore F. Green of Rhode Island and Brien McMahon of Connecticut.

Two Democrats voted against it—Senators Carl Hayden of Arizona and John C. Stennis of Mississippi. Hayden told reporters that he objected to the method used to accomplish the purpose; he thought the change should be accomplished by constitutional amendment. Stennis opposed the bill on the grounds that it was unconstitutional.

The Columbia Record

Columbia S.C.

And it is unconstitutional. The constitution intended that the states should prescribe the qualifications for suffrage and at the time of the adoption of the constitution and since different qualifications were set up in different states, so that a person who might have voted for president in one state could not vote for president as a resident of another. And there is nothing strange about this when it is remembered that the United States is set up as a federal government of states. It isn't one big state, except in national matters.

Satur. 5-1-48

The Columbia Record

Only eight states still have the poll tax as a qualification for voting—most of them because it is written into their constitutions—and seven of these are Southern states: Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. New Hampshire is the eighth. In many of the Southern states the poll tax was established first in the reconstruction constitutions borrowed from the North.

Columbia S.C.

Satur. 5-1-48

And something can be said for the poll tax as a qualification for voting. No person who contributes nothing to the upkeep of government—and the poll tax in South Carolina is little enough, a dollar a year—should expect to participate in government. In South Carolina, however, the poll tax applies only to males and there should be no differentiation between the sexes in voting qualifications. It fails of its purpose therefore and might as well be repealed.

It should be repealed by the state. And it would have been repealed, if the anti-poll tax bill had not been devised as a Republican vote catcher every election year, brought up to be debated and then shelved until the next election when, as was inevitable, it ran into a Southern filibuster.

This year the Republicans may have to do more than this; they may have to pass the bill. Satur. 5-1-48

No Poll Tax For GIs

The poll tax as a prerequisite for voting has received another blow in the decision of the Senate to outlaw the tax in federal elections as far as members of the armed forces are concerned. The provision, attached to the draft bill for making youths 19 to 25 eligible for service, must still be accepted by the House and by the president.

Birmingham News

Southern senators let this provision get through after they defeated six other attempts to attach civil rights amendments to the draft measure. Perhaps they were weary of the battle. Perhaps they did not see much importance to this provision.

Lifting poll tax requirements from members of the armed forces would reduce still further the number of voters who have to pay the tax in Alabama. Already, by state action, voters past 45 do not have to pay, and all veterans of World Wars I and II are exempt. Considerably fewer than half of the qualified voters in Alabama now have to pay poll tax. For example, although Jefferson County has an estimated 80,000 qualified voters, only 20,039 poll tax receipts were written by the tax collector's office during the paying period this year. Wed. 6-9-48

The poll tax at present is a minority tax in Alabama. The Senate action will make it even more so. As a barrier to irresponsible voting, which is now about its only pretext for existence, it operates on only a small percentage of the population of voting age.

If the draft measure goes through Congress with this provision affixed, it will mean setting up a confusing system of registration and voting. One standard of qualification will exist in federal elections and another in state elections. Whether this is constitutional is a question, but certainly there is a strong sentiment in Congress for testing that point. The pressure grows upon the states to institute poll tax reforms of their own.

REPUBLICANS FAIL TO KILL FILIBUSTER

The Times

Vandenberg Overrules Closure Petition—Southerners Beaten in Adjournment Attempt

New York, N.Y.

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2—Senate Republican leaders went down to defeat today in their first effort to break a Southern filibuster that is killing the anti-poll tax bill.

The more irreconcilable Southerners, excited by this victory over President Truman, the Northern Democrats and the Republicans generally on the so-called civil-rights issue, then made another sharp demonstration against the President. 8-3-48

Thirteen of the Southern old guard voted for a resolution, offered by Senator Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina, to adjourn the extra session of Congress on Wednesday, notwithstanding the absence of action on any of the eleven programs asked by Mr. Truman.

This maneuver was far from welcome to a minority of the Southerners, because they believed that later the Republicans would stress it in arguing that it was the Democrats, though Southern members of the party, who were the first to seek to deny to the President the action that he had sought.

The resolution was defeated, 58 to 13, with six Southerners, headed by Senator Tom Connally of Texas, refusing to go along on a move they believed would make the Republicans less vulnerable to the blame for Congressional inaction, which the President would seek to attribute to them. Every voting Republican, including Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, party leader on domestic affairs, was recorded against it. 8-3-48

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic Senate leader and President Truman's running mate, voted with the majority in rejecting the Johnston plan.

Altogether, twenty-one Democrats joined thirty-seven Republicans, among them Senator Irving M. Ives of New York, a close associate of Thomas E. Dewey, Republican Presidential candidate, in defeatin gthe resolution. Supporting it were the following Southern Democrats:

Senators Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, James O. Eastland of Mississippi, William C. Feazel of Louisiana, J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, Walter F. George of Georgia, Lister Hill of Alabama, Spessardo L. Holland of Florida, Mr. Johnston, Burnett R. Maybank of South Carolina, John L. McClellan of Arkansas, Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, Richard B. Russell of Georgia and John C. Stennis of Mississippi.

GOP Policy Group Called

Earlier, the Republicans had tacitly left the field to the entrenched Southerners on the poll tax repealer and called a meeting of the policy committee for tomorrow to determine, as Senator Taft put it, "what to do next."

Senator Taft, in summoning this meeting, had intimated that the bill could not be passed at the present session, because the Southerners had the whole Senate procedure paralyzed. The Times

The one Southerner who favors poll tax repeal by direct action of Congress, Senator Claude Pepper of Florida, disputed this to reporters and asserted that he had a plan to circumvent the opposition if the Republicans "would listen."

The first Republican effort to silence the Southerners came according to a plan made last week but one day ahead of schedule.

When the Southern leader, Senator Russell, refused, as expected, to make any commitment as to when his colleagues would stop talking, the acting Republican floor leader, Senator Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska, filed a petition, signed by twenty-two Senators, to apply the so-called "gag," or cloture, rule. New York, N.Y.

Mr. Wherry tried to impose closure not on a "measure," which can be done under the Senate rules by two-thirds vote, but on a mere "motion" in this case it was a motion to take up a "measure," meaning the poll tax repealer. Tues

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, president of the Senate, reluctantly upheld the southerners, as has been forecast under the precedents, and overruled the closure petition. 8-3-48

He stressed that "as a Senator" he opposed the poll tax, and that "as a Senator" he believed that the Senate should amend its rule to avoid such situations as the present filibuster.

The Senate had the remedy, he recalled, in a proposed amendment that had lain inert for eighteen months, and for his part he hoped that the Senate would soon take that remedy.

Nevertheless. Mr. Vandenberg added, under the present position there was nothing that h could do, as "an officer of the Senate sworn to enforce its rules," except to hold with the Southerners.

"Even though agreeing with the protesting Republicans that the present state of Senate procedure was such that "a small, determined minority can always prevent the passage of anything," Senator Vandenberg said:

"The importance of preserving the integrity of Congressional procedure transcends in this critical hour of the world's history any possible transitory advantages which might come from rulings of a different character."

Senator Taft, going through what he knew would be another hopeless maneuver, then appealed the Vandenberg ruling to the floor. The majority was at once back in the same difficulty. It could overrule Senator Vandenberg and thus apply closure if only it could reach a vote. However, this matter, like the "motion" to take up the poll tax repealer, also was subject to limitless debate.

The Republicans and their Northern Democratic associates thus were in a worse case than before. Previously the Southerners had only the "motion," on which to filibuster. Now they had as well the pending appeal from the Vandenberg ruling. Tues.

Southern Victory Seen

Mr. Taft told his colleagues that there was "no way" that the rules could be changed to silence the Southerners, save by bringing about their "physical exhaustion."

Speaking later with reporters, the Senator said they could not be beaten down physically in a session so short as the present one. In the new Congress next January, he added, the Republicans would make such an amendment of the rules "the first order of business" and would "stay with it" until the Southerners were subdued.

Meanwhile, Mr. Taft described tomorrow's meeting of the policy committee as one to survey the whole Congressional situation. He indicated that the Republicans, faced with the strong likelihood of having to give up officially on the poll tax bill about Wednesday, would see what else could be done in the brief time remaining in this session. 8-3-48

Something in the way of credit control as a brake on inflation might be put on the agenda, he said, and perhaps a rather minor housing bill that would not raise fundamental issues.

He said, too, that the Republicans would be prepared to "consider" a tentative Southern offer of a "compromise" on the poll tax fight that really would be a Southern victory.

G.O.P. Congress Leaders Dishonest On Poll Tax

Courier Journal
Louisville, Ky.

THE Republican leadership in Congress does not want an anti-poll tax bill to pass at the special session. The Dixiecrats do not want such a measure to pass. The two groups are allied in as tight and effective a wall of opposition as ever thwarted the will of the public. A recent GALLUP Poll showed that 65 per cent of the American people want the poll tax eliminated in Federal elections, but they stand no chance of getting their way against a league of Old Guard Republicans and Democrats.

There is one chief difference between the position of the Senate Republican strategists and the Southern Democrats. The Southerners admit that they want to kill the poll tax bill. The Republicans profess to want to see it pass, yet they have taken every precaution to prevent passage at this session, when it might redound to the credit of President TRUMAN. The Dixiecrats are against Federal poll tax reform at all times. Their Republican allies are against it until their party can claim sole credit for its passage. In the meanwhile, hundreds of thousands of people, both white and black, will be prevented from voting in the Presidential election this year because they cannot afford to pay a fee.

There are sincere advocates of poll tax reform on the Republican side, such as Senator MORSE, who twice tried to force the measure through in the 1946 session. These sincere advocates, however, are not in charge of Republican strategy on the issue at the present session. It was Senator WHERRY who brought up the subject as the first order of business. His method was to make a motion to take up the anti-poll tax bill. He knew very well that this action would release a filibuster, and he also knew that the endless debate would come on his motion, not on the actual bill itself. By this parliamentary device, he made certain that the filibuster could not be successfully strangled off. 8-4-48

Senators TAFT and VANDENBERG now lay all the blame for their inability to stop the filibuster on the Senate cloture rules. VANDENBERG asserts that under these rules "a small but determined minority can always prevent cloture." This is not strictly true, as the record shows. Cloture has been successfully invoked four times in the Senate under the present rules: in 1919 on the Versailles Treaty, in 1926 on the World Court Protocol, in 1927 on the PEPPER-McFADDEN Banking Bill, and again in 1927 on the Prohibition Reorganization Bill.

Wed. 8-4-48

It can be done, if there is a will to do it. Of course cloture cannot be obtained, however, under the easy terms which Senator TAFT has sponsored for this session. He has made no effort to wear down the Dixiecrat minority. He has allowed the Senate to adjourn by six o'clock every evening, instead of holding their feet to the fire with night sessions. He shows he knows how these things can be done by announcing that he will advocate the full treatment, night sessions and all, when Congress meets again next January. Of course he assumes he will have a Republican in the White House at that time. He is not interested in giving the poor whites and the Negroes of seven Southern States a chance to say what man they want in the White House.

Just Look At Yourselves

Washington Post

With no cloture to bar the Senate "debate" on the antipoll tax bill, the upper chamber has now been turned into a talkathon. A filibuster at any time is unseemly. At present it is a shocking reflection on the legislators who were responsible for it and the legislators who are conducting it. Outside the Senate an inflation bearing the seeds of a collapse is week by week picking the pockets of the American people. Beyond the national borders decisions bearing the seeds of peace or war are being made which require a showing of strength and unity and responsibility in the halls of Congress. Yet the greatest deliberative assembly in the world, now become that in fact as in rhetoric, is letting itself be bogged down in a worse than idle gabfest, purposely tying itself in knots. The spectacle, added to that of a troop of informers jamming committee rooms with scarifying talk, no longer amuses. It is not helpful in combating the inflation thief at home and the Muscovite aggressor abroad, but, on the contrary, is an ally of both, since economic instability and political and social confusion in America are so clearly Communist aims.

Wash. Post
Wash. D.C.
34P(1)
Tues. 8-10-48

Senator Taft says that at the next Congress there will be a change in the Senate rules making cloture apply to any pending business. That is some comfort, but none for the present situation. As to the antipoll tax bill, we are heartily sick of it. The levy is disappearing, anyway; and the legislators who insist upon using Federal authority to get rid of it have become the victims of a fixed idea. It almost seems as if it is the fight, not the accomplishment, that matters. They appear to care little for the fact that even if the poll tax were abolished by Federal law, and the law were found constitutional, intransigent States in the South would think up other disqualifications. This newspaper, as ardent as anybody for freedom of political expression, is against the poll tax, and any similar disqualification in the exercise of the franchise. But of far more importance to us is a belief in the integrity of our constitutional system, and if there is a question as to the constitutionality of the antipoll tax bill, that question should be resolved by "letting it lay."

It isn't as if there were no other way of getting suffrage reform. There is, in fact, not one way, but several ways; and all good Americans, feeling in their bones the peril of taking a chance with the organic law which guarantees their liberty, should explore those ways before asking the Federal Government to be high-handed. There is, for instance, the route of the constitutional amendment. As Senator Hayden said the other day, if the agitators had made this the focus of their agitation at the start, then there might today be some progress to report. But many of the antipoll taxers, more interested in a fight than a remedy, have consistently ignored this alternative. There is also the relief that could be afforded by a clarification of the civil rights statutes so that the disqualified could get aid from an injunction. President Truman called for such a bill well over six months ago; it is all ready at the Department of Justice, yet he has made no move to submit it to Congress. Tues. 8-10-48

These methods are serious means of tackling the problem of disfranchisement. But these days seriousness appears to be at a discount on a wider front than the poll tax. It is an elaborate game of shadow boxing that the people are being treated to, and Old Man Inflation and the sinister person that the President calls Old Joe are the only ones who must be getting a kick out of it. For the rest of us, living dangerously with inflation and the international conspiracy of world communism, the exhibition on Capitol Hill seems downright irresponsible. The special session, admittedly, posed a problem in view of its origin. But it's more of an occasion to the people, now we have got it, than to provide open season for former Reds telling things that the FBI ought to (and most probably does) know all about, and for leather-lunged solons seeking only to stop the public business. The Senate in this filibuster is made to look like a hydra-headed Nero. At stake is the dignity of the people's, not the legislators', Congress, of their representative institutions, of the Nation's stability.

1949 Objective

From The Dothan Eagle

The next session of Congress may, and may not, vote to submit a constitutional amendment abolishing the poll tax. That is about the only way it is going to be abolished, at the federal level, and this method suits us. We are opposed to its abolition by congressional edict.

34P(1) Fri.

But, as we have said so many times before, we think it ought to go—at the state level and by state action. 9-3-48

In the wake of the wrangle at this special session of Congress, where only a filibuster thwarted a federal anti-poll tax law, is a good time for Alabama to give some thought to its poll tax. Our Legislature meets next year, and one piece of legislation it ought to take up is the abolition of the tax.

Aside from furnishing the rabble-rousers with something to holler about, repeal of the tax law—by the Alabama Legislature—would work tremendously in favor of the state. It would bring into the fold many voters we need, and we are referring to those who are swamped by an accumulation of unpaid taxes. It would not produce any "undesirable" voters, for the only way to head off the "undesirables" is in registration.

The tax isn't working now for the purposes for which it was intended. It is outmoded and antiquated, not to mention a nuisance.

The Legislature should put poll tax repeal high on the list of objectives in 1949.

PINE BLUFF, Ark., July 17. — Poll tax payments in Jefferson County may not reach the all-time high of more than 15,000 last year, it was indicated by the last poll tax figures issued Saturday. Only 9085 had been issued at the tax collector's office today noon.

However, it is believed the record number sold last year was due to the work of the negro organizations in the county, who are even more strongly organized than last year, and who are now working throughout the city and county for memberships, and advocating payment of the poll tax. Slightly more than one third of the entire number sold last year were issued to negroes, who had 5400 receipts.

Ten Million Disfranchised By Poll Tax, NAACP Claims

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"Poll tax representatives and senators have been able to return to Congress year after year to oppose civil rights legislation, only because the overwhelming majority of their constituents are completely disfranchised," Leslie Perry, of the NAACP's Washington Bureau, today told the Senate Rules and Administration Committee, which is holding hearings on the anti-poll tax bill which passed the House last July.

Tues. 3-30-48

The NAACP representative told the committee that 10,000,000 American citizens, black and white alike, are disfranchised by the poll tax. He cited, as a typical county in poll tax states, Sumter, South Carolina, where, although workers were theoretically receiving high wages in 1944, 25 per cent of the Negro families had an income of less than $500 a year. "With Wage levels such as these," Perry contended, "It is clear to everyone that a tax on the right to vote constitutes an effective bar to a vast number of citizens."

Tues. 3-30-48

"We find it very difficult to see how the United States can, in good conscience, insist on democracy in Europe and China, while at home it continues to permit unscrupulous politicians in seven Southern states to nullify democracy through the exaction of a poll tax," the NAACP statement concluded.

Rules Subcommittee Rejects Southern Call for Hearings —Passage of Plan Looms

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—The anti-poll tax bill was quickly and unanimously approved today by a Senate Rules subcommittee over rising Southern protests against this and other aspects of President Truman's civil-rights program.

The measure already has passed the House in this Congress and, indeed, in the three Congresses which went before it.

It was cleared today by the Senate subcommittee, made up of two Republicans and a Northern Democrat, under circumstances suggesting that a bitter struggle of many years would end at last in this session by action to strike down the tax as a qualification to vote. Sat. 2-28-48

The demands of objecting Southerners, represented by Senator John C. Stennis, Democrat, of Mississippi, for public hearings on the issue here and in the seven Southern states affected, were instantly refused.

The subcommittee chairman, Senator William E. Jenner, Republican of Indiana, declared it was felt that "no purpose would be served" in further discussion of a controversy which had been before Congress for so long. He spoke in behalf also of his two colleagues, Senators John W. Bricker, Republican, of Ohio, and Francis J. Meyers, Democrat, of Pennsylvania.

The bill will go at once to the full Rules Committee, where early and final approval is foreordained.

It will not reach the Senate floor, under the present plans of the Republican leadership group headed by Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, until after the disposition there of half a dozen pending and unrelated matters.

Successful Filibuster Doubted

Inquiries among Senators generally indicated that this time the Southerners were not likely to be able to block the bill by filibuster. The bill, incidentally, is relatively the least objectionable to Southerners among the four main civil-rights proposals of President Truman.

Coincidentally, it was possible for the first time to learn during the day just how far the Republicans are likely to go on the issue of civil rights at this session.

It was established on competent authority that the Republican leaders of the House, who hold the ultimate key to the situation, have no present intention of proceeding beyond the poll tax and anti-lynching bills.

Their plan is not to force battle on the two points of the Truman program against which the Southerners would take the most bitterly entrenched of all positions—the proposals for a Fair Employment Practices Commission and for outlawing racial segregation in interstate transportation.

Apart from great uncertainty as to how far the Senate Republicans and their Northern Democratic associates could progress on such bills, the House Republicans would have a great deal of hesitancy in having their chamber pass all four measures at one sitting.

Would Avoid Democratic Unity

Some of them, it may be stated, believe that this would deny to the Republican party much of the great benefit it is receiving indirectly through the present intra-party fight among the Democrats. Such action would tend, they consider, to force the Democrats back together again if only because the Southerners would be more inclined then to attack the Republicans, as the final controllers of the House, than the Truman Democrats.

For the moment, however, all thought of rapprochement plainly was far away among the embattled Democrats.

Seventy-four rebellious House Democrats, who have signed a manifesto warning their party not to put Mr. Truman's civil-rights proposals into the platform of the national convention, arranged to caucus again next Tuesday. The meeting was called, among other things, to consider the whole position now that Governor William M. Tuck of Virginia, with the expressed approval of Senator Harry F. Byrd, is heading a movement to keep Mr. Truman's name off the ballot in that state.

Representative E. E. Cox, Democrat, of Georgia, arose in the House to demand that the Legislature of his state go into extraordinary session to "take defense action against the aggressions urged by the President."

He suggested that the legislators call themselves together, over the head of Georgia's Governor, and "do something without delay" so that the President would be "made to know that the spirit of resistance is not dead." Times

Virginia Plan Denounced

In another Democratic quarter, the Virginia plan was denounced, though not by name.

Senator Claude Pepper of Florida declared his "sense of shock at the brazen schemes proposed by some Southern leaders, the effect of which is to deprive those states of a fair chance to vote for the nominees of the next Democratic National Convention for President and Vice President.

Endorsement Brings Brisk Repartee From Opponents

34e(1) Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—The anti-poll tax bill which was one of the main features of President Harry S. Truman's ten-point civil rights program got a firm boost from Sen. Claude Pepper, (Dem, Fla.) Thursday as the Senate Rules Committee ended hearings this week on the measure. Sat. 3-27-48

The veteran Florida Senator insisted that "my appearance here is not an endorsement of the other parts of the so-called Civil Rights program."

Under the bill, a voter would not have to pay a poll tax before voting in an election for a federal office.

No date has been set for the Committee to consider the measure, already approved unanimously by a three-member subcommittee.

BRISK REPARTEE

Pepper's endorsement of the anti-poll tax bill brought on brisk repartee on the question of Congress' constitutional right to enact such a bill. Sen. Stennis, of Mississippi, tangled with Pepper by contending the Constitution gives the States the right to set voting qualification for its citizens and that this is an invasion of State's right and is unconstitutional. Sat.

Pepper said the Congress has the right to tell the state what is a proper limitation on the right to vote. He insisted that a poll tax is an unreasonable limitation on the right to vote. 3-27-48

Stennis introduced a statement by Gov. Beauford Jester, of Texas, and Atty. General Price Daniel, of Texas, opposing the bill. They contended that if Congress takes the power to eliminate the tax it can prescribe voting qualifications.

To the Editor of The News:

After vacillating upon the matter as to whether poll tax should be abolished. I arrived at a definite conclusion that it should be. Here are some of the reasons why it should be abolished:

1. It actually seems very preposterous for the people who have reached the voting age to pay to elect their leaders. Tues.
2. It is one of the many taxes that in my opinion is attached for no purpose whatever as the circumstantial evidence has proved.
3. It shows a lag in political science, as compared with the other states which have had this tax abolished. As soon as the voting citizenry of Alabama takes this problem under consideration and careful thinking they will learn that this is not a barrier to the Negro, but a menace to all the people of this state.

This is one of the things I'm sure is keeping Alabama from ranking high with the intelligent states of the Union. Anyone who wants to vote would pay the tax, but the thoughts come in mind: Why do I pay poll tax? For what purpose does it go to help develop Alabama? Birmingham, Ala.

This problem has been argued throughout the state, but now is the time to do something about it.

Measure Was Passed By House Last July

Thurs. 4-29-48

Washington, April 28 (AP)—The poll-tax bill was approved today by the Senate Rules Committee.

34e(1)

The bill would knock out the poll tax as a requirement to vote for President and congressmen. The House passed it last July.

Three times the stage has been set just like this, and three times Southern senators have filibustered the measure to death. They are ready to try again.

Lynching Bill Has Priority.

This is one of the measures on President Truman's civil-rights program that aroused Southern ire and split Democratic ranks. But it may not be the first of them taken up on the Senate floor. 4-29-48

G.O.P. policymakers recently gave priority to antilynching legislation, although it has not yet come out of committee.

Action on this subject is scheduled for tomorrow when the Senate Judiciary Committee hears in closed session from a subcommittee which has held extensive hearings. Thurs

The first civil-rights measure—perhaps the antilynch bill—is expected to be called up for Senate debate toward the end of the session this spring. This would prevent a filibuster from stalling other "must" legislation.

Rules Committee Acts on Eve of Slated Clearance for Anti-Lynching Bill on Floor

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, April 28—A bill to abolish the Southern poll tax was approved today by the Senate Rules Committee by a vote of 7 to 2 on the eve of a scheduled clearance for an anti-lynching measure.

The anti-lynching bill previously had been put by the Republicans at the top of their calendar on the "civil rights program," a program demanded also by President Truman and Northern Democrats.

Action to bring out the poll tax repealer therefore was regarded mainly as giving the Republicans an alternative vehicle should the Southern Democrats stage a successful filibuster against the anti-lynching bill.

Even as this maneuver was going forward thirteen Southern Democratic Senators, headed by Harry F. Byrd of Virginia and Richard Russell of Georgia, were meeting in a quiet war council.

The Republicans were similarly marshalling and were claiming ability to smash the expected filibuster by applying a little-used Senate rule by which debate may be shut off. A two-thirds' majority is necessary to order this closure.

The bill forbidding the state poll tax as a prerequisite to voting, which already has been passed by the House, was recommended by the Senate Rules Committee on straight party lines. The seven endorsers were Republicans and the two dissidents were Democrats — Senators Carl Hayden of Arizona and John Stennis of Mississippi.

Senator Hayden told reporters that his objection to the bill was one fo method; the poll tax, he contended, should be ended by way of Constitutional Amendment. Thurs.

As to the anti-lynching bill, the Senate Judiciary Committee planned to meet tomorrow to report it out to the floor. 4-29-48

The Useless Poll Tax

The News
Birmingham, Ala.

To the Editor of The News:

There appeared in Sunday's News a letter by Ben J. Couchman on the "Qualifications to Vote." It appears to be factual and timely.

There was a time when the poll tax served a purpose, but now that we have the Boswell amendment the poll tax seems to be unnecessary. After every primary election we hear the charge that people were voted who were in arrears with their poll tax. We all know this has been done, and while some say there are fewer people voting now than in past years, we are yet making a political football out of the poll tax issue. Fri. 5-14-48

To oppose the poll tax doesn't mean that a person is not a good Democrat or that he is opposed to the democratic way of life. There are thousands of good, honest, sober men and women throughout Alabama who for one cause or another are in arrears with their poll tax, who, by repealing even the cumulative feature of the poll tax law, could be reclaimed and become full-fledged citizens, useful in the political sphere.

342(1)

We are somewhat inclined to quibble at times, and that's what we have been doing with the poll tax. We need a lot more men and women who will think for themselves, citizens who will quietly and prayerfully reason so that just and equitable conclusions may be arrived at. The poll tax has been the medium by which thousands of good men and women have disfranchised themselves, and now that we have reached a time and a period in the history of our great state where the poll tax becomes unnecessary, why not repeal the law and add to our voting lists thousands of good people who will help to make of our state a great state governed by a majority and not by a minority? It should be the purpose of all good citizens to get as many good people on the voting list as is possible so that a democracy may live and bring to the state and nation a brighter, a more refined and a nobler way of life. 5-14-48

Behind Poll Tax Battle

The News
Birmingham, Ala.
Fri. 7-30-48

BY JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, July 30—(AP)—This is the background of the poll tax fight in the Senate.

In seven Southern states—Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia—and in New Hampshire, people have to pay a poll tax before they can vote.

JAMES MARLOW

The question is: Should these poll taxes be repealed by federal law?

Southern Democratic senators warned they'd filibuster if the Republicans, who control Congress, tried to pass in the Senate such a repeal bill.

Poll taxes may range from $1 a year to much more than that, depending on the state, if a person fails to pay his tax for several years.

Because wages are lower in the South than in the rest of the country, foes of the tax argue that in those seven states, the poll tax keeps about 10,000,000 poor whites and Negroes from voting.

Negro organizations particularly want the tax abolished for the benefit of Southern Negroes.

SOUTHERN CONGRESS MEMBERS argue that the tax helps pay for schools and roads, that Congress has no right to interfere with voting requirements set up by states.

President Truman—besides asking the Republican-controlled Congress to do something about holding down living costs—also asked for a number of civil rights laws. The Republicans say they, too, want these laws.

Such civil rights laws—like an anti-lynching law or an anti-poll tax law—are aimed at giving Negroes in the South a greater sense of security and equality and helping them take a more active part in the life of their states.

Southern Congress members say their states also have the Negroes' interests at heart and are solving those problems, themselves.

LAST SUMMER the House passed a bill to wipe out the poll tax. There wasn't much trouble passing it there. The House has rules limiting debate on any bill. So enemies of the anti-poll tax bill couldn't talk endlessly.

The Southern Democrats are in a minority in the House. So it was simple for the other members to push through the bill when the Southerners had used up their talking time.

The News

In the Senate, the Southern Democrats are a minority, too. But there they can filibuster.

The Senate, unlike the House, has no limit on debate.

A senator, once he gets the floor, can talk without interruption—until he finishes or collapses.

When one senator goes on a filibuster, he can slow up the work of the Senate for a day or two.

When a whole group of senators—like the Southern Democrats—start a filibuster, they can talk in relays and keep the Senate from doing any other work for weeks.

THE ONLY WAY in which a filibuster can be stopped, is by two-thirds of the senators voting to limit debate. This is called cloture.

But in the Senate—where every senator knows that some day he, himself, may want to filibuster against some bill to kill it — it's pretty hard to get a two-thirds vote for cloture.

When the filibusterers really want to go to town, they can even prevent a vote to limit debate, by turning to other parliamentary rules.

Birmingham, Ala.

THE ANTI-POLL TAX BILL, passed by the House last year, lay around in the Senate for the rest of 1947, and it lay around this year, waiting.

Fri.

In June, when the Senate quit, the Republican leaders still had not brought up the bill for debate and vote.

7-30-48

But now the Republican leaders have said they were ready to bring it up at this special session as the first order of business.

(They explain that they need time to examine Mr. Truman's ideas on halting inflation and meanwhile they can go ahead with the anti-poll tax bill,)

If they bring up this bill—and the Southern Democrats start a filibuster, the filibuster could go on for weeks.

If this happens and inflation gets worse, the strategy of the Republicans may cost them dearly in the November elections.

But those same voters may lose faith in the Democratic Party altogether, if they see the Southern Democrats splitting the party and exploding Mr. Truman's whole special session program.

The Republicans then would be able to tell the voters truthfully that Mr. Truman's own Democratic Party couldn't agree on doing what he wanted.

Plumps for the Poll Tax

342(1)
The Courier Journal
Thurs. 7-28-49
Louisville, Ky.

There has been much propaganda in print regarding the poll tax requirements for voting. Now, to hold an election in our State requires paid officers at the polls, and paid vote counters. There is also the expense of ballots, stationery, printing and distribution. It costs a lot of money to hold an election, and no person who is unwilling to share some part of the expense of holding an election should expect the privilege of voting, be that person white or black.

People who pay no tax should not be allowed to vote either directly or indirectly in a way that would put taxes on others. Too often the fellow who pays little or no taxes does not care how expensive a poor government is to someone else.

Ask yourself this question: Is the person who is always looking for something for nothing basically honest? Is he worth catering to? Will not catering to him wreck the country? There are too many moochers who wish the other fellow to foot the bills of schooling, citizenship and even living.

Wings of the Morning

Tues 1-20-48

When New York City's Communist Councilman, Benjamin J. Davis, the other day told Texas Democratic Rep. Omar Burleson he doubted whether Burleson legally is in Congress, "because you come from a poll-tax state which disenfranchises Negroes and poor whites," he was making a legitimate taunt which should be outmoded after this year.

Perry

For this is the year in which the poll tax ought to be killed, and this is the Congress that ought to kill it without fail. There is no other way in which we shall be able to say of the next Congress, to be elected in November, that it reflects the "free choice of the people. . . ." And it is important that we should be able to say it, truthfully. Tues 1-20-48

What Really Counts

This is because a clear conscience is important, and because democracy is important. It is desirable, I take it, that Mr. Davis—and other critics of our system—be deprived of a point; but what really counts is that we ourselves should be able to know that our political system is what we say it is, and that our Government should have, in fact, the benefits of popular checks and guidance.

The truth is that Rep. Burleson—and all other members of Congress from the poll-tax states—do hold office at the hands of an electorate made up of a small minority of the adult citizens of their districts and states, and that this has been the case with representatives from those states for the past 50 years. 1-20-48

In the Way Of Many Citizens

PM

The truth is that the poll tax does stand in the way of the great majority of the citizens of those states, that to these democracy is only a word—and an aspiration. The circumstance is always shameful, often sordid, and a reproach upon us all. 1-20-48

This year's bill to remove the blight of the poll tax from Federal elections is H. R. 29, sponsored by Rep. George H. Bender. It has passed the House and is waiting attention in the Senate Subcommittee on Privileges and Elections, of which Sen. William E. Jenner is chairman. Sen. Taft's Steering Committee has the say at the moment—and no consequential excuse for not saying it promptly. New York, N.Y.

Sees Outlook As 'Excellent'

The National Committee to Abolish Poll Tax, which for the past eight years has pressed the free-suffrage issue upon the conscience of the Congress and the consciousness of the nation, belives the outlook for Senate passage of H. R. 29 to be "excellent." It urges, however, the necessity for quick Senate action—and this advice proceeds from the lessons of a bitter experience which has seen similar bills maneuvered into close-of-the-season filibusters in the Senate time after time.

The poll tax should be killed by a legislative determination taking off early this year. The task should proceed with wings, in order that we may be sure of free primary and general elections in America in 1948. It should be a joyous task, moreover, seeing that the purpose is to enable democracy, and that both the major parties are pledged to it. Tues. 1-20-48

Warping Element In Political Life

PM New York, N.Y.

We have a way of knowing exactly how many Americans despise the poll tax, for the number must equate exactly with those who sincerely feel that democracy is "the finest form of government on earth." The poll tax is the bar sinister upon our political countenance, a warping element in our political life, and a burden on the soul of all who regard the right to vote as "precious" and God-given," and an unfettered exercise of it as the first requisite for any government based on the concept of the decency and dignity of man. 1-20-48

Against Poll Tax

The News

Birmingham, Ala.

To the Editor of The News:

I am against the poll tax. In your paper Mr. H. H. Vaughn points out that the poll tax money goes to the schools. That is the most damning thing about it. An evil with a good phase is almost impossible to eradicate. In this case the advocates of the poll tax, who want it only to limit the right of some classes to vote, can shout: "This is a good thing. The money goes to the schools, don't you see?"

This is a retired teacher writing, who worked 24 years without saving anything, because there was nothing above necessary living expenses. Of course I am in favor of the schools having money enough. But there is no need to daub the tax onto people's right to vote—freely, without let or hindrance. They know that for some to say that some others shouldn't vote is a natural outrage. That is why they don't pay the $1.50 poll tax, while spending 50 times as much for cigarets. Wed.

The poll tax is wanted only as a control on the votes of some classes, no matter what else you may say in defense of it. The poll tax is a barbarism retained by only a few of the most reactionary of our United States, and by Portugal and Peru only, of all the other nations on earth.

There is nothing more disgusting than the fine arguments such as have been referred to in defense of a device which all the world knows is nothing but a clog on democracy. A government not willing to let everybody vote is not democratic, no matter how loudly you say it is. 3-24-48

Anti-Poll Tax Law Foes To Present Case

TEN MILLION DISFRANCHISED
BY POLL TAX, NAACP CLAIMS

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 25---"Poll tax representatives and senators have been able to return to Congress year after year to oppose civil rights legislation, only because the overwhelming majority of their constituents are completely disfranchised," Leslie Perry, of the NAACP's Washington Bureau, today told the Senate Rules and Administration Committee, which is holding hearings on the anti-poll tax bill which passed the House last July.

N.A.A.C.P. N.Y.

The NAACP representative told the committee that 10,000,000 American citizens, black and white alike, are disfranchised by the poll tax. He cited, as a typical county in poll tax states, Sumter, South Carolina, where, although workers were theoretically receiving high wages in 1944, 25 per cent of the Negro families and 2 per cent of the white families had an income of less than $500 a year. "With wage levels such as these," Perry contended, "it is clear to everyone that a tax on the right to vote constitutes an effective bar to a vast number of citizens."

"We find it very difficult to see how the United States can, in good conscience, insist on democracy in Europe and China, while at home it continues to permit unscrupulous politicians in seven southern states to nullify democracy through the exaction of a poll tax," the NAACP statement concluded.

Bender Denies He Is a Red

Louisville, Ky.

3-25-48

Washington, March 24 (U.P.)—Representative Bender (R., Ohio), author of the anti-poll-tax bill, today challenged Governor William M. Tuck of Virginia to define "American democracy." Thurs.

Bender said he objects to being a target of a general accusation by Tuck and Representative Almond (D., Va.) that it is Communists who are trying to abolish the poll tax. Almond is attorney general-elect of Virginia.

Bender's bill has been passed by the House. He appeared today as a witness before the Senate Rules Committee to support it. Tuck and Almond testified before the Senate group yesterday.

He's Presbyterian Elder.

The Courier-Journal

"I object to being referred to as a Red. I happen to be a Republican from Ohio . . . and an elder in the Presbyterian Church. And, frankly, there isn't anything about Protestantism or Catholicism that has anything in common with communism," Bender said. Louisville, Ky.

"Practically all my relatives live in Virginia and I know something about the way Virginia politics operate," said Bender. "In my state, the elections and politics are clean. The officials who never faced a clean election are afraid of them. I'd like to have him (Tuck) define American democracy." Thurs.

Bender said poll taxes originally were imposed in the various States to limit the vote and to disenfranchise white and Negro alike. As to opposition claims that the framers of the Constitution would have abolished poll taxes if they thought them unfair, Bender said those now existing are "no hang-over from colonial times." 3-25-48

Anti-Poll Tax Rider Voted Into Draft Bill

The Post

Washington, D.C.

Senate Refusal of 6 Changes Hints End Of Civil Rights Action

Tues. 6-8-48

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Senate last night wrote an antipoll-tax amendment into the draft bill after turning down six prior attempts to tack other civil rights riders to the measure.

Approval of the last of the racial rights amendments—by a 35 margin—cleared the major obstacle to passage of the military manpower bill.

While other controversial changes still are unsettled, Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) said he hoped for a final vote late today or Wednesday. If approved, the bill then goes to the House.

Believed All for This Year

Adoption of the soldiers and sailors' antipoll-tax proviso was followed by forecasts from both sides of the Senate that it would be the only civil rights legislation passed this year.

Senate Republican leaders lined up almost solidly against application of the major planks of President Truman's civil rights program to armed forces. They were offered by Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) and "tabled" or voted down decisively by the Senate yesterday.

But on the seventh vote, Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio), GOP policy chief in the upper house, threw his weight behind the proposal and it was carried. The proviso bans payment of a poll tax as a requirement for any serviceman voting for President, Vice President, United States Senator or Representative.

Says Understanding Violated

Acting Minority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) charged the GOP leadership support of the antipoll tax amendment violated an "understanding" the Democrats had with the Republican chiefs. That was, he said, that all of the Langer civil rights proposals would be shelved or defeated. Taft denied there was any such agreement.

Senator Lucas said he viewed the GOP leaders hip-backing of the anti-poll tax amendment with "amazement and amusement." He declared that it was clear to him from yesterday's action that the Republicans did not plan any further effort to put through civil rights legislation this year.

Southern Senators—who had promised a filibuster that might block passage of the draft if the civil rights program were tacked onto the bill—indicated last night they would accept the decision on the poll tax amendment.

Not Important Enough

Senator Richard Russell (D., Ga.), said the poll tax change was "not important enough" to warrant endangering the selective service bill. He said he believed most Southern Senators would support the measure despite the change.

The amendment provides:

"No person inducted into, or enlisted in, the armed forces for training and service under this Act, shall, during the period of such service, as a condition of voting in any election for President, Vice President, electors for President or Vice President, or for Senator or Member of the House of Representatives, be requird to pay any poll tax or other tax or make any other payment to any State or political subdivision thereof." Tues.

Taft, in supporting the proposal, declared it is similar to a provision adopted during the war. Senator Gurney, on the other hand, opposed the move on the ground it had not been approved by his committee and that the wartime antipoll-tax bar had been part of a general plan for absentee soldier balloting. 6-8-48

Favors Separate Bill

He declared that Congress should pass another such bill rather than add merely a part of that act to the draft bill as a rider. Earlier, Gurney had opposed Langer's other civil rights amendments on the ground they involved a "basic national question" which should be considered separately and not as a rider to the draft.

Gurney declared the armed forces now are meeting "the so-called racial question intelligently" and in accordance with a "long-range evolutionary plan." Adoption of the Langer amendments now, he said, would create a morale problem in the services "over night" where little or no problem now exists.

Reads 1944 Platform

The Post

Langer's first amendment—to abolish segregation in the armed forces—was shelved 67 to 7, on a "motion to table" offered by Gurney. After GOP chiefs backed Gurney's move, the former read the 1944 GOP platform, promising an end to racial discrimination in the military services.

"Not one thing has been done by any party to carry out that pledge," shouted Langer.

"This is the last chance we have to carry out that 1944 platform. The Republicans will have an awful time with people whose votes they want because they don't keep their campaign promises."

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) supported Langer, but declared "it is clear that Congress and the people of the United States are not ready for the civil rights proposals." He urged, however, that GOP chiefs support part of the program—anti-lynching or anti-poll tax legislation.

By voice vote, the Senate turned down several other Langer amendments. They included prohibition of "jimcrowism" on interstate carriers and in restaurants, requiring military contractors to abide by FEPC rules, and a ban on training troops in States having Jim Crow laws. Washington, D.C.

Another—making the lynching of a man in uniform a Federal crime—was tabled by a record vote of 61 to 7. Tues. 6-8-48

POLL TAX—HEINOUS

Editor, The Advertiser:

As a former resident of Crenshaw County, and as a political analyst, I have had the opportunity and privilege to study certain phases of our government and state laws that have attracted criticism against several of the states. What really appears to have more significance in my estimation than all the other such laws, is the infamous poll tax provision that exacts a fee for the secred privilege and right to vote.

Advertiser

As an Alabamian proud of the heritage, I feel that it is a duty and privilege to attack and expose the evident underlying intent of the poll tax law I do so with a sacred conviction that to eliminate the poll tax is another step toward better government. We can ill afford to tell the world that we have a free society while we still charge our deserving a paltry price for the right to vote. We still prefer to bear witness to the world society that our pride in Southern traditions shall remain inviolate, but as we view the iniquitous affliction thrust upon us by the tax on the privilege to vote, we must evade the matter or either emerge the vanquished in our desire to protect and uphold governmental ethics that are dear to us in the reputation of our state.

Montgomery, Ala.

In a factual analysis of the heinous poll tax law, we must recognize that the major motive is to keep Negroes from the polls—at the same time this law is barring prominent citizens of the white race from voting. It is touching to anyone to see the debt-ridden family heads barred from voting because due to misfortune they were not able to pay the poll tax and at the same time provide the necessities of life for their loved ones. Who are we to be afraid of a few Negroes voting? Eliminating the poll tax would provide the means by which thousands of our white citizens could go to the polls and exercise their rights as God-abiding and as law abiding citizens. This is not a matter of racial equality—only the fevered rabble rouser would try to make it so. His idea is to feed the flame of the racial spectre and thereby try to perpetuate his callous designs on the public. Such politicians are

But States Escape Talk About Them Because Of Interlocking Statutes

System Explained

New Hampshire Voter May Even Be Jailed If He Fails To Pay Sum

By FLETCHER F. ISBELL
(Copyright, 1948)

WASHINGTON—Four years ago an irritated resident of Lyme, N. H., wrote a New York newspaper: "In all the talk about poll tax states, I don't believe New Hampshire was ever mentioned. In New Hampshire the tax in the past has been $2 per voter, but now (this year) they have added a $3 soldier's bonus tax. Many can't vote for $5. Many who can are not going to vote because they can't consider a vote being worth a full $5. Of course it's worth more, but why should one have to purchase it?"

The vexed New Hampshireman voiced an impression common to many in his and some other New England states. They know that, in actual practice, they have to pay poll taxes to vote. They never hear their states mentioned in demands for Federal anti-poll tax legislation. New Hampshire officials stoutly deny any specific statute requires payment of their poll tax as a voting qualification—and they are correct to the letter. But:

1. No rural resident without property may vote in New Hampshire without having paid his poll tax.

2. No rural resident, with proerty or not, may vote without being assessed for his poll tax. He might possibly make payment after the election; but, once assessed, pay he must or suffer penalties so dire payment is infinitely preferable.

These situations are accomplished not by any one law, but by several which interlock. They produce the effect while enabling the statement that poll tax payment is not a voting requisite This situation apparently is what the State Athorney General's office means when it says, "It is generally understood that the current tax should be paid before a person may vote but it is not a specific requirement."

Certainly it is what the man from Lyme means.

The basic law is Article 31 of the state constitution. It provides that rural citizens must be either assessed or taxed in order to vote. In the case of a farmer with property, this means of course that the cost of his vote is the amount of his assessment. When the assessor comes to a man with no property above the statutory exemption, however, the citizen may remark that it seems he cannot qualify as an elector, as he owes no taxes.

"Not at all," the assessor may reply. "You are between the ages of 21 and 70, and are not a pauper or insane. Under the Revised Laws of New Hampshire, 1942, Vol. I, Chapter 73, Section 1, I must assess you for a head or poll tax of $2. That qualifies you." (Although New Hampshire was the highest poll tax state in the Union in 1944 and 1945, when the levy was the $5 complained of by the Lyme resident, the tax has since been lowered to its pre-war $2.)

The tax is payable on demand, without notice, if the collector chooses. He may seize and sell a delinquent's property to get the money. If there is no property, he can arrest the citizen and throw him into the county jail or house of correction, where he has to work out the tax at the rate of 50 cents a day, paying, however, $2.50 a week board. On a six-day week a citizen thus can

These are revised 1942 statutes. "Tax Collecting in New Hampshire," an instruction book for the State's tax collectors written in 1941 by William F. Howes, makes no bones about the course of action expected toward subversive characters: "An arrest should be the last resort but sometimes,—as in a case where a person who has refused to pay is inciting others to do likewise, —it is not any justifiable but commendable as a salutory lesson to others in law enforcement."

With this sort of backing, collectors in some of the smaller towns accompany selectmen when they make annual inventories of polls and property, and collect on the spot. Mr. Howes says this practice has been especially popular in lumber towns, where the woodsmen, living in company quarters, have no chance to avoid listing or payment.

Another Law

Such drumhead collection is optional with the official, however, and may not be undertaken. In such a case a propertyless rural resident who is assessed in the early part of the year may fancy he is going to vote in November before he pays the $2. He reckons without another law, freshly revised by the 1945 legislature. The amendment, to Section 10, Chapter 17 of the Revised Laws, orders each assessor to compile by June 1 a list of all poll taxes he has levied against persons having no property. He must send this list to the collector with a warrant requiring the latter to collect the taxes at once. The collector does

Taxpayers with property wait until fall, when they may pay their poll taxes with their property levies. Even the stern Mr Howes has a qualm about this disparate treatment. He remarks of the spring immediate payment list. "It would seem advisable to include all poll tax payers in such a list, instead of discriminating between the 'haves' and the 'have nots.'"

6-13-48

Only One Way

There is only one way a nonexempt inhabitant of New Hampshire may avoid paying a poll tax. If he really is almost penniless, he may ask abatement. The instant he does he really does lose his right to vote. Still another law specifically bars him.

New Hampshire is not the only Northern poll tax state, and of course there are others elsewhere, such as Nevada with its $2 levy. But the Federal bill to abolish the tax as a voting requirement is a current issue, and since it is so worded that New Hampshire's interlocking statutes are untouched, they become of special interest. Popular impressions even indicate fields of inquiry elsewhere. There is a belief for instance in West Rindge, in Southern New Hampshire, that a citizen may not vote in Massachusetts without poll tax payment, although there is clearly no such specific law.

The complete poll tax lineup in New England, as of a fairly recent period, was:

State	Date Assessed	Amount
Conn.	Oct. 1	$3
Maine	Apri. 1	$3
Mass.	Jan. 1	$2
N. H.	Apri. 1	$2
R. I.	June 15	$1
Vermont	Apri. 1	$1 plus

In Vermont each town adds to the grand list levy of $1 by imposing a poll tax of its own. Indignant denials sometimes issue from Hartford that the Connecticut levy is a poll tax because it is known there as an "old age assistance tax," from the use made of the revenue. It is, however, a true poll tax, being levied on every poll or head in the State between 21 and 60. The denials are recognition of the undesirable connotations that have built up around the phrase "poll tax," plus possibly some confusion of the word "poll," meaning head, with "polls," a voting place.

These undesirable connotations illustrate, incidentally, Southern indifference to psychological warfare before an explosion point is reached. Southern States could have given check to their poll tax opponents years ago merely by following Connecticut example and changing the name of the tax to its revenue use. In all Southern States the money goes entirely or partially for public school support, and the levy could as correctly be called a school tax. The explanatory difficulties of a committee to abolish the school tax would be considerable.

Montgomery

There is no doubt that New Hampshire likes its poll tax. Except for such occasional grumblings as those from Lyme or the lumber camps, it is supported by the bulk of the citizenry. Mr. Howes puts the reasons: "Without doubt, it is the fairest and most equitable levy that can be made. It is the only contribution that many residents are called upon to make toward the running expenses of their own home town.—and there is no $2 investment that brings so much in return."

Advertiser

They Agree

Both New England and Southern States thus seem in agreement on the fair nature of the tax, its use as a prerequisite to other privileges being the only argument. New Hampshire requires poll tax payment before a citizen can get an automobile driving license, register a car, or get a hunting or fishing license; and indirectly before a farmer or lumberman may vote. It collects strictly, regardless whether these privileges are desired. Six Southern States do not touch sports or livelihoods with it, but make it a prerequisite to Democratic primary and general election voting. Another, South Carolina, requires it only in the formality of the general election. The tax is not charged for voting, but for school and sometimes other revenue, and all affected citizens owe it whether they vote or not, or even if they have lost the privilege of voting by a felony conviction. No state, however, forces payment. The voting attraction is the only incentive to collection. This more liberal concept was expressed in an Alabama case: "Obligation to pay a poll tax is not an obligation that may be enforced by legal process or otherwise, but is to be performed voluntarily as a test of good citizenship, leaving question of qualification under this section to the individual." (Davis vs. Teague, 220 Ala. 309, 125 So. 51.)

6-13-48

In the past few realists have had much doubt that the anti-poll tax bill, already passed by the House, would fail to pass the Senate on a showdown vote. Its opponents place heavy reliance on constitutional arguments. It is true the bill's constitutionality is so doubtful, at charitable best, that the Supreme Court could sustain it only by the unlikely procedure of reversing itself in the 1884 case of Ex parte Yarbrough, a landmark decision for state control of the franchise which has been cited and relied on by the court in cases since. But many supporters of the bill want a law regardless of its constitutionality or lack of it, and they have the votes.

Without Contest

If the bill is enacted, some of the seven affected states probably would accept the statute without contest. Repeal movements have made headway in some anyway, notably Tennessee, Virginia, and Arkansas. A considerable segment of opinion holds, too, that since the comparatively minor matter of the poll tax has served as a take-off point by sectional interests for incessant excursions into the fields of morals and ethics, not to mention psychiatry, it might be better to wipe out that particular issue.

But some states may object to being told what their voting requirements must be. This is reaction or American independence, depending on the point of view. If they do go to the Supreme Court, past decisions of that body indicate their chances of invalidating the act are better than even.

But they do not have to. Regardless of the way these events may transpire, it is apparent some language more airtight than that of the present bill must be found to achieve the effect desired by its proponents. For the New Hampshire example is a shining light to any state that wants to take advantage of it.

The present bill would prohibit payment, not assessment, of a poll tax as a voting requirement. It thus does not touch New Hampshire, even if enacted and sustained by the Supreme Court.

Neither would it touch any state which:

6-13-48

1. Repealed its poll tax voting requirement.
2. Made tax assessment in general, a qualification instead.
3. By another statute levied a per capita tax without reference to voting, as do all the New England states.
4. By still another statute made the tax payable on demand at time of assessment, at option of the collector, as does New Hampshire.

If this procedure ever was carried to the Supreme Court and invalidated for the Southern States, there would be some snarled New England state constitutions as well.

Coattails Flapping, Tobey Takes Up For Home State

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.
Wed. 8-4-48

WASHINGTON — (AP) — His coattails flapping, Senator Tobey (R), New Hampshire, rushed into the Senate Tuesday to deny that New Hampshire citizens have to pay a poll tax before they can vote.

Tobey, who spilled out words so fast the official reporters couldn't keep up with him, shouted that Southerners were "wrong, all wrong" in this contention. 34e(1)

It all started when Senator Sparkman (D), Alabama, interrupted a long speech by Senator Hill (D), Alabama, to say that under New Hampshire law a man could be sent to jail for failure to pay a $2 poll tax. Sparkman said the citizen would have to work it out at 50 cents a day but pay $2.50 a day to the jailor for his keep.

Hill said they don't put a man in jail down South if he doesn't pay his poll tax.

Tobey came bursting out of the Senate cloakroom at this moment to announce he had been told by Senator Taft (R), Ohio, that New Hampshire's tax was being debated.

"I ran in here quickly to put out the fire," the New Hampshire senator declared.

He read a letter from George H. Duncan, New Hampshire tax commissioner, saying "it is not true" that the payment of a poll tax is a qualification for voting in that state. 8-4-48

Tobey said Senator Eastland (D), Mississippi, his friend and "fellow traveler to the United Nations conference at San Francisco" was to blame for bringing the matter up.

Eastland then read a newspaper article which said New Hampshire law called for the assessment of a poll tax, but indicated that people were not required to pay it in order to vote. Wd. 8-4-48

Tobey retired to the cloakroom, tossing over his shoulder the observation that "Shakespeare once wrote a play entitled 'Much Ado About Nothing'."

Rep. Bender Given Plaque

HONORED FOR POLL TAX ABOLITION EFFORT

34e(1)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Honored for his efforts to eliminate the poll tax, Rep. George H. Bender, Ohio at large, is presented a testimonial plaque by Mrs. Virginia Foster Durr (right), vice chairman of the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax. Participating in the ceremony is Mrs. Mary McLeob Bethune, president of the National Council for Negro Women. The presentation was made at a recent dinner given by the national committee. Bender is the author of an anti-poll tax measure which will soon be debated on the House floor.

Southern Democrats Near Victory In Poll Tax Fight

Columbia Record

The Southern Democrats have been conducting their leisurely "educational campaign" on a motion to take up the anti-poll tax bill.

34e(1)

Yesterday Senator Kenneth S. Wherry, Republican leader, backed by four Northern Democrats, tried to break the three-day filibuster by filing a petition to invoke the cloture rule so as to limit debate.

This could have been done only by two-thirds vote.

Columbia, S.C.

But in this case, Senator Dick Russell of Georgia raised the point of order that cloture could not be applied to a motion to take up a bill.

Tue. 8-3-48

And Senator Vandenberg, president of the Senate, ruled that cloture could be invoked only to limit debate on a pending "measure" not a "pending motion."

Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, G. O. P. policy leader, appealed the whole Senate from the chair's ruling.

The appeal, itself, however, is debatable and the Southerners are proceeding to debate it.

If they wanted to do so they could carry on the debate on this appeal for another week or so and when it was over they could take up again on the original motion to bring the anti-poll tax bill to the Senate floor.

8-3-48

It can almost be put down now as certain that the Southerners have won their fight, not, of course, without a bit of aid from the Republicans who like them see no sense in Truman's special political session.

When the Republicans are ready to take up the first of the measures they want to pass they will work out an agreement with the Southern Democrats to side-track the civil rights bills and the educational campaign will be ended. Until then it will go on and on.

Dropping Of Poll Tax Brings Better Government, Author Says

34e(1)

Daily World

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—The dropping of the poll tax in Georgia has brought about better government and more interest in government among the people, Lillian Smith, a native of Georgia, declared in a recent article printed in the ADA World, published by the Americans for Democratic Action.

In describing Georgia in its poll tax days she told of a state where the poor people knew that government was not for them. She told how from time to time "somebody" paid people's poll taxes and herded them to the polls and told them who to vote for.

"Anyone who had watched this happen and who loves man's freedom knows the poll tax is no small evil as some say carelessly, but termites crumbling the foundations of democracy," she said.

Changed Picture

Since two and a half years ago when the poll tax was abolished in Georgia, she wrote, the picture has changed. People who have never voted, and never thought to do so are now watching their votes and scrutinizing the candidates.

"Workers on my farm," she said, "planting corn in the field, will stop in the middle of a furrow to talk politics. . . . Five years ago, they didn't care who was elected or why. But they care now and it is hard to fool them. Their free vote has become too precious to waste.

TEN MILLION DISFRANCHISED BY POLL TAX

34e(1)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 25—"Poll tax representatives and senators have been able to return to Congress year after year to oppose civil rights legislation, only because the overwhelming majority of their constituents are completely disfranchised," Leslie Perry, of the NAACP's Washington Bureau, today told the Senate Rules and Administration Committee, which is holding hearings on the anti-poll tax bill which passed the House last July.

Fri 4-9-48

San Francisco Calif.

The NAACP representative told the committee that 10,000,000 American citizens, black and white alike, are disfranchised by the poll tax. He cited as a typical county in the poll tax states, Sumter, South Carolina, where, although workers were theoretically receiving high wages in 1944, 25 per cent of the Negro families and 2 per cent of the white families had an income of less than $500 a year. "With wage levels such as these," Perry contended, "it is clear to everyone that a tax on the right to vote constitutes an effective bar to a vast number of citizens."

Fri 4-9-48

"We find it very difficult to see how the United States can, in good conscience, insist on democracy in Europe and China, while at home it continues to permit unscrupulous politicians in seven southern states to nullify democracy through the exaction of a poll tax," the NAACP statement concluded.

South Loses on Draft Bill Amendment

6 Other Proposals on Civil Rights Defeated

Detroit Mich.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Senate voted Monday night to outlaw state poll taxes as a condition to voting in Federal elections by members of the armed forces.

Southern Democrats, after several hours of talking against the proposal, abandoned the fight and permitted the amendment to the draft bill to come to a vote.

* * *

IT WAS ADOPTED, 37 to 35. Senator Langer (R., N. D.) sponsored the amendment, along with six others based on President Truman's civil-rights program.

All the others were shelved or voted down without the senators' passing on the civil-rights issue itself.

6-8-48

But the antipoll tax amendment produced a bitter fight threatening at times to become a filibuster that could have blocked passage of draft and other legislation before Congress adjourns June 19.

Voting for the antipoll tax proposal were 34 Republicans, including Michigan's Senator Vandenberg, and three Democrats. Five Republicans and 30 Democrats opposed it.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) was absent from Washington and not recorded.

* * *

MANY BACKERS of the President's rights program voted against most of the Langer amendments to avoid delaying action on the draft.

Langer's amendment to bar all race segregation in the military services was defeated on a roll call vote of 67 to 7.

Thirty-four Republicans, including Vandenberg, and 33 Democrats voted to table the proposal with five Republicans and two Democrats opposed.

One of the rejected amendments would have forbidden segregation of service men traveling on trains, buses or other interstate means of transportation. Another would have made lynching of a service man a Federal crime.

6-8-48

REPUBLICAN leaders, who had stood firm against the first six amendments on tactical grounds, divided on the antipoll tax proposal.

Senator Taft (R., O.), indorsed it and called for a roll call.

Southern senators were on their feet at once.

Detroit Free Press

Senator Russell (D., Ga.) shouted that the amendment "goes to the very heart of the Constitution of the United States and for that reason should not be adopted."

Senator Stennis (D., Miss.) said he challenged the right of Congress to legislate on state voting. He declared that state suffrage taxation and police powers are not subject to Congressional "interference."

Poll Tax Bill Starts Polite Filibustering

Washington Post

Washington D.C.

Southerners Lacking In Old Fiery Attack; Republicans Go Along

A "gentleman's filibuster" with courteous assists from the Senate Republican leadership, got under way yesterday as Southern Democrats launched their campaign against Federal action to repeal the poll tax.

Missing entirely were the old Southern fire-and-brimstone appeals to emotion and racial prejudices.

Fri. 7-30-48

Missing, too, were any signs of a squirming GOP drive to dam at the outset a flood of oratory against one of the 18 points covered by President Truman in his message to Congress Tuesday.

Not yet ready to act on either inflation or housing, the two major demands the Chief Executive made on Congress, the Republicans placidly agreed to let members of the President's own party air their differences with the Administration position.

Height of Courtesy

The very height of senatorial courtesy and consideration was reached.

Senator Tom Stewart (D., Tenn.) ran out of material late in the afternoon. He politely mentioned to the Acting Republican floor leader that he had some more material available in his office and he wished to continue for another 30 minutes.

Therefore, he said, he would ask unanimous consent to hold over the tag-end of his speech until this morning.

Suavely the Republicans agreed and the Senate was recessed at 4:14 p. m., until 11 a. m. today with the understanding that Stewart has the floor at that time. He can yield to another Southern Democrat if he gets weary.

Hill Startles Chamber

Only once was a loud note sounded in the gentle harmony. That was apparently because of a short-lived confusion in signals.

GOP Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.) had gained the floor and given a long speech accusing the Administration of discouraging meat production.

7-30-48

When he ground to a halt, Alabama's Senator Lister Hill jumped to his feet and startled the quiet and sleepy chamber with a loud demand for recognition.

Apparently Hill had feared some surprise move to catch the Southerners unaware and quash the filibuster.

7-30-48

When Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) nodded recognition, Hill dropped his voice several octaves and said he merely wanted to put a speech in the Congressional Record.

"I thought the place was on fire," quipped Vandenberg.

Stennis Leads Talkathon

Smiling, Hill apologized profusely for "alarming the chair" and obtained permission to place in the Record the speech he made at the Democratic National Convention nominating Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) as the South's protest candidate for the Presidency.

The filibuster-by-gentleman's-agreement was on again.

The Southern talkathon was led by Senator John S. Stennis (D., Miss.). Successor to the late Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Stennis is as much of a contrast to the vituperative, fire-eating Bilbo as it is possible to imagine.

A Phi Beta Kappa and former judge, Stennis based his entire argument upon constitutional issues.

Senate passage of the House-approved bill, Stennis declared, would "set a precedent whereby a mere majority of the Congress can prescribe qualifications of the voters that are to elect the members of Congress."

Wants People to Decide

He urged that this power should rest with the people.

"Let the people pass a constitutional amendment (barring the poll tax) if they wish," he said, "but above all else, let us preserve the Constitution as it is now written and also preserve it later as it may be amended."

Fri. 7-30-48

At the President's press conference yesterday a reporter asked: "Do you think that the Senate has acted in good faith in starting its work on the civil rights controversy?"

Fri.

At first Mr. Truman said he had no omment. Then he added that the Senate stands before the country—in the November election—just as he does. The Senators, he stated, will have to take the consequences of their own actions.

Poll Tax Robs 10 Million, Poor Whites Hit Hardest

Afro American

Sat 3-27-48

WASHINGTON

The poll tax—which disfranchises 10 million white and colored citizens in seven Southern States—keeps seven white to every three colored persons away from the polls, a statistical report released last week by The National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax revealed.

Baltimore, Md.

The figures released by Mrs. Sarah H. D'Avila, the committee's executive secretary, showed that only 3,118,000 out of 14,548,000 potential voters cast a ballot in the last Presidential election in the poll-taxed States, or 19% of the potential voters.

(There were eight poll-tax States during the 1944 Presidential election. Georgia repealed its poll tax as of Feb., 1945).

Whites Suffer Most

Mrs. D'Avila emphasized that the 7 to 3 ratio between white and colored people kept from the polls by the tax is important, because it indicates that the tax is no respector of color—falling more heavily on the poor white than the colored person.

In the three Southern States where the poll tax had been repealed up to 1944—North Carolina, Louisiana and Florida—the committee's figures showed that 32.6% of the potential voters voted.

Revealing Comparisons

In States that never had a poll tax and never set up other barriers to voting, 63% of the potential voters went to the polls. Southern poll-tax States, storm centers of the civil rights' "revolt," have the smallest percentage of voting to total population.

The percentages of potential votes cast in poll-tax States in 1944 were: Alabama, 15; Arkansas, 20;

Sat 3-27-48

Georgia, 16; Mississippi, 15; South Carolina, 10; Tennessee, 28; Texas, 22; and Virginia, 19. The percentages in the three States which repealed the tax before 1944 were: North Carolina, 40; Louisiana, 24; and Florida, 34.

GOP Doublecrossed Race on Poll Tax Bill

The Courier Sat 8-14-48

Pittsburgh, Pa.

By LEM GRAVES Jr.

(Courier's Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON—Another Republican "promise"—to do something "next year" about the Senate rules for breaking filibusters—featured the complete GOP capitulation to the Southern Democrats on the poll tax issue in the Senate here last week.

Notwithstanding the fact that the GOP had "promised" this cloture revision before and had done nothing about several rule-changing resolutions before it for the two years of the Eightieth Congress, the GOP leadership, with a naive contempt for the intelligence and the memories of Negro voters in this country, blandly passed over the poll tax bill—after using it for the transparently phony purpose of sabotaging the President's program for the special session — with a "wait-until-next-year" promise.

GOP'S SOLID RETREAT

The tricky parliamentary maneuvers which resulted in effectively killing the poll tax bill found the Republicans voting—to a man—to displace the bill after it had served their purpose. Every GOP Senator in the upper chamber—without a single exception—voted with the Dixiecrat filibusters from the South to "adjourn" last Wednesday instead of recessing so that the pending business, the anti-poll tax bill, would not be removed from the calendar.

Sat 8-14-48

This coalition of Southern Democrats and all of the Republicans rolled up a 69-to-16 vote for "adjournment" with only the Truman Democrats voting to keep the poll tax bill on the floor.

The last six hours of the "filibuster" were consumed by Republican Senator Wayne Morse, liberal Oregon solon, who placed in the record an answer to the constitutional argument against the poll tax bill by the Dixiecrats. However, in addition to presenting the liberal argument on the poll tax bill, prepared by NAACP attorneys, Senator Morse gave his lengthy address a political flavor by insisting that his views represented the stand of the Republican party.

MORSE FOOLED NOBODY

Not even the most naive political observer was misled, however, into the belief that Senator Morse's rather advanced and enlightened views on this subject could be disguised as the views of the GOP party and its leadership in the Senate.

A notoriously "irregular" maverick in the Republican fold, Senator Morse has seldom undertaken to speak for the Republican party before and, in the face of the obvious sham with which the GOP leadership had booted around the civil rights issue placed before it by Mr. Truman, most observers expressed considerable surprise at this aspect of the six-hour Morse pronouncement.

Man Files Suit To Compel Collection of The Poll-Tax

Journal Guide Sat 8-14-48

Norfolk Va.

By Associated New Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Jennings Perry, former local newspaper man and currently president of the Tennessee Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax, filed suit in chancery court here last week seeking to force collection of the poll tax, in an effort to demonstrate whether it is good or bad. The suit asks a writ of mandamus to require the county trustees to collect the tax.

Sat 8-14-48

Perry said his suit is based on the fact that "it may be that proper enforcement of the tax will demonstrated whether it is a good tax or a bad one." His theory is that under state laws every inhabitant between 21 and 50 years of age, not specifically exempted by statute to pay an annual poll tax of $1 to the county trustee, is obliged to observe that law. Counties are authorized to charge a similar amount, which makes the tax amount to $2 usually.

The suit will be heard before Chancellor William J. Wade on Aug.

69-16 Senate Vote Puts Poll-Tax Fight On Shelf

Burial of Bill Held Victory for 'Dixiecrats'; Barkley Says G.O.P. Ends 'Week of Futility'

Thur. 8-5-48

By ROBERT L. RIGGS

The Courier-Journal Washington Bureau.

Washington, Aug. 4.—Twenty-four Democrats joined with 45 Republicans in the Senate today to give the anti-poll-tax bill its usual burial. Sixteen Democrats held out to the end to keep up the fight for the measure which would forbid states to make the payment of poll taxes a requisite to voting in federal election.

The vote of 69 to 16 by which the bill was laid aside brought to a close the Southern filibuster which has kept the Senate motionless from the moment it assembled in response to President Truman's call.

States' Rights Democrats' plans to campaign in Kentucky are reported on Page 2.

Not a Republican Senator voted against the motion which shelved the poll-tax fight. Even Wayne Morse of Oregon and William Langer of North Dakota stuck by the decision reached at the Republican conference this morning. The Republicans were joined in a body by 23 Dixie Democrats, plus Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, who long has argued that the anti-poll-tax bill is unconstitutional.

Barkley Leads Democrats.

Thur. 8-5-48

Under the leadership of Alben W. Barkley, the following Democrats voted to keep up the fight against the Southern filibuster:

Downey, California; Green, Rhode Island; Hatch, New Mexico; Johnson, Colorado; Kilgore, West Virginia; Lucas, Illinois; Magnuson, Washington; McGrath, Rhode Island, who is Democratic national chairman; McMahon, Connecticut; Murray, Montana; Myers, Pennsylvania; Pepper, Florida; Thomas, Oklahoma; Thomas, Utah, and Taylor of Idaho, who is Henry A. Wallace's running mate.

Barkley told the Republicans that in ending the fight they were "bringing to an end more than a week of futility." The Senate is no more ready to take action on Truman's requests than it was when it assembled a week ago Monday, Barkley said.

Wherry Tells 'Travesty.'

"There is no business now on the calendar that wasn't there a week ago," Barkley said. "We've heard rumors of a joint committee, composed of the Republican members of the Banking and Currency Committees of the two houses, being appointed to survey the situation and see what may be brought in.

"It may not lie in my mouth to question the appointment of a partisan committee, instead of having the whole membership of those committes handle the matter. But today the situation is precisely what it was when we started. The American people will regard this as a travesty upon free enterprise in legislation.

"The American people do not understand all the intricacies of parliamentary maneuvering. But I think they will understand it if we don't accomplish anything here."

Thur 8-5-48

Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska, acting majority leader, defended his party's decision not to have night sessions in an effort to break the filibuster.

"Holding night sessions in an attempt to do the impossible would be hypocrisy," Wherry said. "There could be no breaking of the filibuster until the Senate's rules are changed."

Both Barkley and Wherry gave their pledges to work for a change in the Senate rules at the next session so that filibusters can be broken.

"At least," Wherry said, "we have done one thing this week. We have demonstrated to the American people that our rules must be changed."

POLL TAX EFFECT IN SOUTH IS VIEWED

The Times

Extent of Its Cut In to Vote Held Moot—Figures Explain Low General Election Balloting

New York, N.Y.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, July 30—The pending anti-poll tax bill would strike down that qualification on voting not only in the general elections but in primaries as well, wherever these involved races for the Presidency and for the House and Senate.

Sat

It would, however, by no means end various restrictions on voting in the South, some of them official and some simply based on custom.

Apart from ordinary literacy tests, where many prospective voters would fail, there are other requirements. In Mississippi, for example, the election officials may require a prospective voter to interpret, to their satisfaction, the State Constitution.

7-31-48

The question, therefore, as to precisely how deeply the poll tax cuts into the vote in the South generally is one long lost in controversy, although beyond dispute it has a restrictive effect.

Some anti-poll tax advocates have pointed to the low totals in general elections in the South to support their contention that the poll tax had a widely disfranchising effect.

This, however, runs at least to some extent against the observable facts, known to all long residents of the South, that nine times in ten a general election in the South is largely meaningless and that thousands of perfectly qualified voters habitually abstain.

This, of course, is due to the fact that the real "election" in the South is the Democratic primary.

The latest figures available of voting in a national race, that for Congress in 1946, as given by the office of the House author of the poll tax repealer, Representative George Bander of Ohio, show the following:

Alabama, for all nine House seats 271,069 in the primary and 179,488 in the general election.

Arkansas, for three contested House seats in the primary 51,470; for all seven seats in the general election, 151,333.

Mississippi, for four contested House seats 137,422 in the primary; for all seven seats 50,037 in the general election.

South Carolina, for three contested House seats 146,250 in the primary; 26,388 for all six seats in the general election.

POLL-TAX SUFFRAGE

The Times

The fight to enact a federal law to bar the payment of a poll tax as a qualification for voting in national elections has been lost in the special session because of the Southern filibuster. The war must go on. The poll tax is a vermiform appendix on the body politic, the last holdover of the old days of property qualification, a form of political snobbery that has no place in a democracy. Although used primarily against the Negro in the South, it acts no less against many poor white people. The report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights estimated that in the 1944 Presidential elections only 18.31 per cent of the eligible voters in eight Southern poll-tax states cast their ballots. This contrasted with a percentage of 68.74 of eligible voters voting in the forty other states. Even in the primaries, which are sometimes called the real Southern elections, the poll-tax states are far below the national average in percentage of votes cast.

Fri 8-6-48

Many progressive Southerners are opposed to the poll tax. Four Southern states—North Carolina, Louisiana, Florida and Georgia—have abolished the tax since 1921. Georgia, in 1945, was the last. If the Southern states believe an attempt to abolish the tax by federal statute is an invasion of their rights, they have an easy remedy at hand. They can abolish the tax themselves.

It is difficult to see how anyone except a politician bent on using public office for private profit could favor a poll tax, or other restrictions, which hold a vote to 18.31 per cent, or less, of the eligibles. That is a situation made to order for demagogues. You can fool some of the people some of the time, or maybe all the time, as Lincoln implied in his negative statement on the matter. The smaller the fraction the easier it should be to keep them befuddled.

New York N.Y.

If the filibuster in Congress against a federal statute serves to illuminate some of the disabilities of the poll tax for the average citizen who has to pay through his other, and larger, taxes for incompetent officials, then it will have done that much good. When the Rebel yells in Congress have died away the citizens of the seven Southern states that still have the poll tax might start a calm evaluation of just what the poll tax does or does not do. We believe they will find that the disabilities accruing from it far outweigh dubious virtues attributed to it.

THE POLL-TAX FILIBUSTER

The Times

Sat 7-31-48

New York N.Y.

The abolition of the poll tax in seven Southern states cannot be regarded as an emergency. Even the President's Committee on Civil Rights, reporting last year, did not so treat it. The Committee recommended "prompt state action," failing which it believed that "the nation, either by act of Congress or by constitutional amendment, should remove this final barrier to universal suffrage." Certainly this meant a year or two of grace. But circumstances have brought the matter to a head at this special session. President Truman at Philadelphia openly challenged the Republicans to enact their civil rights plank, even if they had to beat down a filibuster to do it. Now they have the filibuster. The House has four times passed this measure. The Senate would pass it if it could be brought to a vote. A minority of Senators, not all of them from poll-tax states, is willing to hold up the nation's business and prevent legislation of a really emergency character in order to prevent a vote.

This situation presents two issues. One of them is majority rule. Is the Senate maintaining its own dignity and meeting its own responsibility when, under the guise of freedom of debate, it permits a legislative question to be decided by one-fourth or less of its membership? The other issue is the poll tax itself. It has been plausibly argued that Congress has no power to legislate in this field without a constitutional amendment. We cannot be sure on this point until an anti-poll-tax bill has been passed and appealed to the Supreme Court. Obviously the filibustering Senators do not believe the Court would annul the law, or they would not be so desperately trying to prevent its passage.

Whatever the constitutional argument, the practical argument for abolishing the poll tax and other limitations on universal suffrage is that federal officials elected in communities where universal suffrage is denied make or administer laws for all of us. It is of concern to a citizen of New York or Vermont that these officials be democratically chosen. The poll-tax Senators who are now trying to throw a monkey wrench into the machinery of the special session are an excellent illustration of how grave that concern can be. The Republican majority in the Senate has the power to kill this filibuster. It will be untrue to its own principles if it does not do it.

'Nauseous Southern Filibuster'

Mon. 8-2-48

WASHINGTON—Once again we have the somewhat nauseous spectacle of a filibuster by a handful of Southern Senators to prevent action on a measure to lift one of the restrictions in the South on the right to vote, a basic right in our Democracy. In bringing forward the bill to repeal the poll tax as a prerequisite of voting for Federal officials, the Republican Senate leadership has selected the least controversial of the measures embraced in the Civil Rights Program they long have indorsed and which now also carries the specific indorsement of President Truman and the general but unmistakable indorsement by the 1948 Democratic platform.

Developments will show to what extent the Republican leadership is sincere in pushing this bill forward at the outset of the special session and to what extent it is a political maneuver to embarrass President Truman by revealing the split in his own Party and thus retaliation for his call for a special session. It is obvious that this issue could provide a convenient blockade against some of the other legislation that the President has asked of the Republican Congress and that the Southern wing of the Democratic Party could be charged with the blame.

The test of Republican sincerity will come in whether it makes a real effort. after a reasonable time of discussion for this much-discussed issue, to limit debate through cloture and get action. That requires a two-thirds vote.

Whatever Republican motives may be—and doubtless they are mixed, politics being what it is—the Southerners must bear the onus of tangling up Senate procedure by a corruption of the rights and privileges of a legislative minority and of whatever ill effects accrue to other pending legislation from their obstructive tactics. 8-2-48

With our Democracy on parade before the world today it is time to make at least this start affecting the fundamental right of a free ballot. This is not the only impediment on the ballot in the South, but it is one easily reached and removed. The need for abolition of the poll tax has been recognized among many Southerners for a long time. This is attested not only by the fact that in recent years four Southern States have abolished the poll tax, but also by the active campaigns against this and other discriminations. The success of this campaign by earnest Southerners is manifest in a general increase in voting by Negroes in the South since 1940, as is shown by an analysis by Luther P. Jackson, Professor of History at Virginia State College, made for the Southern Regional Council.

The Constitution

This activity has included the bringing of court cases which resulted in the Supreme Court's outlawry of the "white primary." another voting restriction, the subsequent campaigns against various subterfuges to maintain the "white primary," and campaigns against registration practices by which Negroes are kept from voting, which is now perhaps the most serious and effective form of disfranchisement.

Atlanta, Ga.

The filibuster is stark evidence of one fact often commented upon here, which is the backwardness of many members of Congress from the South as contrasted with the forward look of many people in the South who are working for changes and who are misrepresented by leaders who stalk up and down the Senate chamber in their cheap and shoddy filibuster performance. Mon. 8-2-48

Georgia was the latest State to abolish the poll tax. Others which have done away with it in recent years are North Carolina, Florida and Louisiana. But there are still seven States where a citizen has to pay a tax for the principlege of voting, itself un-American and un-democratic—Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina. Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. In three of these States it is cumulative, two years in Mississippi, three in Virginia, and in Alabama for as many years as the ctizen has failed to pay since he came of voting age. In those States, particularly, and to a degree in others, it is an effective deterrent to voting among many persons, both colored and white, of low incomes.

While this reform preferably should be achieved by the States, themselves, the difficulties in the States where the tax is still imposed are so great that it has become necessary for Congress to act in the field where it has authority, in election of Federal officials. This is important for democratic formulation of National policy.

Ugly Collusion For the Poll Tax

The Courier-Journal

Louisville, Ky

COLLUSION between Southern Democrats and the Republican Senate majority has doomed already any federal anti-poll tax legislation at the extra session. Also it has wasted precious time. It is particularly cynical in that the Republicans already are promising an anti-poll tax bill of their own at the January session of Congress, but for obvious political reasons are making no sincere effort to break the filibuster which Southern States' Righters have begun.

34e(1)

Sat. 7-31-48

There is not even the prospect of a vote on the merits of the anti-poll tax bill which already has passed the House of Representatives. The filibuster is not on passage of the bill, but merely on a motion to bring the bill before the Senate for a vote.

In one respect the filibuster is revealing. It has afforded opportunity for an additional estimate of Senator JOHN C. STENNIS of Mississippi. The contrast in manner between him and the late Senator THEO BILBO, whom he replaces, is great. Where there was shouting and bitter demagoguery on BILBO's part, there is quiet dignity on the part of STENNIS. During his share of the filibuster, Senator STENNIS set something of a precedent by limiting himself to talk that pertained to the motion under consideration. Yet his determination to repress what the Dixiecrats consider "anti-Southern" legislation is as great as BILBO's. It stems from a curious conviction that the Federal Constitution does not apply to Negroes.

Sat. 7-31-48

Since the Republican majority does not make any such absurd contention, it is shameful that the majority is willing to use a regional neurosis to set up the fake claim that it is the Democrats, after all, who have blocked the anti-poll tax bill. The truth is that the Republicans are willing to see good legislation go by default rather than have it pass in such a way as to bring credit to President TRUMAN.

Time for Action On the Poll Tax

Courier Journal

34e(1)

VOTERS in the poll-tax states reading election returns may well conclude that it is time for the poll-tax to go. The Administration, backed by "TRUMAN majorities," is against it, the Republicans professedly are against it, Southern liberals are against it, several Southern States have already abandoned it. The seven still clinging to the vote-killing device would do well to follow their lead promptly, if they really wish to avoid action on a Federal basis.

Mon. 11-8-48

Louisville, Ky

The election returns to date re-tell the old story of the poll-tax requirement helping to disfranchise millions in the poll-tax States, of far heavier voting in the others. Notable, as usual, is the record in South Carolina. With a population (1940) of 1,988,804, the Palmetto State sent only 125,217 voters to the polls Tuesday.

The great States of Virginia and Tennessee had a turnout only a little more creditable, when contrasted with their non-poll tax neighbors in Kentucky, North Carolina, and West Virginia. The following table tells the story:

	Kentucky	N. C.	W. Va.	Tenn.	Va.
Pop.	2,845,627	3,571,623	1,901,974	2,915,841	2,677,773
Vote	780,925	695,932	735,769	520,096	415,975

The poll-tax as a voting requirement is both a State and a national issue. The individual States have a legal right to keep it for their State elections, if they wish to continue the inexcusably undemocratic practice. But the Federal Union of States as a whole has the right and the duty to end this abuse in elections for Federal officials, and the time for such action now seems happily near.

Calls GOP's Affinity With Dixie Bloc On Bill 'Insult' to Our Intelligence

Baltimore, Md.

By JAMES L. HICKS

NEW YORK (NNPA) — The National Citizens Committee for the Re-election of President Truman opened its campaign to raise a million dollars here last Thursday with a charge that the Senate dropped action on the anti-poll tax bill on the orders of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, GOP Presidential nominee.

Mrs. Anne Arnold Hedgeman, executive director, said in a statement: "It is now clear to everyone that Dewey ordered the Republican Congress to stall as much as possible and then pack and go home without accomplishing anything."

Reply Due From Capital

She declared that Republican Senators had made no secret that they were in constant touch with Dewey. Republican headquarters here would not comment on the charge, but a spokesman said it would be answered from Washington.

"The Dewey-Republican promise to strengthen the cloture rule next January while dropping the poll tax bill at this time is a violation of the Republican platform and an insult to the intelligence of the American people," Mrs. Hedgeman said.

It was also "a smug disregard for the integrity of the voters who have yet to go to the polls," she added.

Factions May Unite

As Mrs. Hedgeman issued her statement from the downtown Democratic offices five top Harlem party leaders met at the Theresa Hotel in an attempt to co-ordinate two rival factions set up in the past two weeks to raise a million dollars for President Truman's election.

After an all-evening session, Herbert Bruce, director, Truman for President National Crusade, said there was no conflict between his group's efforts to raise a million dollars and that of the Democratic National Committee's campaign headed by Congressman William L. Dawson and Mrs. Hedgeman.

Mrs. Robinson Says Poll-Tax States Rate Lowest in Education, Health

WASHINGTON

After Mrs. Dorothy Robinson, representing the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, had testified before the Senate Rules and Administration Committee that poll-tax States were at the bottom of the list in education, health and public welfare activities, Sen. John Stennis questioned her to show that Mississippi is not so bad.

Baltimore, Md.

"Do you know that Mississippi spends the largest percentage of its tax dollar on education of any of the States?" the Mississippi congressman asked. x

The witness did not know that although that was true, Mississippi's revenues are so low that its educational system is still the poorest in the nation, and there are more illiterates in that State than any other.

Scores Point

But she scored a point by telling him that his State discriminates in spending its educational funds.

"Isn't it true that in a number of those counties down there they have county health units and all the people are treated exactly alike?" Senator Stennis persisted. Mrs. Robinson said she did not know that all people were treated alike.

Trying to show that paternalistic relationship exists among some Southern colored and white persons. Senator Stennis queried. "Do you go out among your colored neighbors in time of sickness and sorrow?" he asked. "I have."

The Old Best 'Friend' Tripe

"Some of my dearest friends are colored people," Mrs. Robinson replied. "I do whatever I can." "I go to their funerals," Senator Stennis remarked. "Do you?" "I have been many times," Mrs. Robinson answered.

Sat 4-3-48

"I am not a man of means at all, but I have loaned colored people money to go to school. Do you know about that side of things?" Senator Stennis asked.

Rep. George H. Bender (Rep., Ohio), author of the anti-poll tax bill which passed the House and which the Republican - controlled Senate committee will report, testified last Wednesday that imposition of the poll tax had resulted in the disfranchisement of the great majority of people, white and colored alike, in the poll-tax States.

The only major race slated in South Carolina is for a seat in the U. S. Senate, which heads the list of campaigns that will culminate with the primary. A second primary will be held August 25, for contests in which no candidate gets a majority of votes.

Senators Avow Price Control Is Certain Not To Pass At This Time

McComb, Miss.

Washington —Southern Democrats have won their fight against anti-poll tax legislation. The Republicans in the senate gave up today their efforts to pass the bill at the present special session.

Enterprise Journal

The Southern Democrats have been filibustering against the measure for five days.

However, the Republicans are not willing to let the question of outlawing the poll tax be passed up indefinitely. Chairman Eugene Millikin of the GOP conference said the senators decided to try to change the senate rules during the next session. He said they'll seek regulations to make it possible to invoke cloture, or a limit on debate, effectively. 8-4-48

And Millikin said the concensus is that a constitutional amendment to outlaw the poll tax should not be submitted at the present time.

The senate Republicans hope that with the senate decks cleared for further action this session, congress can quit by Saturday night.

(34e(1))

Some House Republicans also mapped their plans today. They drew their own anti-inflation bill, a measure calling for controls on installment buying and some tightening of bank credits.

One measure congress apparently is certain not to pass is price controls. On the senate side of the Capitol, Millikin said that price controls will not be put into effect. 8-4-48

Millikin also said that senate and house Republican leaders are trying to agree on some sort of housing legislation.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—The Metropolitan Council of Negro Women have announced that the recent poll tax campaign conducted by the organization proved to be a huge success with more than seventy-five men and women paying their poll taxes at places designated by the council.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The group when paying their tax expressed themselves as being happy to be ready to be able to vote for pertinent issues coming up in future elections.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

Mrs. Charles Andrews, wife of one of a prominent San Antonio physician, chairman of the poll tax committee and a member of the Council, secured the services of four notary publics, Dr. L. M. HOUSTON, Tex.—Despite increasing acts of terror and intimidation, the Negro people of Texas daily manifest their courage and militancy in the struggle for equal rights and for progressive political action. Part of the record-breaking increase in poll tax payments came through the greater numbers of Negro people who registered to vote.

As an example of how the Southern Bourbons are reacting to this, the Chief of Police in Port Arthur recently declared in an address to the Junior Chamber of Commerce that there was a "Communist plot" in the city to get Negroes to pay poll taxes and to run a candidate for public office.

The Police Chief also warned of this "menace" and declared that his force was keeping very close watch on all the Communists of Port Arthur. This address was a very plain attempt to intimidate the progressive forces and the Negro people of the city.

Sun. 2-29-48

WITHIN THE PAST FEW WEEKS there has also taken place a spurt of outright murders of Negroes by lynch-minded white supremacists.

In Houston, a white woman owner of a drive-in located in a Negro area pumped three bullets into a young Negro who came in through the front door to buy a pack of cigarettes.

In Dallas recently, a rookie policeman shot to death on a bus a Negro who was an innocent bystander in an argument over the Jimcrow bus seating.

REPORTS from all quarters of the state indicate powerful support among the Negro people for Wallace and the New Party. Negro trade unionists are showing themselves in the forefront on every issue involving the living standards, peace and democratic rights of the American people.

The white workers and farmers of Texas, wishing to challenge and break the domination of this state by the oil and chemical trusts, must inevitably link themselves up with this powerful and progressive ally, the Negro people. The strength and militancy of the movement of the Negro people stimulates the growth of such unity.

Seek To Bar Poll Tax In Virginia

World, Atlanta, Ga.

RICHMOND, ~~Va.~~—(NNPA)—A constitutional amendment to abolish the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting in Virginia elections, along with other changes in the State Constitution recommended by the Campbell Suffrage Commission two years ago, began its second journey through the Virginia General Assembly last Wednesday.

34e(1)

A joint resolution, identical with that approved by the 1946 Assembly, was placed before the House of Delegates by Delegates Roy B. Davis, of Halifax, chairman of the Privileges and Elections Committee, along with numerous co-sponsors.

The resolution, listing in detail the delegations and additions to the State Constitution, must be approved by two separate sessions of the Assembly before the proposed amendments may be submitted to popular referendum. If the resolution wins favorable action in the current session, the amendments would be voted on by the people next November.

Besides abolishing the poll tax, the amendments provide for annual registration renewals and also write into the Constitution a firm basis for the State Board of Elections and a bipartisan system of local electoral boards.

Wed 1-28-1

The resolution was passed by both Houses by comfortable majorities in 1946, but there was a sharp debate on both sides of the Capitol.

BIRMINGHAM. — Abusive practices of the Jefferson County Board of Registrars have stirred a fighting protest from the AFL in Birmingham. After Sam Douglas, local AFL leader, had publicly denounced the board for discriminating against men in overalls who came to register, the AFL called an open meeting of AFL members and representatives of the UMW and District 50 in the county court house.

Some 80 white and 40 Negro workers and local leaders attended the meeting as well as a number of lawyers interested in the fight for the ballot.

★

SEVERAL NEGRO WORKERS rose to recite the long involved list of questions to which they or their friends had been subjected by the board. Douglas had previously noted in his sharp protest published in the Birmingham papers that white workers were being subjected to similar questioning especially after the voters supported Governor Folsom in the Jan. 6 referendum on the self-starter amendment. The Worker

A lawyer present commented: "Why, you couldn't find two people in Washington, including President Truman, who could answer some of those questions!" 2-1-48

★

THE AFL LEADERSHIP pledged to have watchers at the board during the rest of the registration period. They particularly urged the Negro members to go down for registration in large numbers, not in twos and threes, and thereby put pressure on the board to cease its flagrantly unconstitutional question periods. They pledged full support to getting Negro applicants registrants. New York, N.Y.

This was a new departure for the AFL leadership in this community, indicating a new realization that labor must register its strength at the polls in order to carry any political weight, and that the fight for the ballot for Negroes is an essential part of labor's program.

Patterson Won't Enter Vote Fight

Pittsburgh, Pa.

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—President F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee Institute is staying out of the fight to unsnarl the tangled registration machinery in Macon County, where local Negroes clamor for voting privileges. Sat. 1-3-48

Dr. Patterson said he was "staying out of it because of the Institute." Local citizens protested against his attitude, however, when he observed:

"It would take twenty-five years for Negroes to learn to use the ballot after they get it. The white people do not use it fully, so I see no reason to assume the Negroes would."

The statement, released by the Associated Press, was quoted in the Dec. 18 issue of The Montgomery Advertiser.

With Negroes constituting 81 per cent of the 27,000 population of the county, an effort is being made to get the State to open the books for registration of voters. There has been no registration board here since June, 1946, and no member of either race has qualified as a voter since that time, as voting machinery has been completely paralyzed.

Many Democrats have the old-fashioned idea that it is part of the duties of the State chairman to work for and to promote harmony in the party, rather than sponsor and work for the disruption of the party.

No one can gainsay the fact that it is not the function or duty of the chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee to advocate and finance a split and bolt in the Democratic Party, or to aid or participate in such a disruption. On the contrary, it is his duty, and loyalty should persuade him, as head of the State Democratic Party organization, to work for and promote party harmony and to use to the fullest his energies and abilities in this regard in preventing party strife and disunity.

In the recent primary election, Mr. McCorvey not only led the bolt and split in the party, but advised and participated in the spending of thousands of dollars in forming and advertising a slate of bolting candidates and in pitting that slate against other candidates whose party loyalty has never been questioned. He used not only party funds, which was wrong in itself, but large sums of money from undisclosed sources were used in sowing dissension and discord in the party that will take years to heal. These funds were used against many loyal Democratic candidates. Most Democrats in Alabama do not approve of such methods, used by high party officials, in an effort to destroy party law, party discipline and party loyalty.

10 Mobile Negroes Challenge Boswell Amendment Legality

MOBILE, ALA., Feb. 28.—(AP)—A suit filed in federal court here Saturday charged the Boswell Amendment to Alabama's constitution is a "conspiracy" to deprive not only Negroes of the right to vote, but also to prevent non-members of the Democratic Party from voting in Alabama.

The complaint named as defendants Gov. James E. Folsom, former State Rep. E. C. Boswell of Geneva, Ala., author of the amendment, members of the state board appointing election registrars, and of the Mobile county Board of Registrars.

The plantiffs, ten Mobile county Negroes, asked that the amendement and related statutes be declared unconstitutional, and that they be awarded damages totalling $100,000.

The complaint was submitted by David R. Landau of Chicago, who identified himself as a member of and counsel for two civil liberties organizations in the Illinois city.

Democratic party leaders here predicted a long-drawn court battle. They said that even if upheld the suit could not interfere with party primaries this year. The Advertiser

The Boswell amendment, adopted in a 1946 referendum, provides that any citizen seeking registration as a voter shall be able to understand and explain the constitution of the United States. Montgomery, Ala

The complaint alleged that the amendment denies privileges guaranteed to citizens by the 14th and 15th amendments to the federal constitution. Sun 2-29-48

Landau said he shortly would file a similar suit for "white citizens of Alabama who are disfranchised because they are potential Republican voters."

Working Of Boswell Amendment

Birmingham, Ala

The News is presenting on this page today the first of a series of articles about registration procedures and practices in Jefferson County. It feels that the people of the community would like to know exactly how the laws pertaining to registration of voters are working. There have been some changes since the passage of the Boswell amendment in November of 1946.

34e(2) Ala

It was freely predicted that the new section of the Constitution of Alabama would make it more difficult to enlarge the electorate. Yet every student of good government knows that the greatest margin of public safety always comes with sound growth of the electorate. What this paper wanted to find out was whether or not the new law was helping to make for better government. Therefore it was decided to study what was going on in Jefferson County. 2-11-48

Meanwhile there had been a good deal of public interest displayed in charges brought against the local Board of Registrars by the Birmingham Federation of Labor. The News has watched developments very closely. It has tried to get at the facts.

Thus the series of articles—four in number—which begins today is intended to present expositionally the material that was surveyed.

How Right to Vote Is Nullified Under Alabama's Boswell Law

34e(2) The Worker New York, N.Y.
Sun 2-22-48

BIRMINGHAM.—The flagrantly undemocratic procedure of the Jefferson County Board of Registrars during its recent three-month session is becoming increasingly a public scandal.

During January the AFL called two public meetings in the county court house to protest the Board's biased denial of the ballot to white working people as well as Negroes. Sam Douglas, AFL Citizenship and Educational Director, made several statements to the press, charging that since the defeat of the self-starter amendment on January (to which the labor and Negro contributed almost unanimously) the board had begun to refuse registration to working people.

The AFL, unable to get response to its protests, finally called on the governor for the dismissal of two members of the three-man board. Mr. J. G. Hosey, the Folsom-appointee to the board, was given credit for cooperation with the labor movement's efforts to increase registration among working people in the county. Sun 2-22-48

No response to this request has yet been received. It followed a similar demand from a united labor committee in Mobile, which brought a promise of a thorough investigation from Gov. Folsom.

The labor protest is being supplemented now by a series of articles on the editorial page of the Birmingham News. These articles, without editorial comment, are in effect a thorough expose of the undemocratic methods of the Board, particularly in relation to Negro applicants.

The writer, one of the paper's editorialist, Douglas Hunt, recounts the results of several visits to the Board during registration periods in Birmingham and the nearby steel community of Fairfield.

He reported that some applicants were not questioned at all, while others were held for as lon gas 20 minutes, most of these being Negro citizens. He found no Negro applicants who were told that they had passed and were given their registration certificates, and added that there were dozens of men and women who are still waiting for their certificates to come in the mails.

★

IN FAIRFIELD, he reported Negro applicants, many of whom had left their jobs to come to register, were the victims of all manner of delaying procedures, and that several had to leave without even being offered an application blank, and that white applicants were pushed in ahead of Negro applicants. 2-22-48

The sample of questioning reported by Mr. Hunt can be duplicated hundreds of times by applicants who have been grilled on all manner of legal and constitutional questions. 2-22-48

The most flagrant example to come to the attention of this reporter came from a Negro ore miner. In addition to questions about the Supreme Court and the functions of the executive and legislative branches of the national government, he was asked where he worked, was he a union member, where did his union meet, would he vote as the union told him. He was told to keep on coming back and that eventually he might get registered! Sun 2-22-48

★

The recent shameful record of the county board is the most effective argument for a people's campaign to wipe the amendment off the books and open up a fair and reasonable registration procedure to the thousands in this county who are being arbitrarily kept from the ballot box.

Ten Negro Vets Test Boswell Amendment

MOBILE, Ala.—Alabama's infamous Boswell amendment will be under fire in Federal District Court on April 15, when Judge John McDuffie hears a $100,000 damage suit filed by ten Negro veterans of World War II.

34e(2)

Defendants are Governor Folsom, Gessner McGorvey, Democratic Party Executive Committee chairman, E. C. Boswell, author of the amendment, and the Mobile County Board of registrars. The complaint charges that they conspired to deny the ballot to Negro applicants because of race and political faith. The ten veterans, all Mobile residents, are asking $100,000 damages.

This suit is the first challenge to the Boswell Amendment in the courts since it became law in 1946, after a vicious campaign led by McCorvey, Horace Wilkinson and other white supremacy politicians. These arrogant advocates of the amendment avowed openly that it was designed to keep Negro citizens of Alabama from becoming registered voters. They hid the deeper aim of the amendment—the narrowing of the whole electorate by keeping working people both white and Negro off the registration books—in a fanfare of anti-Negro propaganda.

New York, N.Y.

THE MOBILE Board of Registrars, operating under the unlimited powers to deny registration afforded by the Boswell amendment, has been under fire for some time.

A united AFL-CIO labor committee demanded the resignation of two members of the board for failing to perform their public duties and for discrimination against workers. They sent a committee to Governor Folsom asking him to rescind his appointments. So far, the Board still sits. Sun.

There are indications that other suits are being prepared against the amendment. 4-18-48

Answer In Boswell Case Due April 15

Montgomery, Ala.

MOBILE, ALA., March 13.—(AP)—Gov. Folsom and other defendants in a federal court suit challenging the Boswell amendment to the State constitution Saturday were given until April 15 to answer the allegations of 10 Mobile County Negroes.

The suit charges that the amendment not only denies Negroes the right to vote, but also prevents non-members of the Democratic Party from voting in Alabama. Sun. 3-14-48

The amendment provides that any citizen seeking registration as a voter shall be able to understand and explain the Constitution of the United States.

The plaintiffs said that when they attempted to register as voters in Mobile County earlier this year, they were questioned about the U. S. Constitution by registration officials and then told their answers were unsatisfactory.

They asked the federal court to declare the amendment and related statutes unconstitutional, and to award them damages totalling $100,000.

Defendants with Folsom are former State Rep. E. C. Boswell, author of the amendment, members of the Mobile County board of registrars, and of the State board which appointed the registrars. Sun. 3-14-48

The suit was filed Feb. 28 and according to court records the complaint and summons were returned executed March 10. An order by Federal Judge John McDuffie setting the final date for answering was on record Saturday.

Boswell Amendment Up For Test In Alabama

Atlanta, Ga

MOBILE, Ala.—(SNS)—Alabama's infamous Boswell amendment was under fire Thursday from new quarters as 14 Negroes rejected for registration as voters under the act disclosed that they would join ten other litigants in a suit to declare the amendment unconstitutional.

This was revealed by J. S. Thomas, contractor and president of the Voters and Veterans' Association, who said the group had been studying the constitution more than a year to qualify for citizenship.

The Boswell amendment was adopted in November, 1946, after a bitter campaign. Most rural communities rejected the amendment in the balloting, but the large cities gave it a narrow margin of victory.

The amendment requires prospective registrants to be able to understand and explain the federal constitution to the satisfaction of the registrars. Since the interpretation is left to these officials Negroes have generally been barred from voting.

The fourteen whose application to be accepted as voters were denied said they felt they gave satisfactory answers to questions asked by the Board of Registrars here. 3-19-48 34e(2)

Thomas, spokesman for the group, said "We regard the Boswell amendment as one of the last laws in the South standing in the way of Negroes voting. All of our group in the Southern States are looking hopefully for this unconstitutional law to be knocked out. Daily Worker

Boswell Amendment Facing Federal Court Validity Test

The News-Age-Herald

BY EDWIN STRICKLAND
News Staff Writer

Birmingham, Ala

The so-called "Boswell Amendment" which sets up certain intelligence and educational standards for the registration of voters, will soon face a major test in Federal Court here. Sun 34e(2) Ala.

On April 27, 1948, Eugene Otis Braxter, pastor of the Negro A. M. E. Church at Alden, filed a "class suit" against the Jefferson County Board of Registrars. 5-30-48

In this suit, Braxter alleged that Section 181 of the Alabama Constitution as amended is unconstitutional and in violation of the Federal Constitution. He asked that the Federal Court give a declaratory judgment holding Section 181 (the Boswell Amendment) void. New York

Braxter's suit alleged that he possessed all the qualifications for a registered voter in Jefferson County and had none of the disqualifications. Yet, he charged, he was denied registration by the Board of Registrars on Feb. 5, 1948.

Named as defendants in the suit were J. G. Hosey, H. A. Thompson and H. J. Creel, members of the Board of Registrars. 5-30-48

Solicitor Emmett Perry and Deputy Solicitor Willard McCall will be joined in the defense of the board by E. C. Boswell, Geneva, author of the controversial amendment. The News-Age-Herald

Boswell was appointed to help in defense of the suit by Gov. Folsom. Boswell is a recognized authority on constitutional law.

Birmingham, Ala

OPPOSING THIS GROUP will be a battery of attorneys composed of Edward R. Dudley, New York; Thurgood Marshall, Washington; Arthur Shores and Oscar W. Adams, Jr., both of Birmingham.

The suit charges that the board registered white persons without subjecting them to tests required of Negro registrants. It referred to the Boswell Amendment as "a mere subterfuge directed against Negroes." 5-30-48

Defense Attys. Boswell, Perry and McCall this week filed a motion setting forth 63 reasons why the suit should be dismissed.

Date for hearing the motion has not been set. Sun.

The defense alleged in the motion that Braxter cannot bring a "class suit" because his interests are not identical with other members of the Negro race.

Braxter had asked that all Negroes in Jefferson County similarly situated to him be made parties to the action. He also sought $5,000 damages against the board for its "wrongful act" in not registering him as a voter. 5-30-48

The defense motion sets out that "qualifications and disqualifications of voters are individual and must be determined individually and not as a class.

The News-Age-Herald

"THE ALLEGATION of unlawful wrong committed by the defendants is mere conclusion of the pleader without facts being set forth to sustain them," the motion declared. Birmingham, Ala

The motion stated further that "the complaint nor any count thereof alleges sufficient facts to show that there was an actual discrimination against the plaintiff because of his race or color." Sun.

"The plaintiff cannot attack the constitutionality of Section 181 of the Constitution . . . because he affirmatively alleges that he possessed all the qualifications required under said section," the motion continued. 5-30-48

The motion maintained that this "clearly shows that said section is reasonable and not arbitrary."

STATE OF THE AMENDMENT

The Advertiser

Editor, The Advertiser:

In a course in Alabama history at Florence State Teachers College, I have been assigned the Boswell Amendment as the subject of a term paper. Thurs.

I am especially anxious to prepare a complete survey of the problems surrounding the passage and after-effects of this amendment. For this reason I am anxious to obtain as many editorial comments as possible. Montgomery, Ala.

If I might have copies of your editorials both for and against this measure, I would be most grateful. 4-29-48

WILLIAM R. COFFEY.

Florence, Ala.

34e(2) Ala.

It may sound monotonous, but all The Advertiser's editorials took one stand—opposition to the Boswell Amendment.

Our view of the amendment then and now is largely the same. We never did believe the amendment was destined to make a profound difference this way or that. We were not in the company of those who took a passionate view of it as a measure necessary to prevent a swamping of the polls by Negroes; nor, on the other hand, could we join the other group in seeing it as a Draconian stifling of civil liberties for all time to come. The Advertiser

Our conviction was, judging mainly by Montgomery County, that things were going along very well as they were. Ratification of the Boswell Amendment appeared gratuitous and gave promise of stirring up a hornet's nest. It is now being attacked in the courts. It excites northern do-gooders.

The Boswell Amendment was fashioned to restrict Negro voting—this by providing that voters be required to UNDERSTAND the U. S. Constitution as well as read and write it. This, of course, simply provided a block for county boards of registrars when they wished to refuse to qualify a voter.

Every voter, of course, should be required to understand the constitution, but there are few voters indeed who could not be disqualified under sharp examination. This would even take in members of the United States Supreme Court who disagree constantly among themselves on the meaning of the Constitution.

The Boswell Amendment, so far as we could see then and now, was primarily one thing—a declaration of policy by Alabama that Negro voting was to be aggressively repressed. Montgomery, Ala

At the time of its ratification there was no wide agitation among colored people to qualify. As far as we are aware, there is nothing of the kind today. Thurs.

County boards of registrars, reflecting local sentiment, have and probably will long be the chief determinant in such matters.

Such negative approaches to a gathering and inescapable problem as voting by qualified Negroes have contributed to some extent to such outrages as Truman's Civil Disturbance program and the not less troublesome and formidable attitude of the U. S. Supreme Court. 4-27-48

As Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, said quite recently even in his mood of Truman anger, qualified Negroes are entitled to vote. In that he is joined by all the responsible leaders of Alabama.

Whites Also Disfranchised By Anti-Negro Measure

34e (2) (Registration)

The Worker New York N.Y.

BIRMINGHAM.—Last year Alabama progressives who fought against the Boswell Amendment argued that it would serve as an instrument for disfranchising white as well as Negro citizens—that it was a means of keeping the electorate small and controllable.

Both Negro leaders and the more progressive labor leaders have fought to expose the brazen unconstitutional practices of the Board of Registrars in keeping qualified Negro citizens off the voters lists. Jun. 1-25-48

Now, for the first time, a public charge is made that the County Board is discriminating against white applicants as well.

★

A COMMITTEE from the city AFL, headed by Sam Douglas, accused the County Board of discriminating against "men in overals." He said that in the few days since the self-starter amendment was defeated by the voters, white applicants are being subjected to long questioning—such questioning as "how many representatives do we have? Who is the head of the Red Cross?"

Such procedure, Mr. Douglas charged, is designed to "confuse, delay and discourage certain people from registering." Some were registered without questioning, but the majority were subjected to five to 10 minutes of grilling by Board members. Also, he charged, the Board would close on the minute, even if a long line of working people were waiting to register.

Jun. 1-25-48

HE ASKED that the Board cease its discrimination against working people, and that it hold some night sessions for those who could not come during daytime hours without losing time from work.

He commended J. G. Hosey, the Folsom appointee to the three-man Board, for his willingness to cooperate. New York, N.Y.

The other two members are H. A. Thompson, admitted white supremacist and member of the county Democratic Executive Committee, and R. J. Creel, president of the County Truck Growers Association.

The AFL action in Birmingham closely followed a united AFL-CIO protest against the Registrars in Mobile, including a demand for the resignation of two board members for refusing to hold night sessions so that the working people would have a chance to register.

The Worker

GOV. FOLSOM, after interviews with the Mobile labor delegation, suggested that a new board be appointed in Mobile. The other two state officials who control board appointments, however, insisted on further investigation.

The Big Lie that Boswell Amendment supporters told the people about just being interested in keeping the Negro citizens from voting, is pretty well exposed when a white man in overalls in the Jefferson County Court House can't get registered either. And the Big Truth comes clear, too, that white working people have got to join hands with the Negro people to fight against all restriction on the ballot, if they hope to exercise that right themselves.

Negro To Fight Registration Law

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 2 —(AP)—A committee of Negro leaders raising funds to launch a court attack on Alabama's restrictive voter registration laws met here yesterday and one member predicted suits would be filed by March 15.

Editor Emory O. Jackson, of The Birmingham World, past president of the state branch, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said exact dates and places to initiate legal proceedings had not been determined. Suits, however, should be filed not later than March 15, he added. Mon

Attack Due March 15; Negroes Plan To Ask U. A., A. P. I. Entry

34e(2)

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People plans to launch its legal attack against Alabama's restrictive voter registration law—the famous Boswell Amendment—not later than March 15, a Negro spokesman said Sunday.

The Boswell Amendment, which requires prospective voters to "understand and explain" any section of the U. S. Constitution, admittedly was aimed at curbing mass Negro registration.

Emory O. Jackson, editor of The Birmingham World and former state NAACP president, said exact dates and places for filing suits against the measure had not been determined, but added they should be underway by March 15.

Jackson made his statement at a meeting here Sunday of the NAACP's Alabama vote defense committee. The committee held a routine business session to discuss its fund-raising campaign to finance the court battle. Committee Chairman W. C. Patton of Birmingham declined to disclose the amount collected to date, but said the group expected to raise a total of $15,000. Mon 2-2-48

Plans for a legal attack of the Boswell Amendment were adopted at a statewide meeting of the Alabama branch of the NAACP last October. At that time it was said NAACP attorneys had found a "formula" which would nullify the law. Jackson reiterated Sunday that such a "formula" existed, but said he did not know its details. Jackson also said the organization would follow through with its plans to file suits to have Negroes admitted to the University of Alabama and Alabama Polytechnic Institute (Auburn). These cases, however, probably will not be filed for several months, he said. Montgomery, Ala

Registrar Here Denies Discrimination Charge

(34e(2)) Ala

The News

A charge of "discrimination" in the registration of voters, was unfounded, Gus Thompson, a member of the Jefferson County Board of Registrars, said today. 1-14-48

The charges was hurled Tuesday by Sam Douglass, chairman of a committee on good citizenship and voter registration from the Birmingham Federation of Labor (AFL). Birmingham, Ala

Douglass, B. B. Jones and J. T. Odom protested the board's actions in what they said was "useless questioning of prospective voters."

Douglass said that since the recent amendment election, the board has questioned certain white registrants and has registered others without questioning. Wed.

* * *

IN ANSWER, Thompson said the board was merely exercising its discretion by questioning certain persons whom they have reason to believe might not be qualified.

He said that in some cases persons under the age of 21 have attempted to register. He said it is sometimes necessary to question a person to determine if the person measures up to voter requirements.

Thompson denied that the board was merely questioning certain persons for the purpose of "discouraging" them from attempting to qualify to vote.

* * *

DOUGLASS had charged that such questioning was to "discourage, confuse and delay" the registration of certain persons. Wed.

The AFL committee also asked the board to consider holding night sessions as well as sessions at Warrior and Leeds in order to make it easier for workers to register.

Douglass said he had got no promise from the board with the exception of Chairman John G. Hosey, who said he was "willing to cooperate." The News Birmingham, Ala

THOMPSON SAID that the board was registering as many persons now as can be handled with any degree of efficiency. 1-14-48

"We could herd them through and register them like throwing paper into a waste basket," Thompson said. "I do not believe that is our job, or that the people want registration to be so conducted," he asserted. Wed. 1-14-48

The News Birmingham, Ala Wed. 1-28-48

Two members of the Jefferson County Board of Registrars have been charged with "discrimination" in dealing with people who want to vote. A committee from the Birmingham Federation of Labor (AFL), under the chairmanship of Sam Douglass, is asking Gov. Folsom to remove the two members—H. A. Thompson and R. J. Creel. Mr. Thompson and Mr. Creel, says Mr. Douglass' committee, have been questioning some applicants in detail while allowing other applicants to register without questioning. The implication is that the two registrars are attempting to hinder the registration of the labor vote.

Mr. Thompson and Mr. Creel have denied the charges. In a joint statement yesterday they said: "The associate members of the Board of Registrars shall continue in the future as in the past to conduct the affairs of the board justly and fairly to all persons concerned. These things we shall do despite the false reports and accusations emanating from the chairman of the board and his cohorts."

Mr. Douglass' BFL committee also is accusing Sheriff Holt A. McDowell, Tax Collector J. W. Hamilton and Rep. James G. Adams of "influencing" the two board members in what it charges are "discrimination practices." The News

The BFL committee charges further political implications in that the alleged "discrimination" practices began the day after the defeat of the recent so-called "self-starter amendment." Wed. 1-28 48

* * *

In commenting upon this state of affairs, it is obvious right away that a lot more light should be thrown on what may or may not be beneath these charges and counter-charges. The two members of the board and their accusers are presenting particular points of view on the issue. What is the real truth in the matter? At the moment that is not all together clear. The Federation of Labor committee has appealed to the governor. The three-man state appointing board will have to consider the situation. Here in the appointing board's consideration is one point at which the whole matter might well get a full airing.

Another point about the matter is this: The registration process and the instrument by which it is carried out—the Board of Registrars—are vitally significant aspects of our machinery of government and its functioning. The definition of a qualified voter is a delicate thing. Except for certain precisely defined points—about age, residence, etc.—a lot is left to the discretion of the registrars. The amended Section 181 of the Alabama Constitution requires that a person be able to read and write and understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language. What does understanding and explaining any article of the constitution mean? It is obvious that that is open to wide interpretation. And it is obvious that it could lend itself as an instrument for political manipulation in allowing or refusing citizens their vote.

The Board of Registrars has one of the highest responsibilities of any body in a democracy—the careful consideration of citizens' applications for the vote. It is a responsibility which requires a high sense of justice and a deep insight into human nature. It is a responsibility that must put those who bear it above politics—as our courts of law must be above politics. The board must not be a political tool to be used by anyone or any group who can seize it. Board members must know this, and they must not let themselves be used or influenced. Birmingham, Ala.

* * *

We have made here only what may seem to be general comments on this lamentable registration squabble. But they are comments of principles which are of first and guiding importance. Wed. 1-28-48

It looks as though the matter is going to continue to be one of issue. The public examination will continue. The News

Mobile Registrars To Give Written Test As Voting Exam

The News
Birmingham, Ala.

MOBILE, Ala., March 18—(AP)—The Mobile County Board of Registrars will require prospective voter registrants to give written answers to questions on the Constitution in the future.

The new policy was announced yesterday by Chairman Milton Schnell. Only oral answers were required in the past.

He said the change was made "so we will have written records in case ~~our~~ procedure is challenged." Fri. 3-19-48

A federal court test of constitutionality of the Boswell vote restrictive amendment is now pending. Fourteen Negroes rejected for registration last Monday said they planned to join in the suit.

The amendment requires registrants to be able to understand and explain the federal Constitution.

Mobile's Board Reports Peak Day There Too For Black Applicants

Tues. 3-16-48

President Truman's continued insistence upon racial equality and his kind of civil rights for Negroes is bearing fruit in Montgomery County, according to the records of the Montgomery County Board of Registrars where 20 negroes appeared Monday seeking registration. It was the largest number of Negroes yet to appear before the board in one day.

Prior to President Truman's insistence upon Negro voting, Negro job holding on the white plane and Negro occupancy of restaurants, streetcars, trains and everywhere that whites assemble, the proportion of Negroes seeking registration was not so large.

Negroes who appeared for registration Monday did not do so with the idea of voting in the primary but only in the November general election it was learned. To many political observers that indicated that they were being advised to register to vote for Truman because it was feared that white voters of Alabama might forsake him.

There was no sign of disorder at the Board of Registrars meeting. Somewhere near 90 persons appeared to register. Many of them were soldiers and men just coming of age. No member of the Board would comment upon the large number of Negroes appearing Monday.

MOBILE, ALA., March 15.—(AP)—An increased number of Negro applicants went before the Mobile County Board of Registerars Monday to register for voting in the May 4 Democratic Primary.

Board records shower that out of 54 voters registered at a special session, seven were Negroes. Two Negro applicants were denied registration.

The board member said this was the largest number of Negroes to come before the board in a single day since the Boswell amendment, designed to restrict Negro voting, went into effect.

The amendment, which was adopted in November, 1946, requires prospective registrants to be able to understand and explain the federal constitution.

A suit challenging constitutionality of the Boswell amendment is pending in federal district court here.

He said all applicants who are questioned on the federal constitution will be required to give written answers.

He said the change was made "so that we will have written records in case our procedure is challenged." 3-19-48

Previously only oral explanations have been required, he said.

Fourteen Negroes rejected for registration here last Monday announced they would join in a federal court test of constitutionality of the amendment.

The amendment requires registrants to be able to understand and explain the federal constitution.

14 Negroes, One White Are Rejected For Vote

The News
Birmingham, Ala.

MOBILE, Ala., March 17—(AP)—Fourteen Negroes and one white man were rejected for vote registration under provisions of Alabama's Boswell amendment here yesterday, the Mobile County Board of Registrars reported today.

Board Chairman Milton Schnell said 13 Negroes and 100 white persons qualified for voting in the May 4 Democratic primary.

Schnell said this was by far the largest number of Negroes to apply for registration here since the Boswell amendment became effective.

The amendment adopted by the voters in November, 1946, requires prospective registrants to be able to understand and explain the federal constitution. The amendment has become one of the last barricades of "white supremacy" advocates. Wed. 3-17-48

Schnell said some, but not all, prospective registrants, were given a section of the federal constitution to read and explain. He said the test was given to whites as well as Negroes.

A suit challenging constitutionality of the Boswell amendment is pending in Federal District Court here.

Lack Of Registration By Negroes Reported By Macon Voting Board

The Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.
Wed. 4-14-48

TUSKEGEE, ALA.—(AP)—Macon county with its 81 percent Negro population, has had a voter registration board since January 9—but no Negroes have been registered, a board member said Tuesday.

Macon county had been without a voter registration board since all members resigned in June, 1946, following a suit brought by a Negro against two former board members. William P. Mitchell of Tuskegee sued in 1945, charging he was denied the right to vote solely because of his race.

The suit was dismissed when it was shown Mitchell had been registered but never notified of it. Negro leaders, however, have served warning that other suits might be filed. 4-14-48

The appointing board managed to keep registration going until all members resigned in 1946. Spokesmen for both races blamed the court action.

The existence of the present board was learned when Chairman S. Charles Parker of Tuskegee resigned. His resignation gave no reason, but his wife said he quit to go away to school.

"He only accepted (the appointment) to let some servicemen register," Mrs. Parker explained. The Advertiser

W. D. Tommie of Notasulga said some 200 white voters have been registered since the present board was appointed. No Negroes have been registered and "as far as I know," none have applied, he added. Montgomery, Ala.

NEGRO MINISTER CHARGES VOTING DISCRIMINATION

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 28—(UP)—A Negro minister charged in Federal court today that the local board of registrars discriminted against him because of his color under an Alabama law requiring voters to explain the Constitution.

Eugene Otis Braxton, Methodist preacher, sued for $5,000 damages and asked the court to declare the law, known as the Boswell amendment, unconstitutional. 4-28-48

He said that he explained sections of the Constitution in order to qualify but charged that white electors registered the same day were not given the test.

New Intimidations Charged as Court Studies Two Suits

The Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

MOBILE, Ala.—While ten Negro plaintiffs await a Federal ruling on the unconstitutionality of Alabama's infamous Boswell Amendment, three affadavits signed by white voters have been submitted citing new instances in which Mobile County registrars have required Negro registration applicants to undergo tests not given to whites.

One Negro registrant was disqualified by Registrar J. Milton Schnell because he failed to interpret the U. S. Constitution to the satisfaction of the registrar, according to affidavits from six outstanding white citizens of Mobile, including three young women.

COURIER HAS AFFIDAVITS

In the affidavits, copies of which are in possession of The Courier, the newest act took place on the afternoon of Oct. 15 in Mr. Schnell's office.

In a joint affidavit executed by the three young women and one man, the affiants state that "Mrs. D. C. Randall, one of the registrars, received us immediately and treated us very courteously. We filled out the necessary forms, but were asked no questions about the Constitution nor were we asked to interpret any part of the Constitution. We were then duly registered."

VETERAN TURNED DOWN

But then, these affiants say, several Negro veterans entered the office and sought to register. "These men were asked to interpret a section of the Constitution, and were questioned as to any criminal record," all six affiants said. One Negro veteran was turned down after that.

Two of the six white affidavit signers said they were veterans of World War II.

Meanwhile, Federal Judge John McDuffie is still studying the testimony submitted in his District Court in the suit brought by ten Mobile citizens. The State of Alabama and attorneys for the Mobile County Board of Registrars filed a brief asking dismissal of the suit. George N. Leighton of Chicago is attorney for the ten plaintiffs. Sat. 10-30-48

In Birmingham, Judge Clarence Mullins has also taken under advisement another suit filed there, and a motion by the State for its dismissal in arguments heard on Oct. 13.

ASKS THREE-JUDGE PANEL

On Friday, Judge McDuffie wrote Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson Jr., New Orleans, of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, requesting a three-judge court to sit in hearings on the Mobile case with Nov. 5 suggested as the new trial date. Judge McDuffie asked for a circuit judge and another Federal district judge to sit with him on the case.

REGISTRATION IN JEFFERSON COUNTY

How Boswell Amendment Is Working

News

BY DOUGLAS L. HUNT

(First of a Series)

The Boswell amendment to the Alabama State Constitution was passed by the people in a special election in 1946. Its purpose was to provide a means by which certain types of voters, including Negroes, could be legally excluded from the ballot. Many persons, however, predicted during the campaign that the provision of the act would be applied to many workers, or to members of any group held undesirable, by those who wielded political power.

Birmingham, Ala

This newspaper has inquired into the registration practices now in force in Jefferson County. It has found the certain groups are complaining of discriminatory practices. Thus the prophecies of the measure's opponents are being recalled.

This series of articles is intended to examine, so far as possible, the registration procedure followed in Jefferson County.

2-11-48 Wed.

The Old Law

For many years the registration law was practically unchanged. It provided that registrars are to be reputable and suitable persons who are qualified voters in the county where they reside and that they should not hold elective office during their terms of office. They are three in number and they are appointed by a committee of three: the governor of the state, the commissioner of agriculture and industries and the auditor. Should there be a division of the committee, majority shall always rule. In Jefferson County the governor has the right to name one of the three to be chairman. Their term of office shall be four years, or until a successor has been appointed. But any member of the board may be removed from office at any time, with or without cause and without the giving of any reason, by a majority of two on the appointing committee.

Until the most recent meeting of the Legislature, each Board of Registrars was required to visit each precinct in the county at least once and to stay for at least half a day, between the first day of October and the last day of the year of each odd-numbered year. But a recent change in the law relieved the registrars of Jefferson County from visiting every precinct in the county, an obviously difficult job in so populous a region as the metropolitan district of Birmingham and the remainder of the county.

The attorney general, in interpreting the act, gave the Board of Registrars wide latitude in meeting places and meeting times. It must meet on certain days, but it may meet in places of its own choice and at hours which suit its own convenience. That point is important in connection with charges brought against the present board by the Birmingham Federation of Labor. The matter will be discussed in another article.

News Birmingham Ala

The Boswell Change

2-11-48

The Board of Registrars was charged to register any citizen who can read and write any article of the Constitution in the English language, and (1) who is physically unable to work, or (2) who has worked a majority of the preceding 12 months, or (3) who is unable to read and write because of physical disability, or (4) who owns or is the husband or wife of the owner of 40 acres of land on which is located the residence, or (5) who owns at least $300 worth of taxable property.

The amendment offered by Legislator Boswell and passed by the people's vote changed provisions which had been in force since 1901. Now the registrars are charged to register only those persons "of good character . . . who understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government" and "who can read and write, understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language," and (1) who are physically unable to work, or (2) who have worked for the most part of the preceding 12 months, or (3) who are unable to read and write because of physical disability.

In Jefferson County the three members of the present Board of Registrars were all appointed by the Folsom administration. The chairman, appointed personally by Gov. Folsom, as the law directs, is J. C. Hosey. He took office first in March, 1947, to fill an unexpired term. He was reappointed for a full four-year term in November, 1947. The two associate members are H. A. (Gus) Thompson and R. J. Creel. Mr. Creel was first appointed in the Sparks administration in 1943. He was reappointed for a second four-year term in November, 1947. Mr. Thompson was appointed for the first time in November, 1947, for a four-year term.

These, men, then, are empowered by the state constitution to pass upon all the applicants for registration in Jefferson County. The responsibility is great.

* * *

Members' Backgrounds

Mr. Hosey came to Jefferson County from Coosa County in 1901. He was educated in the public schools of Coosa County, which, at the time he was growing up, did not have a high school within its limits. He has done various kinds of work in and near Birmingham. Most recently (1939-1946) he was an employe of the T. C. I. From Sept. 6, 1946, till March, 1947, he was the house detective at the Tutwiler Hotel. He left that position to become chairman of the board of Gov. Folsom's appointment. 2-11-48

Mr. Creel has lived in Jefferson County all his life. He did not graduate from high school, but, by attending the Jacksonville Normal School many years ago, he received a certificate to teach in rural schools in the county, which he did for 20 years. For the last 18 years he has been president of the Jefferson County Truck Growers Association. He was a member of the Legislative Advisory Commission for the Jefferson County Survey and of the Citizens Supervisory Commission which elects the Civil Service Board. He is a member of the executive committee of the Jefferson County Democratic Committee.

Mr. Thompson came from Butler County. He attended high school, but left school in 1899 without graduating. He attended a business college. He served one term in the Legislature in 1914 from Butler County. Later he came to Birmingham to reside. He is now serving as enrolling and engrossing clerk of the State Senate, a position to which he was elected in the Sparks administration and to which he has been reelected without opposition. Since 1940 he has been clerk of the County Election Commission, and he is a member of the executive committee of the Jefferson County Democratic Committee.

Each member of the board receives an honorarium of $7.50 for each day the board is in session. In addition, Mr. Hosey, as chairman, gets an annual salary of $2,600.

These are the three men charged by the constitution with examining all applicants for registration in the county. It is their duty to ask questions on the Constitution of the United States and to determine whether the answers given indicate enough knowledge and intelligence to qualify a man or a woman as a voter.

The Board Of Registrars At Work

Fri. 2-13-48

BY DOUGLAS L. HUNT

(Second of a Series)

As related in the preceding article in this series, the charge has been made against the Jefferson County Board of Registrars that discriminatory practices have been applied to members of certain groups who sought to register according to the law of Alabama.

No supporter of the Boswell amendment has yet denied that it could be used as a means of keeping the electorate small. Indeed, many of the bill's proponents have admitted that it was designed to provide a means of controlling Negro registration. With those facts in mind, I went to the Jefferson County Courthouse to check into registration practices as far as I could.

* * *

I FOUND JOHN G. HOSEY, chairman of the board, to be a thoroughly agreeable person. He greeted me and told me he would answer as many questions as he could.

He explained the manner of procedure. Each person entering the board's suite of offices was given an application blank. He filled it out. Then he was taken back to the private office of the board's chairman and sworn. There he might be asked questions, presumably those which pertained to the Constitution of the United States as the law provides. After either (1) no questioning at all, or (2) very cursory questioning, or (3) very extensive questioning, he was dismissed. If he passed, he was told that his certificate of registration would be mailed to him in a few days. If, on the other hand, he was told that he failed the examination, he was informed that he could not register. He had the right of returning to try again.

I asked Mr. Hosey for the privilege of sitting inside the room while applicants were being questioned. Mr. Hosey shook his head. All examinations were conducted in private, he said. He admitted that there was no law which required such privacy, but he said that the local board had adopted such a regulation. Thus, he said, no candidate would be embarrassed by having any person inside the room other than the two or three members of the board who were questioning him.

So I was kept out of the room. But I could question those who had been examined and time the period which applicants spent inside the room. I found that some went in and came out almost immediately. Others stayed approximately five minutes. A few stayed 15 or even 20 minutes. Questioned outside, those individuals told me they were quizzed at some length. Most such persons were Negroes. In no case did I find a Negro applicant whose was told that he had passed and was given a certificate at the same time.

* * *

Passes And Failures

ALSO I FOUND it difficult to get any statistics about those passed and those denied certificates. Mr. Hosey said he did not have such information available. He assured me, however, that no reasonably qualified person was denied a certificate of registration. There are, however, dozens of men and women in Jefferson County who are still waiting for their certificates to be delivered through the mail. Some have waited 30 or even 60 days. Some have gone back to make inquiries and in some cases have stood examinations again. One Negro man is said to have visited the office seven times before he finally received the certificate, and on the last occasion was questioned for more than 30 minutes. He had been questioned on three previous occasions. On the other three occasions he was not questioned at all. Every time he was told that the certificate would be mailed to him in a few days. He is a veteran who took his discharge papers with him each time he went to the office.

Fri. 2-13-48

ON TUESDAY, JAN. 27, the board went to the Fairfield City Hall and remained in session there throughout the day. When I entered the room in which the applicants waited, there were 14 Negroes and seven white persons waiting to be examined. Not all the Negroes got into the examining room. All who did were questioned, as far as I was able to find out. I talked to two white persons who were not questioned at all.

The procedure was this: When a Negro entered the room to register, he was told by a clerk to sit down and wait until an application blank could be given him.

Several Negroes waited for as long as 20 minutes before being handed a blank. Others who had been excused from their jobs for periods of an hour or so to register could not wait and left the office without even filling out the blank. When finally the blank arrived from the clerk, and after the applicant filled it out, he was told to wait until he was called in for examination. Some waited for longer than an hour. Some could not wait and went back to their jobs without being examined, but after they had each received a blank. I talked with one Negro woman who waited two hours and 40 minutes before she was called into the office for examining.

Case History

THE FOLLOWING CASE HISTORY is in written form in my possession. It is signed by the Negro who wrote it:

"Upon reaching the City Hall, I went to the clerk's office and paid my poll tax . . . even though I had not registered. 2-13-48

"After entering the room, I was given a registration blank to fill out, and directed to a table with two other prospective colored registrants. At another table about eight white prospective registrants were busy preparing their applications.

"The registrar in charge offered assistance to the white registrants, but at no time did he volunteer his services to the colored. One had to arise and go to him for information. One colored registrant waited 10 minutes before the registrar asked her if she wished to register. News Birmingham Ala

"Normally I would have been fifth in line to take the oath, but 15 white persons were shunted in ahead of me. While waiting, I had a chance to watch the retarding tactics being used by the registrar. Colored registrants were seated at a table and in chairs along the wall. However, only a few had blanks. In the interim a white registrant called this fact to the attention of the registrar, who then gave them the necessary blanks. This white person was summoned into the examining room and stayed in longer than had any other applicant while I was there. 2-13

"I waited more than an hour. Then my turn came. I was asked the following questions: (1) Where did you go to school? (2) Name the two U. S. senators from Alabama. (3) How many congressional districts are there in Alabama? (4) What district do you live in? (5) Who is your congressman? (6) What are the duties of the president of the United States? (7) Where do you work? (7) Do you own your own home? (8) Do you know Mayor Gilley?" (Note: This examination took place in Fairfield.)

Examining In Fairfield

DURING THE DAY in Fairfield the board examined 103 prospective voters. I have not been able to find out how many passed, how many failed, how many were colored, how many were white.

Prior to the Fairfield session, the board averaged examining about 60 applicants a day. On Wednesday, Jan. 28, it examined 140. On Thursday, Jan. 29, it examined 194. On Friday, Jan. 30, it examined 225. These figures came directly from Chairman Hosey.

Saturday was the last day for registration before the poll tax collections ended on Sunday. I do not know how many applicants were examined on Saturday morning. According to one person, a Negro, present on that occasion, the line was formed against the wall and outside into the corridor. A clerk then went up and down the line picking out persons who were summoned into the office. In no case did he see a Negro so summoned. He himself did not even get the opportunity to fill out a blank, as none was offered him. Exactly at closing time, the doors were closed. Some 25 persons who were inside the office and who had filled out blanks had their blanks collected and were told to come back some other time.

The same procedure had been followed on other occasions when closing time arrived at 4:30 p.m. The board never stayed overtime to take care of those inside the office at 4:30. Such persons were turned away, just as were any still lined up outside in the corridor. This information is on the direct testimony of Chairman Hosey made in a public meeting.

REGISTRATION IN JEFFERSON COUNTY

Questioning Of Would-Be Voters

BY DOUGLAS L. HUNT

(Third of a Series)

It will be remembered that the amended section of the Constitution of Alabama pertaining to registration of voters reads that, in order to qualify, a person must be able to "read and write, understand and explain any article on the Constitution of the United States in the English language." News

Let us see how the registrars of Jefferson County have applied that test to many applicants in the past weeks.'

Birmingham Ala

The information which follows came to me through personal interviews. Some of the interviews were held in the courthouse outside the room in which the applicants were questioned. Some were held in other places. While the information here given might be classfied in a court of law as "hearsay evidence," it came to me in each case directly from the person involved. I believe it to be accurate. I have the name and address of each person who offered information.

* * *

A WIFE OF ONE of Birmingham's prominent business men was asked:

(a) How many state senators are there?

(b) How many representatives are there in Washington from Alabama?

(c) How many representatives are there in Montgomery from Jefferson County?

(d) In what congressional district do you live?

(e) Who is the sheriff in Jefferson County?

(f) Who is the probate judge in Jefferson County?

* * *

CIO Official's Wife

THE WIFE OF A CIO labor official was asked:

(a) How many votes does it take to pass a bill through the House of Representatives in Washington? She answered that it took a majority.

(b) How many votes does it take to override a presidential veto? She replied that it takes a two-thirds majority.

(c) Under what law are you registering? She replied that she was registering under the law of the state of Alabama. She was told she was wrong, that she was registering under the Boswell amendment.

* * *

A MEMBER of a CIO textile union was quizzed at length along the same line. He was a resident of Geneva County before he came to Birmingham, had lived there all his preceding life and was a registered voter of that county.

Five girls belonging to a CIO bakery union came together to register. The first four were sworn in without being asked any questions at all. The fifth, who had a speech impediment, was required to read aloud from the constitution for 15 minutes, but was asked no questions.

A woman employed in a downtown office was asked, "Who is your congressman?" Then she was asked, "Why have you never registered before?"

2-18-48

A COLORED GRADUATE registered nurse, who is now employed by Jefferson County and who had passed a civil service examination to get her job, was asked, "Who is in charge of street improvements in Birmingham?" Although she is employed under civil service which requires that all under its provisions be registered voters, she was not yet been able to get the Board of Registrars to qualify her. She has never received a certificate.

An employe in the composing room of The Birmingham News was asked how many buttons he had on his vest.

A Negro coal miner was asked, "How old are your wife's father and mother?"

A Negro woman who has passed the State Cosmotology Board's examination and who owns her own beauty shop has been twice to register. Each time she was asked no questions at all. Neither time has she received a certificate. She made the first attempt to register last Summer, the second in December.

2-18-48 Wed.

Baptist Minister

A NEGRO Baptist minister was given a book from which to read. He does not know what it was, except that it was some sort of a legal book. It was not the Constitution of the United States. He read one paragraph of complicated legal language, was told to close the book and explain what he had read. He was not allowed to reread the paragraph. He has received no certificate as yet.

A coal miner living in Pratt City (a Negro veteran) went seven times to the office to register. Each time he took with him his discharge papers. On his seventh trip he was kept more than 30 minutes in the office. Among the questions asked him were the following:

(a) How are senators elected?

(b) How many senators in Washington and why are there no more?

(e) Where were you born?

(d) Where do you stay now and why didn't you go back where you were born after you came out of the Army?

(e) How much schooling have you had?

Then he was given three articles from the constitution to read and explain in full. He was mailed a certificate after his seventh trip to the office.

* * *

THE PRESIDENT of an AFL local (a Negro) was asked, "Who sent you up here? How old are you? If you are 34 years old, why have you never registered before?"

A group of nine Negro veterans came to see me. All had been up at one time or another to the registration office. Some had been there as many as three times. Some were asked no questions. Others were questioned at length. Two were told that the office was not open for registration at the time they came, but white applicants were going into the office for examination while they were there. One was asked one question which he could not answer. He was told there was no use in his sticking around, that he might as well forget all about it. Each applicant had his discharge papers. Most of them were told that they had passed and would get their certificates through the mail. In no case has any one of them yet received his certificate. Their experiences extend over the past 60 days.

Fisk Graduate

A NEGRO GIRL, a graduate of Fisk University in June, 1947, became 21 in October, 1947. She went to register after she became of age. She was asked who the senators from Tennessee are. She was asked what courses she studied at Fisk. When she stated that she was a major in sociology under Charles Johnson, now Fisk's president, one of the members of the board asked her to explain what the fields of sociological study were. That was more than 30 days ago. She went back the second time and was asked more questions similar to those listed above. At this writing she had not received a certificate of registration. Birmingham Ala

Other questions asked other applicants not listed above are these:

Who are the city commissioners of Birmingham? Who are the county commissioners of Jefferson County? Who is the judge of the Juvenile Court? What do we mean by U. N.? Where does the U. N. meet? Who is the chairman of the Jefferson County Chapter of the Red Cross? Who is the solicitor of Jefferson County?

Some candidates were asked questions the answers to which could be found in the Constitution of the United States as provided by law. But they were sometimes detailed questions requiring knowledge that few if any persons carry in their heads:

How many representatives are there in the House of Representatives?

How old must a senator be to serve?

How old must a representative be to serve?

Explain exactly how a bill is presented to Congress. 2-15-48

How many amendments are there to the Constitution of the United States?

When does the president take office?

When does Congress meet?

HOW AMENDMENT WORKS

The Birmingham News has begun a series of four articles on how the Boswell amendment is working in Jefferson County. The first piece laid the framework for what is to come. One fact brought out in the introductory article gives what must be a pretty clear indication as to how the amendment has worked: not one of the three Jefferson County registrars finished high school. They are the gentlemen who ask candidates for registration questions bearing on interpretation of the constitution.—Lee County Bulletin (Auburn).

REGISTRATION IN JEFFERSON COUNTY

News, Birmingham, Ala

Labor Protests Registration Procedures

34e(2) Ala.

BY DOUGLAS L. HUNT

(Fourth and Last of a Series)

IF THE PURPOSE of the Boswell amendment was to curb the registration of Negroes, as has been freely admitted by some of its proponents, it looks as though it has been working in that fashion in this county. Those who opposed the bill before the election of November, 1946, also insisted that the working of the bill might be directed against other minority groups and against organized labor. At the time of the election the leaders of labor were usually opposed to the bill, but the election returns seemed to indicate that the rank and file of laboring men were more responsive to the appeals in behalf of the amendment than they were to the advice of their own leaders. Returns from precincts in which laboring men live usually showed majorities in favor of the change. 2-20-48

Now the Birmingham Federation of Labor, through a committee headed by Sam Douglass, has made charges that the Jefferson County Board of Registrars is also discriminating against labor. There seems little doubt from a fairly large mass of evidence presented that men in overalls and working clothes have been more extensively questioned by the board than were those whose appearance indicated that they were professional and business men. Fri. 2-20-48

Mr. Douglass openly charges that the registration laws are intended to make it as difficult as possible for citizens to register. He further charges that the board has not been cooperative with labor groups. His committee has formally asked the governor, the commissioner of agriculture and industries and the auditor (the committee empowered to appoint and dismiss registrars arbitrarily) to discharge Mr. Thompson and Mr. Creel. The committee makes no charge against the board's chairman, Mr. Hosey, and implies that he has been cooperative and fair-minded throughout. The committee also charges that certain elected county officials have cooperated with the registrars in an attempt to keep the electorate small in order that they may be perpetuated in office.

* * *

Courthouse Meeting

AT A PUBLIC MEETING held in the courthouse on Jan. 30, Mr. Douglass brought forth witnesses who testified to the difficulty of getting registered. Mr. Hosey was present at the meeting and verified in person a number of the charges which Douglass had brought. It seems likely that charges against the board's willingness to cooperate were solidly substantiated. There was also presented evidence that certain elected officials had more influence with the board than they have ever publicly admitted. But there was no direct evidence; such charges are extremely difficult to prove. News

But of these facts there can be no question: Birmingham, Ala

The Jefferson County Board of Registrars has consistently refused to hold night meetings so that men and women employed during the day can come to qualify when they are off duty.

The board has also refused to go to outlying sections of the county to register voters who may not be able to make the trip to Birmingham from such points as Leeds and Warrior. 2-20-48

The board went one day to Fairfield and examined 103 applicants. It could have spent several days there for the convenience of the residents of the community.

The board went two days to Bessemer. It could have gone oftener and stayed longer.

* * *

MR. HOSEY HAS consistently indicated a willingness to do those things. Messrs. Creel and Thompson have outvoted him on every occasion. Hosey has introduced motions at public meetings of the board, only to be voted down by Mr. Thompson and Mr. Creel.

There is no legal bar to such meetings as have been asked. The attorney general has ruled that the board can meet at any time and place it chooses, but it must meet during the days set aside by law for such meetings. Thus there is no reason why the board could not have stayed in session at least one night a week until 9 or 10 o'clock. It refused to do so.

Furthermore the charge is made and completely substantiated that on many occasions the board has shut its doors precisely at closing time, even though there have been as many as 25 to 30 persons waiting inside the office with application blanks already filled out. Such blanks have been collected by clerks and the holders thereof told to come back at some future time. Exactly that situation arose in Fairfield on Tuesday, Jan. 27. Mr. Hosey estimates that almost 40 persons were waiting with completed application blanks when the doors were arbitrarily closed at 4:30 p.m. If they did return to finish registration, they had to come into Birmingham to the office in the County Courthouse, a great inconvenience to many of them.

* * *

News, Birmingham, Ala

Limiting Voters

Fri. 2-20-48

IT IS REPORTED on good authority that one of the registrars, asked why he was unwilling to wait longer than 4:30 p.m. to help those already in line, replied that he felt no compulsion to do that inasmuch as so many of the applicants were men and women who looked to be 45 or 50 years old. If they had waited till they were that old to register, why should he inconvenience himself at this time to help them now? The implication back of it all, says Mr. Douglass, is that they are laboring persons whom the unions have urged to become voters and that the board is not interested in qualifying them. It is somehow or other assumed that they would vote to upset established traditions, and therefore it is better for those holding elective office that the voting groups not be enlarged.

Furthermore the board passed a resolution that no person shall be allowed to help an applicant make out his application blank. The blank itself is reasonably long and in some respects complicated. Many an individual would appreciate assistance. Some has been given in the past by members of labor organizations anxious to enlarge the electorate by getting more working people eligible to vote. A few men of genuine public-spirited nature have frequently offered their services for no other reason than that they sincerely believe that every qualified citizen ought to vote. Now all such persons are forbidden to help any applicant in making out the blank.

The Birmingham Federation of Labor has acted as an independent citizens' board in probing into some of the registration practices. The business of the board is the public's business, as is the business of government in all departments. The labor group has performed a public service in calling attention to the procedures adopted by the board. In general it has substantiated its charges.

As an immediate remedy it asks the dismissal of two members of the present board in Jefferson County.

Study Voting Laws

2-20-48

AS A LONG-RANGE proposition, it asks that much future study be given to the voting laws of Alabama. It would, in general, like to abolish the poll tax. But specifically it suggests that the Legislature provide the way to change the law as it stands. It holds that the three men given the power to appoint and remove registrars are often not familiar with the qualifications of those appointed locally. Neither the governor, the auditor nor the commissioner of agriculture and industry is a resident of Jefferson County. They must appoint on the recommendation of local persons and they usually ask officeholders to make their choice for them. They are swayed by recommendations made by local officials. It is therefore argued by some critics of the system that the men on the board are appointed by those anxious to see that certain methods of government are perpetuated, that the best way to do that is to keep the electorate down, that the registrars, accountable to no one in their own county, may follow any practices they please without fear of losing their jobs. Mr. Douglas and the Birmingham Federation of Labor ask that the registration laws be changed so that the elected officers of each county appoint the Boards of Registrars and thus make them responsive to the will of the people among whom they live and work.

Appeal From The Board's Decisions

Wed. 2-25-48

BY DOUGLAS L. HUNT

THERE IS A WAY in which dissatisfied citizens may protest against a decision of the Board of Registrars. Should the board rule that a person is not qualified to be registered, he has the legal right to make an appeal. But to all practical purposes, such procedure involves so much effort and expense that almost no one would feel the urgency to invoke the law's process. Thus the board is in effect the court of last appeal for most would-be voters. Since the passage of the Boswell amendment in November, 1946, the board has had such wide powers of discretion that it stands practically unassailable in its decisions. Wed.

Not one person has appealed from a decision made by the board as now constituted.

* * *

Birmingham, Ala.

This Is The Law

THE FOLLOWING PARAGRAPH is part of Section 35, Title 17 of the Alabama Code of 1940. The right of appeal remains unchanged since that year: 2-25-48

"Any person to whom registration is denied shall have the right of appeal, without giving security for costs, within 30 days after such denial, by filing a petition in the Circuit Court or court of like jurisdiction held for the county in which he or she seeks to register, to have his or her qualifications as an elector determined. Upon filing of the petition, the clerk of the court shall give notice thereof to the solicitor authorized to represent the state in said county, who shall appear and defend against the petition on behalf of the state."

The remainder of the section explains how the appeal may be carried to the Supreme Court of the state and determines that "final judgment in favor of the petitioner shall entitle him or her to registration as of the date of his or her application to the registrars."

In January, 1946, 21 cases were appealed in behalf of Negroes who claimed they had been denied registration. One case—that of Forrest A. Hawkins—was carried to the Supreme Court of Alabama by Defense Attorney Arthur Shores. It was ruled out on a technicality and the remaining 20 cases were then dismissed by the Circuit Court. This action occurred, it will be noted, before the present board was appointed.

The News

This Is The Practice

UNDER THE PROVISIONS of the Boswell amendment to the constitution, an individual still has the right of jury trial to determine whether the board acted arbitrarily in denying him registration. No person has appealed in Jefferson County. Birmingham

There are two reasons which immediately come to mind to explain why such action has not been taken: Ala.

1. The section of the code reads: "Any person to whom registration is denied shall have the right of appeal . . . within 30 days after such denial. . . ." Inasmuch as the present board has made it a standing practice not to hand to each applicant as he leaves the office his certificate, if he passed the examination, or to deny him on the spot, he frequently doesn't know whether he passed or not until the 30-day period has passed. After that it is too late to bring suit against the board.

2. The expense of such a suit is considerable. Even though the section of the code reads that the individual does not have to give security for costs, he does have to consult a lawyer. And lawyers' fees mount up quickly. For example, the Birmingham Bar Association has set the minimum fee for filing a suit in Circuit Court at $100, and the minimum fee for court attendance at such a suit is $150.

Thus, although legal recourse does exist, it is easy to see why it is so often passed up. The decisions of the present Board of Registrars have been legally unchallenged. It is unlikely that many of them ever will be so challenged.

Registrars Fail To Function At Tuskegee, Negroes Claim

The Advertiser

Montgomery Ala.

Thurs 10-14-48

Negro leaders from Tuskegee complained yesterday that they have been unable to get the voter registration board there to function since last April.

They came here to see Gov. Folsom about it, but talked to his legal adviser, Ira B. Thompson, instead. The governor was in conference.

Thompson discussed the matter with Folsom later and said the governor instructed him to investigate the complaint.

Charles G. Gomillion, one of the Negro spokesman, said he wanted the governor first to fill a vacancy on the board which has existed since April, and second to "find some way to get the board to function."

"We have been unable since April 19 to find more than one member of the board at a time on any registration day," said Gomillion, who is dean of education at Tuskegee Institute for Negroes and also a member of the political action committee of the Tuskegee Civic Association.

Under the law, prospective voters are allowed to register on the first and third Mondays in each month.

"What we've done is this," Gomillion related. "Two or three Negroes would go to the registration office every first and third Monday. Sometimes they could find one member of the board but no more."

Action by at least two members is required for registration.

"We want to see if there is any way to require board members to be present on registration days or lose their pay for the days they are not present," Gomillion continued.

The Macon County board has had only two members since April, when Chairman S. Charles Parker resigned.

One of the two remaining registrars, W. D. Tommie of Notasulga, said he has been kept away from board meetings by illness.

"It's just been unable for me to meet, that's all," he explained.

The other, J. J. Rogers of Tuskegee, was not reached for comment.

Tommie said on April 13 that no Negroes had been signed up as voters by the present board, which was appointed on Jan. 9, and prior to that time, no board existed for 18 months.

Spokesmen for both races blamed a Negro's $5,000 damage suit against two former registrars. The suit charged that William P. Mitchell, of Tuskegee, was denied the right to vote because of his race. It was dismissed after the disclosure that Mitchell had been registered but never notified of it.

Mitchell was one of the Negroes who called at the governor's office with Gomillion. The other was Daniel Beasley, of Tuskegee.

Boswell Amendment Getting Court Test In Suit By Negroes

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 9—(AP)—Alabama's Boswell amendment, which might set the pattern for the fight against mass Negro voting, faced its first court test here today.

Ten Mobile County Negroes are asking Federal Judge John McDuffie to declare the law unconstitutional. The judge will hear arguments today on a defense motion that the suit be dismissed.

Counsel for Gov. Folsom and other defendants contends the Negroes have not exhausted their remedy in state courts.

Mon 8-9-48

The Negroes' suit charges that the amendment, written into the state constitution in 1946, deprives Negroes and non-members of the Democratic Party of the right to vote in Alabama.

The amendment provides that prospective voters must be able to "understand and explain" any section of the U. S. constitution. Proponents of the amendment said during the fight for ratification it was designed to restrict Negro registration.

THE COMPLAINT SAYS the 10 Negroes were questioned about the constitution when they appeared before the Mobile County voter registration board, and were told their answers were unsatisfactory.

Besides asking the court to rule the law unconstitutional, the suit also asks damages totaling $100,000 for the plaintiffs.

Other defendants besides the governor are former State Rep. E. C. (Bud) Boswell, of Geneva, author of the amendment; members of the state board of appointing registrars and members of the Mobile County board of registrars.

Boswell has said party leaders in other Southern states have asked him for information about the amendment since South Carolina's so-called "white primary" was declared invalid by a federal court. He said they indicated some voter-qualification plan such as the amendment might be the last means of barring Negroes from voting in the South.

Negroes Challenge Controversial Ala. Vote Rule

34e(2)

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 9—

Ten Negroes today will ask a federal district court to declare unconstitutional the controversial Boswell amendment, which requires prospective Alabama voters to be able to understand and explain the constitution.

Mon 8-9-48

The case, which is slated to come up today, is the first test of the vote measure.

The state has moved for dismissal of the suits and will argue the matter before United States District Judge John McDuffie. Attorney Gen. Silas Garrett will represent Gov. James E. Folsom and other defendants.

The Negroes allege that the measure deprives the Negro of his right to vote in Alabama. The State maintains that the Negro has not exhausted his pleas in the state court.

The plaintiffs are suing for $100,000 in damages.

South Carolina Gets "Boswell" Amendment

Legislative passage of South Carolina's version of Alabama's infamous "Boswell Amendment" seemed a certainty after the bill had passed a second reading in the House without opposition.

Known as the "Anderson Amendment" and introduced by Rep. No effort was made to dispute its being aimed at Negroes.

ALABAMA VOTE SUIT DECISION IS DELAYED

Vote Defense Fund Soars To $1,092.56

34e(2) Daily World

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — (SNS)— The Vote Defense Fund sponsored by the Birmingham Branch of the NAACP as a war chest to challenge the constitutionality of the vote-stifling Boswell amendment soared to $1,092.56 as the NAACP's legal committee announced that the proposed vote test case would likely be filed within the next few days.

Sat 3-13-48

This announcement came yesterday from Emory O. Jackson, chairman of the local vote fund drive. He also announced that C. L. Price chairman of the Tittusville Unit of the NAACP has turned in $106.30. He added that the NAACP had secured suitable litigants for the Boswell amendment test case. He added that the NAACP legal staff is now putting the finishing touches upon the complaint.

It is understood that Jackson held lengthy conferences yesterday with Attorney Arthur D. Shores, member of the NAACPs' legal staff and Attorney Oscar W. Adams, Jr., chairman of the legal redress committee of the Alabama Conference of NAACP with respect to the prospective litigation.

In Homewood last Sunday, W. C Patton, chairman of the statewide Alabama Vote Defense Fund Committee, at Friendship Baptist Church speaking on the subject, "The Challenging Fight" warned that "the Boswell amendment must be destroyed." The meeting was sponsored by the Homewood unit of the NAACP headed by Morris Benson.

10 Vets File $100,000 Vote Damage Suit

The Courier Sat 4-3-48

Pittsburgh Pa.

MOBILE — "Kissing Jim" Folsom, Alabama's towering Governor, and his State Democratic party face a momentous showdown April 15 when United States Judge John McDuffie hears the $100,000 vote-damage suit of ten World War II veterans against the infamous Boswell Amendment in Federal District Court. Folsom and the Democrats are the defendants.

The suit was filed Feb. 28 by a Chicago attorney in behalf of the ten veterans, who are exempt from paying the poll tax in this State. All natives of Mobile, the veterans claim they were wrongfully denied voter registration. They ask $100,000 damages.

HOLDS CONFERENCE

Just before he left on his recent trip North, Alabama's "kissing governor" came here for a last minute conference with State Democratic Chairman Gessener T. McCorvey on the possible outcome of the suit and what steps could be taken to maintain the status of the amendment, which was enacted by the State Legislature in 1946 to keep Negro voters from registration.

The broadside against the Boswell Amendment found Governor Folsom, Chairman McCorvey and three members of the Mobile County Board of Registrars named as defendants, along with the author of the amendment, E. C. (Bud) Boswell, former representative from Geneva County. The complaint alleges that they conspired to deny the ballot to Negroes because of race, political faith and prejudice.

SUPPRESS NEGROES

Sat 4-3-48

Advocates of the Boswell Amendment admitted openly during the campaign for its adoption in November 1941 that it was designed to suppress Negro suffrage.

It was disclosed that on March 16 fourteen Negro veterans and one white applicant were all refused registration under the Boswell plan. The disclosure was made by Milton Schnell, chairman of the local County Board of Registrars, who said that thirteen Negro and 100 white applicants were qualified to vote in the coming May 4 primary.

WRITTEN TESTS

Tests on the U. S. Constitution were given to both racial groups, Schnell said, and he followed up his disclousre with the announcement that written instead of oral tests will be given hereafter.

Meanwhile, J. J. Thomas, local contractor and head of the Voters and Veterans Association, announced last week that fourteen other local citizens intended to follow the ten veterans with another suit against the Bosewll Amendment.

MOBILE, Ala.—While Alabama NAACP officials were preparing to toss three more court suits at the infamous Boswell Amendment which stifles the voting rights of Alabama Negroes, the State itself filed a brief here in Federal District Court contending that the amendment is constitutional. U. S. Judge John McDuffie took the brief under advisement.

Sat 10-2-48

As Assistant Attorney General Silas C. Garrett of Montgomery, submitted his brief, George N. Leighton of Chicago, counsel for the ten Negro plaintiffs who entered suit several months ago, began study of the State's document preparatory to drawing up his own brief for submission to Judge McDuffie.

STEP-UP IN TEMPO

At the same time, a step-up loomed in the tempo of the slashing attacks on the Boswell Amendment, educational inequality, segregation in interstate travel and the overall barriers to civil rights as the NAACP prepared for its third annual State conference here Oct. 8-10. Definite action will develop from that conference.

The Alabama NAACP has already instituted a case in Jefferson County (Birmingham) attacking the constitutionality of the Boswell Amendment and plans to file similar suits in Montgomery and Mobile counties. Cases are also in process of preparation against discrimination in higher education. Legal attacks against travel segregation and other civil rights violation will be taken up at the meeting.

A LAST DIXIE BULWARK

The Boswell Amendment—one of Dixie's last bulwarks for white supremacy — provides that would-be-voters must be able to "understand and explain" the Constitution to the satisfaction of the county board of registrars, and Negroes are the only persons usually questioned by board members relative to the Constitution.

Ten war veterans had sued the local county board of registrars. Replying for these registrars, Garrett said that "alleged" maladministration of a law by county officials did not make the law unconstitutional, as the State motioned for dismissal of the case. The vets complained that the amendment infringed on their constitutional rights. Judge McDuffie told both sides to prepare briefs summarizing their contentions.

More than one hundred delegates are expected to attend the Alabama NAACP conference which will hear Aubrey Williams of Montgomery, Ala., former head of the National Youth Administration and Henry J. Mobile Negroes' Voting Plaint In U. S. Court

Birmingham Post

MOBILE, Ala., Dec. 21—(AP)—A three-judge Federal Court today was studying testimony from a member of the Mobile County Board of Registrars, who said Negroes applying for registration were treated differently than whites.

The witness, E. J. Gonzales, testified yesterday at opening of a court trial on constitutionality of Alabama's voter-qualification law, the Boswell amendment.

Gonzales said most Negroes were given tests on the U. S. Constitution, but that he had not been present when any white applicants were tested.

Ten Mobile County Negroes contend the amendment infringes on their constitutional rights by granting wide discretion to the registrars.

The two-year-old amendment provides that applicants for registration as voters must be able to "understand and explain" the federal constitution to the Board of Registrars' satisfaction.

June 13-21-48

At the outset of the trial, attorneys for the registrars asked the court to eliminate Gonzales, one of the three board members, as a defendant.

34e(2)

Asst. State Atty. Gen. Silas C. Garrett, III, said he had discovered that Gonzales would not go along with the other board members in their defense of the suit.

June 12-21-48

* * *

GONZALES SAID "I cannot agree with the list of denials which they asked me to testify to in this case."

Preceding Gonzales to the stand were the two other board members, J. Milton Schnell and Mrs. D. C. Randle.

Both said the board had no set policy on handling applicants under the Boswell Amendment, and that generally whites and Negroes who appeared to be qualified were not given educational tests.

"If there was some doubt about their qualification from an educational standpoint, we would question them," Schnell said.

The trial will be continued tomorrow morning.

Mrs. Randle testified that she and Gonzales had agreed to allow Schnell to handle most Negro applicants because of his longer experience on the board.

June 12-21-48

Gonzales said he had been a member of the board since October, 1947, and had never been present when a white applicant was challenged on the Constitution.

On cross-examination, he said some Negroes such as professional people and teachers, were allowed to register without being tested on the Constitution.

GONZALES SAID HE disagreed with Schnell's handling of Negro applicants, but made no formal objection.

June 12-21-48

He added that before the suit was filed questioning of Negroes was oral, but that after the suit, they were given written tests.

Attys. George N. Leighton and David Landau, both of Chicago, began calling to the stand Negroes who testified they were not allowed to register.

First of the applicants was Hunter. Davis, business agent of a labor union. He said Schnell told him his answers were unsatisfactory, but that several white persons registered at the time he was there, and that they were not questioned on the Constitution.

34e(2)

When Leighton attempted to question Hunter regarding seating arrangements at the board for whites and Negroes, District Judge John McDuffie interrupted to remark that "segregation is not an issue in this case."

REPRESENTING THE BOARD in addition to Garrett were Rep. E. C. (Bud) Boswell and State Solicitor Carl Booth.

Hearing the case are Circuit Judge Leon McCord, of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals; District Judge Clarence Mullins, Birmingham, and Judge McDuffie.

The Mobile case was filed last February. A similar case is pending in Federal Court at Birmingham.

Shortly before the trial was recessed last night, Mrs. Dorothy Blatchford, board secretary, was placed on the stand to testify to records regarding registration and rejection of Negro and white applicants.

June 12-21-48

She said 39 Negroes had been registered prior to last March 1, and 65 Negroes registered since March 1.

Mrs. Blatchford said three white applicants were registered before March 1 after being questioned on the Constitution. Eleven white applicants were rejected after March 1 for failure to answer questoins on the Constitution properly, she added.

The trial took a surprise turn at the outset when attorneys for the registrars asked the court to eliminate Gonzales, one of the three board members, as a defendant.

June 12-21-48

Assistant State Attorney General Silas C. Garrett, III, said he found out yesterday for the first time that Gonzales would not go along with the other board members in their defense of the suit.

Gonzales, who has differed frequently with the other board members on matters of policy, said, "I cannot agree with the list of denials which they asked me to testify to in this case."

Preceding Gonzales to the stand were the two other board members, J. Milton Schnell and Mrs. D. C. Randle.

Both said the board had no set policy on handling applicants under the Boswell amendment, and that generally whites and Negroes who appeared to be qualified were not given educational tests.

The Boswell Amendment

Journal Guide. Sat 2-21-48 – Norfolk Va.

By C. D. HALLIBURTON

NEWSPAPERS have included North Carolina among the several southern states expressing interest in the Boswell Amendment by which Alabama expects to disfranchise the majority of its potential Negro voters. The Boswell Amendment requires the prospective registrant to interpret the Constitution, apparently to the satisfaction of the registrar.

It is not generally believed that there is any wide interest in such a procedure in North Carolina. The prevailing viewpoint on the subject of Negro suffrage, at least among those with influence, was probably well summed up by the Raleigh Times, a relatively conservative daily, in a recent editorial, from which we quote:

Sat 2-21-48

HERMAN TALMADGE, who seized the Georgia governorship and held it until the Georgia Supreme Court ruled against his claim, is advocating a 'white supremacy' law based on voter qualification regulations. The intent of the proposed law, Talmadge frankly admits, is to disfranchise Negro voters.

"It is hinted that Talmadge and his supporters will seek passage of a law similar to one now in force in Alabama which requires would-be voters to read and explain the U. S. Constitution to the satisfaction of the various registrars.

'It is well that those unable to read be barred from voting. Those unfortunates are usually incapable of forming an intelligent political opinion and are at the mercy of the ward heeler. But when it comes to making a prospective voter explain the U. S. Constitution to the satisfaction of the registrar, this is indeed a mockery. Learned lawyers are constantly differing with each other on constitutional interpretation. To make the voter explain the thing to the satisfaction of a registrar who may be abysmally ignorant of the law is a rank injustice to the individual voter and to the public.

"AS FOR literacy tests for voters, it would be a fine thing if all states required them, if it could be assured that the tests were administered fairly. But when the literacy test is handled so as to exclude illiterate Negroes from the ballot while giving the ballot t6 illiterate whites, it constitutes a travesty on our democratic system."

JUDGE HENRY A. GRADY, in Wake County Superior Court, has declared a non-suit in the case of the Rev. James L. Pridgen, who had sued the Carolina Coach Company for $25,000 damages on an allegation of malicious prosecution and false arrest back in 1946.

Rev. Mr. Pridgen, then a student at Shaw University, brought the suit after he was arrested on a warrant charging disorderly conduct. W. A. Green, a dispatcher at the Raleigh Union Bus Station. was responsible for the warrant. Rev. Mr. Pridgen was on his way to Norfolk, and resisted as an interstate passenger an order to remove to the rear of the bus. In municipal court he was freed on a nol pros with leave.

Judge Grady ruled the non-suit on the ground that the bus company could not be held responsible for the act of the dispatcher since his action as to the warrant was beyond his authority as agent of the company. He cited state precedents in cases (not involving transportation) in support of his ruling.

An appeal to the State Supreme Court was noted at the end of the proceedings.

UNPRECEDENTLY ROUGH weather has upset the daily routine of millions of North Carolinians lately. Within less than ten days two snowfalls of approximately nine inches minimum each have been experienced over a wide area of the interior of the state, each accompanied by high winds and temperatures in the neighborhood of 15.

Both the recent snowstorms broke 15-year records for parts of North Carolina, but the situation was even worse than the nine inch figures would indicate, as a driving and icy wind piled up drifts of two feet and more in many places. Meanwhile, Wilmington and other coastal localities suffered great inconveniences, including disruption of communications and public utilities services, as the result of heavy freezing rains and other "ice storm" features.

MOBILE, Ala.—A three-judge Federal court last week overruled the State's motion to dismiss two suits challenging constitutionality of Alabama's infamous Boswell Disfranchisement Amendment.

Federal Judge John McDuffie of Mobile said Thursday that the three-judge court of which he was a member will set a date for an early court hearing on the merits of the two suits against the measure.

The amendment is regarded as one of the last bulwarks of the "white supremacy" crowd to deprive Negroes of the ballot. It requires a prospective vote registrant to be able to "understand and explain" the U. S. Constitution to the satisfaction of his board of registrars. Tests in this particular are almost invariably imposed upon Negroes.

Hearing on merits of the suits, filed in Federal District Courts at Birmingham and Mobile, now are required by law at the earliest possible date, Judge McDuffie said. They will be held in both courts.

The Rev. E. C. Braxter, a college graduate, is the plaintiff in the Birmingham case. Ten persons, including a woman, Mrs. E. K. Carter, are complainants in the Mobile case.

Mobile Board Of Registrars Ask Boswell Suit Dismissal

MOBILE, ALA., Nov. 29 —(AP) — The Mobile County board of registrars today asked dismissal of a revised federal court suit here challenging constitutionality of Alabama's Boswell amendment.

Attorney General A. A. Carmichael denied the allegation of the 10 Mobile County Negroes who filed the action that Negroes were denied the right to vote because of race or color.

The Boswell amendment provided that citizens seeking registration as voters must be able to "understand and explain" the federal constitution to the satisfaction of registrars.

Dismissal Refused

A three-judge federal court here refused recently to dismiss a Birmingham suit on the same subject and ordered a trial of the case on its merits.

Attorneys for the Mobile County Negroes later amended their suit, making their complaint conform more nearly to the Birmingham action.

34e(2)

In the amended complaint here, Gov. James E. Folsom and other state officials were eliminated from the case, leaving only the Mobile County board of registrars as defendants.

Circuit Solicitor Carl M. Booth was brought in today as a defense attorney along with Carmichael, assistant attorney general Silas C. Garrett III and E. C. Boswell.

Booth said the three-judge court would hear the Mobile case soon. Tues 11-30-48

Long Awaited Fight On Boswell Amendment Reaches Federal Court

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—The NAACP's long expected attack on Alabama's Boswell Amendment was launched in the federal courts here Tuesday, when the suit was filed by the Rev. E. J. Baxter of Jefferson County, challenging the constitutionality of the notorious political disfranchisement device.

The young minister, pastor of the Allen Temple Methodist church, Alden, Ala., is a graduate of Payne College in Birmingham. The Jefferson County board of registrars denied him the right to register as a voter on the grounds that he did not satisfactorily "understand and explain" a section of the United States Constitution.

The suit asks $5,000 damages, and a declaratory judgment. It was filed on behalf of "this petitioner and all other Negroes in Jefferson County possessing the qualifications to register."

Cites U. S. Constitution

It contends that the state constitution as amended with regard to Section 181 (voting), is unconstitutional and is in violation of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the federal Constitution.

The petition charges that the Jefferson County board of registrars exercised arbitrary discretion in refusing the Rex. Baxter the right to register as an elector, and asserts that the board has no visible standards by which it can measure a man's qualifications to vote.

Boswell amendment proponents openly admit that the 1946 disfranchisement measure was designed for the purpose of maintaining a quota system for Negro vote registrants.

One In 500 OK'd

The state has a Negro population of more than 900,000, but only about 6,000 Negroes vote because of the existence of the amendment and the cumulative poll tax. It requires registrant applicants to be able to understand and explain the United States Constitution to the satisfaction of a board of registrars, if demanded. Its provisions are almost invariably imposed upon Negroes who apply to register.

NAACP attorneys in the Baxter case are Thurgood Marshall, Special Counsel, Edward R. Dudley, assistant Special Counsel, both of New York, and Arthur D. Shores, of Birmingham.

Additional Boswell amendment cases in the NAACP's all-out battle against political disfranchisement in the South will be filed in Montgomery and Mobile, Shores said Tuesday. Meanwhile, the case of 10 Negro plaintiffs in Mobile, who entered suit in another Boswell amendment case on February 28, through a local movement known as Veterans and Voters League may be heard in federal court there on May 14.

3-Man Federal Court Ends Trial On Boswell Amendment

Montgomery, Ala.

MOBILE, ALA., Dec. [illegible]—(AP)—A three-judge Federal Court today concluded a trial on constitutionality of Alabama's Boswell Amendment, referred to as a weapon of "white supremacy" advocates. Wed 12-22-48

Counsel for 10 Mobile County Negro plaintiffs introduced letters by State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey to other party officials in which he had called the voter-qualification law "all-important."

McCorvey had warned in a letter to members of the State Democratic Executive Committee: Wed 12-22-48

"We are going to see our poll lists flooded with thousands of voters who have not yet fitted themselves to participate in our government" unless registration laws were tightened.

34e(2)

"There are any number of counties in Alabama's Black Belt where, unless we do something to tighten up our registration laws, we will very likely, in a few years, have only colored county officials, as in many of these Black Belt counties the Negroes outnumber the white people from five to one to ten to one," he wrote. Wed 12-22-48

The amendment to the state constitution was adopted in a 1946 state referendum.

The court announced that a decision in the case would be returned at a later date.

Assistant Attorney General Silas C. Garrett, III, asked the judges "not to strike down the Boswell amendment" because of the alleged maladministration of officials acting under it.

He asserted in a closing argument that the amendment was enacted to ensure that "only qualified citizens become electors." 34e(2)

George N. Leighton, attorney for the Negroes, called on the court to declare the amendment unconstitutional.

He asked for an order restraining the Mobile County Board of Registrars from acts allegedly infringing on the constitutional rights of the plaintiffs.

The amendment requires applicants for registration as voters to be able to "understand and explain" the federal constitution to the satisfaction of the board of registrars. Wed 12-22-48

Leighton contended that the broad powers of diseretion given the registrars were used to discriminate against his clients and other Alabama Negroes.

Milton Schnell, chairman of the Mobile County board, denied as the hearing closed that his board had discriminated against Negro applicants for registration.

Earlier another member of the same board, E. C. Gonzales, had testified that Negroes applying for registration were treated differently than whites.

He was offered an opportunity to testify again today, but said his statements previously would stand. Wed 12-22-48

Alabamans Ask Dismissal Of Boswell Edict Suit

MOBILE, Ala. — Defendants, including state officers in the suit filed by 10 Mobile Negroes attacking the Boswell disfranchisement amendment, Friday asked the federal court here to dismiss the action. Sat 5-29-48

The suit named as defendants, Gov. James E. Fulsom, members of the state appointing board for registrars, the Mobile County Board of Registrars and former State Representative, E. C. Boswell, sponsor of the amendment in the Alabama Legislature. Sat 5-29-48

It was conceived by one of the South's leading white supremists, Gessner T. McCorvey of Mobile, chairman of the Alabama state Dem. executive committee. McCorvey is one of the most rabid of the Dixie revolters against President Truman and his civil rights program.

Leads Revolt

He influenced the state committee to okay and support only Democratic National Convention delegate and presidential elector candidates who agreed to pledge not to support the President's nomination and to withhold the state's electoral votes from him, respectively.

Federal District Judge John McDuffie, former Alabama congressman, has set no date for a hearing on the motion to dismiss the suit.

He was asked to dismiss the suit on the grounds that his court had no jurisdiction because the plaintiffs did not exhaust their remedy in state courts, "as provided by law."

MOBILE, ALA., Nov. 5.—(AP)—A three-judge federal court took for decision today state motions to dismiss two suits challenging Alabama's Boswell Amendment. Sat 11-6-48

The day-long hearing on constitutionality of the voter qualification law was cut short when counsel for 10 Mobile County Negroes agreed to eliminate Gov. James E. Folsom and other state officials as defendants in their case.

This left as defendants members of the Mobile County Board of Registrars and the board itself.

A previous allegation that the two-year-old statute is part of a "gigantic conspiracy against Negroes and other non-members of the Democratic party in Alabama also was dropped.

These allegations were part of the original suit filed at Mobile last February. Now it conforms more nearly in its complaints to a suit filed in Federal Court at Birmingham, the other case argued here.

The judges gave attorneys for the Mobile Negroes until next Friday to file their amended complaint, and allowed Assistant Attorney General Si Garrett, until the following Tuesday to file his amended motion to dismiss.

The amendments will be considered as made today, the judges directed. Sat 11-6-48

The Boswell Amendment provides that citizens seeking registration as voters must be able to "understand and explain" the Federal Constitution to the satisfaction of the registrars.

Arthur D. Shores, of Birmingham, one of the four Negro lawyers for the plaintiffs, charged that the statute infringes on the constitutional rights of Alabama Negroes by giving the registrars "unbridled power."

He called the amendment a "poor yardstick" for determining the qualifications of a citizen to vote. "Even the highest court of the land rarely renders a unanimous opinion on a constitutional question," Shores declared.

Florida Election Day Riots Probed

By JAMES B. LaFOURCHE

MIAMI—(ANP)— Failure of the Okeechobee authorities to investigate an alleged May 25 election night attack on a Negro canning crew plant there, has resulted in the state attorney's office superceding the small town officials and to date, more than 50 white witnesses have been grilled concerning the riotous attack.

Heading the state investigators is Thad H. Carlton of Fort Pierce. The latter stated that the quiz would last more than a week. He did not disclose what he had learned. The investigation was launched after Gov. Millard Caldwell, chief foe of Pres. Truman's 10-Point civil rights program, had been petitioned by Allem Markham, co-owner of the plant to act.

It was disclosed that a full report of the incident has been turned over to the state's attorney's office by Sgt. T. E. Jones, of the Florida Highway Patrol. The state attorney's office, headed by Murray Overstreet, is empowered to act without convening a session of the grand jury, it was stated.

BEAT WHITE FOREMAN

But for the beating of a white foreman, the incident might have remained a closed affair. But Jim Rigdon swore out an assault and battery warrant against one of the atttackers whom he recognized.

Fri. 6-25-48

It was likewise cleared up that the wholesale attack on the Negroes was not to frighten them away from the polls, but came as the aftermath because the Negroes had been brought in to aid in gathering the crop.

The savage-like attack took place on the night of May 25, just about 9 p. m. dinner time for the Negro workers. One of the Markham's stated that about from 10 to 12 white men entered the plant and commanded the Negroes to "get into those trucks and get out of town." During the scuffle which ensued, one Negro man was said to have been cut and several others badly bruised.

Alabama And Miss. Plans Face Attack

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Having engineered the wrecking of the South Carolina scheme to perpetuate the white primary, attorneys for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People this week prepared a similar fate for the Alabama and Mississippi plans which seek to continue the disfranchisement of Negro citizens through discriminatory registration practices.

The Alabama plan, embodied in the Boswell Amendment, faces an early test in the United States District Court in Birmingham. Arthur D. Shores, Birmingham attorney and member of the NAACP legal committee, in association with Thurgood Marshall, NAACP special counsel, will challenge the Alabama law in the Federal Court.

Columbia S.C.

Referendum Adopted

The Boswell Amendment requires voters to be "of good character" and able to "read, write, understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States." It was narrowly adopted by a referendum in 1946. A similar law was passed this year by the Mississippi Legislature. This law will likewise be challenged in the courts by the NAACP.

Jun 5-2-48

Action of the United States Supreme Court on April 19 upholding the decision of lower courts in banning the South Carolina deal spells "the end of the white primary and destroys all hopes of the white supremacists to exclude Negroes from voting regardless of the ingenious methods used," Mr. Marshall asserted.

"The NAACP pledges itself entire resources to continue this fight until all qualified Negroes throughout the country are freely granted the right to vote."

Voters Triple In Southern States

The Bu[illegible] Lighthouse
Columbia S.C.
6/18/48

The number of Negro voters in the South has tripled since 1940, according to a report prepared by Luther P. Jackson, Professor of History at Virginia State College, for the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta, Georgia.

For the South as a whole, the number of Negro voters increased from 211,00 in 1940 to 645,00 in 1947 the latter figure representing 12 per cent of the Negro population of voting age.

Leadnig the Southern States in this increase is Georgia, where Negro enroilment is estimated to have jumped from 20,000 to 125,000 between 1940 and 1947. But the study shows that it is the border State of Oklahoma which has he highest percentage of its eligible Negro population qualified as voters—29.6 per cent.

Although seven southern states retain the poll tax, the report declares, only in Mississippi, Virginia and Alabama does it "constitute a significant barrier either by the amount of money to be paid by the time and method of payment, or by its cumulative features."

REGISTRATION BARS

On the basis of a state-by-state inquiry into voting practices, Dr. Jackson concludes that it is registration which is most commonly used as a means of discrimination against potential Negro voters. This is accomplished, he states, by registrars who make severe application of qualification requirements against Negroes only, by policies of evasion, and by deliberate insults or threats at registration places.

It was found however, that there is relatively little opposition to Negroes becoming registered voters in Southern cities of a population of 25,000 or more. "In Memphis, Atlanta, Jacksonville, or New Orleans" says the report, "(Negroes) may qualify with as much ease as they may in any Northern city."

The study points out that "it is not always the barriers to voting consciousness among them." The reason for this lack of interest is attributed in part to the fact that many Negro churches and schools have not taken an active part in educating colored citizens in civic responsibility.

BENEFIT NOTED

Practical benefits that have come to Negroes as a result of their voting include the construcion of additional Negro parks, playgrounds, schools, and other public facilitics and services and the employment of Negro policemen.

Dr. Jackson points to the Negro vote as a healthy influence on Southern politics in general. "Holding the balance of power in many instances," he writes, "their vote has been a factor in driving out of office city machines of long duration, in favor of more liberal officeholders."

It would be erroneous, the report concludes, to claim that the increase in Negro voters in the past eight years seriously threatens "white supremacy." For "in spite of the gains made by Negroes as voters during the decade of the 1940's, it is correct to say that the whites have liekwise been advancing, and in most States at a faster rate.... In Florida, the ratio is about 14 to 1; in Virginia, 20 to 1 and in Louisiana, 100 to 1."

Maybank Pledges Fight On 'Rights' In The Senate

Columbia Record
Columbia S.C.

CHESTER, July 22—(AP)—Alan Johnstone, Newberry attorney who is one of five candidates for Democratic nomination to the United States Senate, continued his attacks today on U. S. District Judge J. Waties Warning's order opening Democratic party membership to Negroes.

Jun 7-22-48

"Government by injunction and force is tyranny," Johnstone declared.

Columbia S.C.

He repeated his charge that Waring was nominated judge by Senator Burnet R. Maybank, who is seeking renomination.

Maybank, who issued a statement in connection with that charge yesterday, did not specifically reply to Johnstone. He continued to cite his record as governor and senator and promised to use all his efforts to oppose enactment of federal civil rights legislation.

Other speeches continued much the same.

Jun 7-22-48

At Lancaster and Winnsboro yesterday, four of the five candidates condemned Waring's decision in the suit against state party rules by a Beaufort Negro. Neville Bennett of Clio had nothing to say about the order.

Johnstone and United States Rep. W. J. B. Dorn of Greenwood charges that Maybank nominated Waring to pay a political debt.

Waring's Order Quickens Boil Of SC Politics

Columbia Record

Federal Judge J. Waties Waring's order that Negroes be allowed full participation in the South Carolina Democratic party quickened the boil of state politics, as four or five senatorial candidates opened bitter attacks on the judge.

Jun 7-22-48

One of them was Sen. Burnet R. Maybank, who joined in recommending Waring for the federal district bench in Charleston in 1941.

Five candidates for the state legislature have pulled their names out of the primary because of the ruling. Some said they would run in the general election.

7-22-48

State Democratic Chairman William P. Baskin was urged to recall the state convention to consider the latest status of the party.

Individuals blasted Waring. Mayor William McG. Morrison of Charleston vowed he would not vote in the primary next month if the oath meant he would have to support President Truman.

The objection to Waring's order shaped up twofold.

Morrison voiced one. "If the oath is what it appears to be—that by voting you are pledged to support the nominee of the national Democratic party—I for one will not vote in the primary," he said.

Waring ordered the party's oath with its racial segregation clause abolished.

Jun 7-22-48

The judge restrained the party from requiring of a voter "any oath other than that the prospective voter meets the qualifications as an elector set out in the constitution of South Carolina, and is a Democrat and will support the election of nominees of the Democratic party at the ensuing general election."

The other objection was to Waring's action in ruling that Negroes must be allowed full participation in party affairs.

Senatorial candidate Alan Johnstone led off the blistering attack on Waring and on Maybank, whom Johnstone said recommended Waring's appointment.

Maybank pointed out that he was not responsible for the judge's actions "on or off the bench," and said he had been the first South Carolinian in public office to criticize Waring for his political rulings regarding the Democratic party.

U. S. Rep. W. P. Bryan Dorn of Greenwood and Marcus A. Stone of Florence and Dillon joined the assualt on Waring.

Some 4,727 Negroes have enroled in Charleston county since Waring opened the books to them.

And in Charleston county, T. Allen Legare, Jr., and Henry T. Gaud withdrew their candidacies for the state legislature from the primary. So did candidates James B. Morrison, Don V. Richardson and James B. Moore in Georgetown county.

Ga. Registrars Ordered to Explain Voter 'Purge'

U.S. Judge Rules on Cases in Spalding, Laurens Counties; Holds Hearings Legal

Baltimore Md

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (NNPA)—Federal Judge Frank Scarlett, on Aug. 11 made two rulings affecting voting lists involving colored voters in two Georgia counties—Spaulding and Laurens.

He ordered the Spaulding County registrars to show cause why they should not stop "purging colored citizens from the voting list," in an appearance before the court scheduled for Aug. 20.

In the Laurens County cases, the judge ruled that the registrars were in their legal rights in holding hearings between October and April 20, leaving the question only of damages to be determined.

More Than 500 "Purged"

The Spaulding County suit, entered by Frank Bowers, Atlanta attorney, charged the vote purge began there on July 26, when some 1500 colored voters were summoned to appear before the Board of Registrars.

All, said the suit, were notified they would be dropped from the voting list for failure to appear and answer questions concerning their qualifications to vote.

As a result, the suit continued, the names of between 500 and 700 colored persons were stricken from the list.

Summonses Issued Too Late

The suit also maintains that the summons to appear before the board were not issued in a legal fashion and did not permit colored voters to receive them in time to appear at a specified time.

Named as defendants were R. L. Addleton, T. C. Mann and Gus Anglyn, the Spaulding County registrars. Plaintiffs were listed in the suit as Clifford Caldwell, Leroy Booker and Bernice Boynton.

Board's Action Held Legal

Regarding the suit filed against the Laurens County registrars, County Commissioners, Superior Court Judge R. Earl Camp, W. H. Lovett, J. D. Bush and T. A. Lane of the Democratic County Executive Committee, Judge Scarlett ruled:

Sat 8-21-48

"The registrars were within their legal rights to hold the meetings between October and April 20.

"The only question left to be determined is the question of damages, if any, which can be tried at the next regular turn of court at Dublineon. the third Monday in January, 1949."

Thousands in Damages Asked

It was alleged that the board summonded about 1900 colored citizens before it and one question was whether the board could be regularly assembled before April 20.

Damages amounting to several hundred thousand dollars were asked in the suit.

Dan Duke, white, Atlanta attorney, represents the plaintiffs; and the defendants are represented by Russell M. Daley, Carl K. Nelson, Dublin; Charles Bloch and C. Clayton Jones of Macon.

Scarecrow Tactics Of "Bed-sheeters" Fail On Voters

By JOHN LE FLORE

Sat 4-3-48

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ga.—Terror tactics of the notorious Ku Klux Klan failed to frighten Negroes from the polls in Twiggs county Monday, where they voted in fairly heavy numbers despite the burning of large crosses by the hooded order on the eve of the primary.

Evidently encouraged to commit its latest brazen offense against law and order by its successful intimidation of Negroes in Johnson county several weeks ago, the Klan was foiled in its attempt to do the same thing in Twiggs county.

Burn Cross

Slinkink members of the hate organization burned a fifteen-foot cross on the courthouse square here Saturday night, and another fiery symbol of mob law Sunday night, for the purpose of terrorizing Negroes to keep them from the polls.

Chicago Ill

But to the Klan's surprise, Negro voters were defiant of the cross burning and other threatening gestures made in Twiggs county by the bedsheet order. A young Negro war veteran, determined to vote, said "he wasn't afraid to die on the battlefield to protect the hides of the very Kluxers who would deny him the ballot, and he would not be afraid to die to protect his rights as a citizen from the evil designs of those he had to fight to save from the heels of foreign foes." He regarded the Klan as a far worse enemy to America than any potential enemy country today.

Brave Threat

In Jeffersonville proper, the county seat, 157 of 438 registered Negro voters cast their ballots, and reports from the various precinct over the county indicated that a large turnout of the approximately 800 Negro electors at the polls.

County officials said that an estimated 1,500 whites are qualified to vote in Twiggs county.

The Klan, several weeks ago, gave a display of hate in Johnson county that struck terror in the hearts of docile Negroes there. With the aid of county officials, the hooded order burned a fifteen-foot cross on the courthouse lawn at Wrightsville while its leader Dr. Samuel Green, white, of Atlanta, warned that the "streets of the South would run red with blood if President Truman's civil rights program should be enforced in the area."

The Klan show, held on the eve of a county election, had the influence to keep all of the county's more than 400 Negro voters from the polls the next day.

The same kind of strategy employed in Twiggs county, did not work.

In 1944 there were approximately 85 million eligible voters in the United States. Yet, only 48 million of them went to the polls in the Presidential election. Because of this negligence we do not have majority rule in our country. Franklin Roosevelt received approximately twenty-five and one-half million votes in 1944. In other words, he was chosen by the support of less than one-third of the qualified citizens. This is not to say that he would have been defeated if 85 million votes has been cast. But, at least, a true expression of the majority preference would have been manifested. Next November, as we know, the Presidential election will be held again. The results of that election can have a tremendous effect on the lives of the people. It is vital, therefore, that every citizen vote. And in order to vote he must register. Registrations for the June Presidential Primary in California, close on April 22. So, if you are not now registered or have moved recently or did not vote in 1946, register at once. Then don't fail to vote in everv election.

This Year's Primaries Should Be Last Lawless Ones

The Columbia Record

Fri 9-3-48

Columbia S.C.

The lawless primary in South Carolina has now definitely outlived its putative usefulness. And, what is more to the point, it has clearly demonstrated the need for its abandonment.

It was a futile enterprise when South Carolina made the trial of eliminating all of the primary laws in 1944 and The Record was almost alone then in having the perspicuity to recognize the futility of it and to warn the state that it was winning nothing more than a little more time to work out the problem of Negro voting, time, which the state did not, of course, use for this purpose. The Record had read the supreme court opinions.

But having made the decision, the state and the Democratic party of South Carolina had no real choice except to abide by it after the Elmore case had been carried to the courts. Nothing else offered any hope, from their point of view.

But when the Elmore case was decided the General Assembly of South Carolina should have been reassembled to enact laws both to fix the requirements for voting in the primary and to govern the conduct of the primary elections. There was no longer either reason or excuse for not acting to restore the primary in South Carolina to legal control.

And if the members of the General Assembly had had the foresight to perceive the need and had made clear to the Governor their desire for a special session it may be assumed that the Governor would have issued the call, which could have paved the way also for the enactment at the same session of a real Australian ballot law. But with a few exceptions the legislators were silent or stunned.

Fri 9-3-48

The special session was not held and the subsequent primary was a lawless primary, under which almost anything could happen and nothing could be done about it.

There have been protests and recounts galore, charges of irregularities here and irregularities there. Altogether it adds up to a sorry picture for South Carolinians concerned that elections in South Carolina shall everywhere be fair and honest.

Obviously therefore the next General Assembly will have to enact laws to govern the primary. And since there will be no occasion for haste next year the legislators should take the time and devote the necessary study to make the primary laws, finally passed, as foolproof as possible, covering every contingency and providing penalties severe enough to discourage any attempt at any willful violation of them.

The honesty of elections is fundamental in a democracy.

Such Tricks As Make Angels Weep

The Record
Columbia, S.C.

Last week was a bad week for the South Carolina politicians, almost a disastrous week.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, picked by the hopeless Democrats to rescue the party from perdition, twice said no, the last time in such terms that even a South Carolina Democrat could not misunderstand. So Truman will be the Democratic nominee and the South Carolina party is willing to commit suicide, if necessary, to defeat Truman, who will, of course, be defeated even without South Carolina's participation in the slaughter. It's a sad day ahead for the South Carolinians at Philadelphia.

But it's also a sad day for the politicians in South Carolina. Here the Democratic leaders have been pursuing a policy of sticking their heads in the sand in the hope thereby they could escape the inevitable. The result has been what this position indicated. Last week a new suit was filed in the federal courts, seeking an injunction to restrain the Democratic (Politicians') party from preventing the enrolment of Negroes, their participation in party affairs and activities and requiring them to take a thought-control oath, in the devising of which they had no part. With the national Democratic convention going on the South Carolina party leaders must get together and decide what can be done. Maybe some of them even will have to fork out a little money if they decide to make a fight of it and money always comes hard to the Democratic (Politicians') party. It's a hopeless fight anyhow and should be abandoned but apparently the South Carolina politicians cannot bring themselves to admit that they have been wrong and the newspapers right in this whole controversy. Crow doesn't make a very appetizing political pie.

And then the unkindest cut of all—the special supreme court appointed to hear the extra pay case came to the conclusion that the constitution meant what the words said and what, of course, everybody had known it was supposed to mean. Extra pay is out. It just isn't worthwhile being a politician in South Carolina any more—all trouble and no extra pay. The Record has been weeping in its sleeve ever since.

Dismiss Vote Fraud Charges

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(NNPA)—Charges against Mrs. Lena May Rice, accused of vote fraud conspiracy in connection with the 1946 primary, were dismissed Monday afternoon, June 28, following selection of a jury in the forenoon.

Mrs. Rice was one of three defendants against whom charges were dropped. The other two were white. They were Mrs. Mabel A. Johnson and Joseph Marchese.

Judge Richard M. Duncan, in whose federal court the trial started, announced when court reconvened after noon recess that the charges against these defendants has been dropped "at request of the government."

This move apparently came as a surprise of Harold L. Scott, attorney for Mrs. Rice.

Immediately after Judge Duncan announced the dismissal involving the three defendants, Richard K. Phelps, special assistant to Attorney General Tom C. Clark, began making the prosecution's opening statement against the two remaining defendants, William H. Costello, a lawyer, and A. A. (Jack) Williams, former deputy coroner.

MOTIONED SUSTAINED

Both Williams and Costello were freed last Thursday when Judge Duncan sustained a defense motion for acquittal on the grounds of insufficient evidence.

All five orginally were charged with vote fraud conspiracy arising from alleged activity in the fifth pre cinct of the second ward in the August 6, 1946, Democratic primary election, in which Emos A. Axtell, supported by President Truman, defeated Roger C. Slaughtr, who was seeking to succeed himself as the Representative from the fifth Missouri congressional district, Axtell was defeated in the election by Representative Albert L. Reeves, Jr., Republican.

In the Democratic primary of August 6, 1946, fair employment practice legislation was a direct issue. Mr. Slaughter boasted that his vote bottled up the FEPC bill in the house Rules Committee, which was one of the raesons why President Truman opposed his nomination for another term in Congress.

The Voters' Oath Backfires With Both Barrels

Columbia Record

The voters' thought-control oath was written into the Democratic party rules on the theory that thereby most Negro qualified electors, whom the federal courts had said were entitled to vote in the Democratic primary, might be excluded from voting.

Apparently, it will not have this effect. If Judge Waring's decision be interpreted as holding that all qualified Negro electors may vote in the primary than every qualified Negro elector must be allowed to vote. They cannot be screened out by a voters' oath or by any other device.

The real effect of the voters' oath, therefore, is to divide the white voters, some of whom will not take it because they resent any thought-control, some of whom cannot take it for it violates their Christian faith, or runs counter to their knowledge or common sense, some of whom refuse to take it because they cannot tell from its language what it means. 6-22-48

Now this is the precise opposite of the effect that the authors of the oath and party principles desired. It was their hope that it would keep the whites together and the Negroes out of the primary. To continue the oath in the party rules is therefore to defeat the purpose of the oath.

And no oath is needed to unite the whites of South Carolina. They are all, for all practical purposes, agreed on everything that counts.

Columbia, S.C.

The politicians who devised the politicians' plan, including the oath, presented to the state convention were frightened men. They foresaw and some of them still foresee great changes resulting from the Negroes' exercise of the ballot. Yet there is no evidence to support any such idea. North Carolina and Virginia, Florida and Tennessee have permitted Negroes to vote for years and Georgia, Texas, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi are now permitting them to vote. And there has been no revolution in any of these states. All of them still have segregated schools, colleges, meetings, buses, trains, waiting rooms, restaurants. Not one of them has adopted an F. E. P. C. law. Whites generally still control the government as before. The sky has fallen nowhere. It would not fall here if the qualified Negroes, who wish to vote the Democratic ticket, were allowed to vote in the primary. If anything the states that have allowed the Negroes to vote for the longest period and without any great hullabaloo seem to have the best government. It does not follow from this that the Negro voters are better at selecting the better candidates than the whites, but it does suggest that the highest type of Negro is doing the voting in these states and that the elimination of appeals to racial prejudice from campaign speeches hasn't hurt.

Tue. 6-22-48

The pity is that South Carolina did not have the wisdom to follow the North Carolina lead and take the qualified Negroes into the party voluntarily, as Wade Hampton suggested long ago. There was no real need for a court decision and the Democratic party of South Carolina could have and should have anticipated it and done on its own accord what it is now or later will be compelled to do. Why invite the ignominy of new defeats? 6-22-48

Negroes have voted before in the Democratic primary of South Carolina and nothing happened. Why be so afraid?

The Past Teaches

To the Editor of The News:

When the Southern Confederacy fell and President Jefferson Davis and his cabinet were imprisoned, Davis sent for his Negro body servant and gave him a deed to everything he had, made out in due form and recorded. Davis said to the Negro: "I do not know what will happen to me, but whatever happens, you keep this property and see that Mrs. Davis and Winnie, my daughter, never suffer; when you gather your cotton take it to a commission merchant in New Orleans (naming him). When you want to send me money, don't do it, give it to a lawyer in New Orleans (naming him). He will convey it to me. If the worst happens to me, you keep that property forever." Birmingham, Ala.

When Mr. Davis was released he returned to Mississippi and this Negro conveyed all of this property back to him. Davis then deeded him about 2,000 acres and the Negro's descendants still own it.

When a constitutional convention was called in Mississippi, this Negro was elected as a member from a Negro section. On the first day he introduced a resolution that no Negro should vote in Mississippi and made a speech, saying: "That farm Mars Jeff give me, I am going to keep and teach my children to keep it and tell them to teach their children to keep; but I know if the lazy, worthless, crapshooting niggers is allowed to vote, they won't be able to keep it."

That plain, simple Negro knew more about his civil rights and how to preserve them than many of our white hifalutin' college graduates do, and Jefferson Davis, with all of his comprehensive knowledge of other things, also knew Negroes.

Woman Held On Vote Fraud Wins Dismissal

NEGRO VOTE MAY BE DECISIVE THIS YEAR, WALTER WHITE SAYS

The Tribune

NEW YORK — Predicting that Negro voters will play a significant and potentially decisive part in the 1948 election in 17 key states, Walter White told the 39th annual meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that "all who love democracy must use their ballots wisely and unselfishly to the end that the best candidates are elected, irrespective of political party."

Reporting to the Association of which he is executive secretary, White said:

Los Angeles, Calif.

"1947 was the most successful year of the NAACP's 38 years of struggle for the abolition of race prejudice. The victories won were not always as spectacular as some of those in preceding years. But several of them struck at the roots of the evil and brought to the attention of the people of America and of the world as has never been done before the cost of bigotry to humankind generally.

Sat. 1-17-48

"Of enormous significance," he went on, "are the reports and recommendations made during 1947 by the President's Committee on Civil Rights, the Commission on Higher Education and the Commission on Military Training. All three of these reports mark the acceptance at long last of the fundamental principle on which the Association was founded in 1909 — that discrimination can never be abolished for any American as long as there is segregation based on race, creed, color or national origin. Of particular importance is the participation in these recommendations of representatives of every stratum of economic, racial and religious opinion of the United States.

"World-wide attention to the plight of the Negro and parenthetically of the democratic process in the United States was created by the presentation of a petition to the United Nations of 155 carefully-documented pages prepared under the direction of Dr. W. E. B. DuBois. Coming as it did after the debate in the UN over the treatment of minorities in the Union of South Africa Southwest Africa, Palestine and Asia, the NAACP petition created two full days of debate at the meeting in Geneva of the Drafting Committee of the UN Human Rights Commission."

The Tribune

White said the financial report of the Association showed receipts from all sources of $328,762.19, and expenditures of $410,945.57.

"This deficit," he said, "has cut deeply into the meager reserves which had been built up during the war chiefly through the voluntary contributions of American soldiers overseas. I urge increased support by Americans who believe in democracy. We have spent nearly four decades cutting away the underbrush of prejudice and clearing the fields for the final assault on the citadels of bigotry. We must not allow these final victories to be lost after the skirmishes have been won."

Negroes, Whites Disfranchised by Georgia 'Pledge'

34e(2) Ran

The Worker New York, N.Y.

Sun. 2-1-48

ATLANTA.—A move to disfranchise voters, both Negro and white, who don't conform to white supremacy codes was announced recently at Wrightsville in Johnson County. The chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee, W. C. Brinson, announced that all sign the following pledge in order to qualify to vote in the Democratic primary in that county:

"I favor the county unit system.

"I favor the white primary.

"I favor the segregation of the races.

"I oppose Communism.

"I oppose any organization which seeks to destroy the Constitution of the United States and the constitutioin of Georgia.

"I oppose the enactment into law of . . . the FEPC.

"I will support the nominees of this primary in the general election, unless he or she be disqualified by the Democratic Executive Committee of Johnson County."

★

UNDER THE TITLE: "Think as we say or lose your vote"—the Atlanta Journal commented:

". . . It neds little elaboration to make it plain to Georgians that the Johnson County Democratic Executive Committee would become a grave menace to freedom of election if it were to become a pattern for statewide acceptance."

This outburst from Johnson County is only the most open and flagrant effort in a long series of moves over the state to wipe names off the books, to keep citizens from registering or to actually keep them from the polls. The Worker

Reports from the recent convention at Macon of Negro Citizens Democratic Clubs showed an underhand purge of Negro voters from the books in several places. One delegate told of only two Negroes being allowed to vote out of 130 registered in a recent election involving a sheriff and two city officials. New York N.Y.

IN ANOTHER CASE, Negroes who went to register were told simply that the registrars had run out of registration blanks. This silent campaign to wipe out registered Negro voters from the lists has as its aim not only keeping Negro voters out of the primaries but also suppressing the Negro vote as strong support to the independent third party movement. Sun. 2-1-48

In 1946 some 200,000 Negroes voted in the primary out of a total of 600,000—a factor which the white supremacists are sparing no means to eradicate from the crucial 1948 presidential and gubernatorial campaigns.

We Can't Defend The Indefensible

Atlanta, Ga. Ga.

Sun. 1-4-48.

I think my friend, Roy Harris, of Augusta, owes me something. It is a gallon of syrup, or a ham or a fifth, or something. I forget what it was we bet. But he owes me something.

I recall quite well that one day during the legislative and court contests over the governorship last Winter, I encountered Mr. Harris in the lobby of the Henry Grady Hotel and accepted an invitation to chat with him. Mr. Harris was at the time the engineer of the Talmadge machine, and may still be for all I know.

I had been writing against the white primary bill, and was getting cussed for that. I had said that in my opinion the Legislature, being the elected representatives of the people, had a right to choose a governor, and was getting cuffed around right heartily for that. I had had a talk with the late Eugene Talmadge's physician, who had told me the governor-elect could live six or seven years if he would really obey orders and take care of himself. In order to try and answer the many questions being asked about his condition, I had got into the hospital to see the late Eugene Talmadge and found him looking good. As a matter of fact he was up, walking around his room. He thereafter failed to obey the doctors' orders, being a restless, stubborn man, and had died, and I was getting a brisk going over by the second-guessers. So, I was at the time doing a daily routine of ast, verbal footwork, and there was really no good reason o climb out on a limb with Mr. Harris. Sun.

"Roy," I said, "one of these days, in a year or so, the Supreme Court of the United States is going to knock the white primary bill in the head and then you will be left with all this anger and partisanship and with wounds that won't heal for a long time. Why don't you fellows get together on a qualifications bill, similar to North Carolina's and let's build a really strong Democratic Party? We can do it if we don't drive a lot of people out of it permanently."

Well, that led to more and more talk and so, I forget what it was we bet. But, anyhow, we bet. 1-4-48

Dixie Decision A day ago, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, composed entirely of Southerners, did knock the South Carolina white primary in the head and there really isn't any use taking it on up to the Supreme Court. The Court of Appeals, hearing an appeal from another Southern-born judge's opinion in the South Carolina District Court, was repeating an earlier U. S. Supreme Court decision when it said:

"No election machinery can be upheld if its purpose is to deny to the Negro, on account of his race or color, an effective voice in the government of his country, or the state or community wherein he lives." The Constitution

So, as I said, there isn't any use carrying this decision, which came, with ironic appropriateness from Richmond, Va., on up to the Supreme Court. Atlanta, Ga. Sun. 1-4-48

Anyhow, I hope Roy will send me the syrup or whatever it was.

Harris Come to think of it, I was in trouble also, at the time I speak, for saying that in my opinion Mr. Roy Harris was a smart fellow, and the best single political worker in the State. Some of those in the bleachers were throwing bottles at the umpire's head for that. Well, I thought so then, and I still think so. He either is, or isn't. And I never saw anything wrong with having an opinion about it. It didn't mean I supported all he did. There was, however, one curious fact. At the time Ellis Arnall was elected, I had, along with others, accepted all Mr. Harris did in winning that election. It was, therefore, that I viewed with cynical eyes and some contempt, those who now were hysterically demanding the Harris tactics be denounced because they were now in another camp. My code is not inflexible, but I couldn't do that.

Anyhow, I can but assume this will mean that Roy Harris will cease and desist on the white primary business. He was too good a lawyer to let his emotions fool him before. As a frequent dealer in subterfuges, he knows the law is the law, and no amount of evading tactics will succeed. He is too good a politician to go ahead with it. Or, at least, I think he is. Sun. 1-4-48

The State has had enough of viewing the Negro vote with alarm, anyhow. It could have been pulled right into the Democratic Party and a great deal of it yet can be salvaged with a little fair treatment.

Just last week a recognized Negro leader, A. T. Walden, who appeared on the program when Henry Wallace spoke here recently, greeted Wallace's announcement for the Presidency with the significant statement: "The hope of our people is in the Democratic Party."

The Negro voter was given a bad start in the Georgia primary when hordes of unqualified and illiterate Negroes were herded to the registration booths and the polls with marked ballots in the pockets of thousands of them. I never blamed the Negroes, whose eagerness to vote was understandable, but I did, and do, blame those few who, on their own, pulled off the marked ballot deal.

I have always felt, and still feel, that the qualified Negro certainly had a right to vote in the choice of those who will govern him.

It is high time the South came of age in its thinking about politics. We were touched very little by the great political and social convulsions which shook India, China, all of Asia, and the great Dutch and French possessions of the Pacific and the Indies. But, we felt them slightly. The Constitution

If we fail to go ahead with social (and I am not talking about social equality) justice and political justice for the Negro citizen, there will be more and more chickens coming home to roost. It simply is not possible always to defend, and uphold, a moral wrong. And that is what we have been doing. Atlanta, Ga.

We have got to face this problem in that light, and not in a welter of shouted phrases about "nigger lover," and social equality, and Zebra parties, and all that sort of thing. Gentlemen, the warning bell has struck. Shall we think and act to do the best we can for the South and its problems, or go on fighting against the inevitable, and be overwhelmed by it?

There is time yet.

But. there is not as much time as there was. Sun. 1-4-48

Purged Laurens Negroes Fail To Reregister

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga. 34e(2)

Wed. 6-16-48 Ga.

Constitution State News Service.

DUBLIN, June 15—Although Laurens County reopened its registration lists to qualified Negro voters purged from the lists, not a single Negro applied for registration or reregistration today. Wed.

Refuting earlier reports that many Negroes had registered during the day, Tax Collector T. C. Keen said only a few white college students had come in to register.

Both Teen and E. S. Baldwin, Chairman of the Registration Board, declared that anyone meeting the legal requirements for voting may apply and appear before the Board for reregistration. Both said all who qualified would be returned to the lists. Atlanta, Ga.

Hearing on a petition of several Laurens County Negroes charging a registration list purge has been set before Judge Frank Scarlett in Brunswick on June 26. The Negroes' suit charges the Board and several county officials with conspiracy to deny them the right of suffrage and asks damages. 6-16-48

Registration Still Too Low

The Constitution

There are indications that the number of Georgians qualified to vote this year may exceed the record number registered in 1946 when interest ran high in the Talmadge-Carmichael contest and Negroes were registered in large numbers for the first time since Reconstruction days. Atlanta, Ga.

With 61 counties yet to be heard from, Secretary of State Ben Fortson reports the total to date is less than 300,000 short of the 1,077,949 voters registered two years ago. Included in those yet to report is Richmond County of which Augusta is the county seat. 34e(6)

The proportion of Negro registrants remains about the same. Unofficial estimates placed the number of Negro voters in 1946 at about 118,000. In less than a handful of counties are there sufficient Negro voters to swing the balance of power in an election unless the white vote is divided evenly and the Negroes vote as a bloc. This latter tendency appears to have been dissipated somewhat after the first few elections in which large numbers of Negroes participated. Wed. 7-14-48

While it is gratifying to see more and more Georgians interested in the political welfare of their State, the number of qualified voters this year still falls short of the number who would be eligible if only they would register. On the basis of the 1940 population, the bureau of the Census estimated that nearly 1,800,000 Georgians were of legal voting age. Remembering that legal voting age in the State then was 21, and also that the population has increased considerably in the past eight years, at least 2,000,000 citizens of the State should be eligible for the ballot this year, even after making allowances for those disqualified by reason of illiteracy. The Constitution

California, with a 1940 population of about 6,500,000, tallied approximately half that many actual votes in the general elections for that year. The number registered obviously was considerably in excess of that. On the other hand, Georgia, with nearly 1,100,000 registered voters in 1946, had a total of only about 600,000 votes cast in the Democratic primary, which is our real election. In short, less than 20 percent of Georgia's population exercised the franchise in the record-breaking year of 1946, while 50 percent of California's population normally goes to the polls. Atlanta, Ga.

We will be pleased if final reports show as many as 1,200,000 Georgians qualified to vote this year. But even so, there will be ample room for continued improvement, both in getting citizens to register and, once registered, getting them to the polls. Wed. 7-14-48

A Race With Time

Attorney Daniel Duke, who is leading the fight to have restored to the voters' rolls the names of some 1600 Laurens County Negroes who were purged illegally last Spring, is calling upon all Negroes of the state whose names were challenged immediately preceding the Democratic Primary in 1946, to begin at once to get themselves re-registered between now and the first of July so as to be able to vote in the Fall elections. The World Atlanta, Ga.

It means that all Negroes who were challenged in those days, when almost every place purges were being conducted, that they now have about one week left in which to get re-registered for the Fall elections. It means that no time can be wasted in the effort, since the law requires that the books be closed no later than July 1. Hence all Negroes who have been purged and who have not taken steps to be restored to the voters' list must act now. To delay means disappointment for the individual and undermining the strength of the Negro vote. Fri. 6-25-48

It is the responsibility of all Negro leaders to join in this effort to get these purged names restored to the qualified lists. The purge is one of the devices which has been employed to nullify the U. S. Supreme Court ruling upholding the right of Negroes to vote. But only one! For there are many other devices, all of which add up to the same thing. Some time the registrars carry on the purge in an undercover manner. Some times it is the Ku Klux Klan which burns crosses, writes notes and otherwise intimidates voters a night or two before the election and thus limit the Negro vote. Taken in its broad sense, all of this means purging the Negro voters and thus limiting the effectiveness of his vote. None of these artificial devices must be permitted to hinder the vote of qualified Georgia Negro voters. We must not hesitate to become qualified. We must go to the Tax Collector this day and re-register if our names have been illegally stricken from the list.

Calls On New Administration To Stop Bill

Memphis World Memphis, Tennessee 34e(2)

A. Chester Crystal New President Of Commercial Group

Fri. 12-31-48

By CHARLES W. GREENLEA

ATLANTA, Georgia — (SNS) — Calling on members of the Talmadge administration "not to permit" the passage of legislation designed to disfranchise Negro voters, the Atlanta Business and Trade Association, after electing new officers, passed a scathing resolution denouncing the scheming tactics of the new state leadership in its announced plans to submit such legislation in the coming January session of the General Assembly.

The proposed bill, understood to be a copy of Alabama's infamous Boswell Amendment which has almost completely disfranchised Negroes in that state, was termed "inequitous legislation" by the organization, composed of local business leaders.

Declaring that Negroes are "striving to become full fledged citizens" and want to "assume all the duties and responsibilities of such citizenship," the resolution implied that such legislation would cause racial clashes and conflict.

UNITY IMPERATIVE

At this state in world affairs, with Communism seeking to make inroads into this country, "national unity and good racial relations are imperative," the Negro business leaders warned.

Pointing out that the present voter registration lists were revised as recently as 1945 ,the group's resolution contended that new lists are not necessary.

Discussions at the meeting indicated that the new law will be attacked in the courts immediately upon passage. The bill, now being drafted by House Speaker Fred Hand and legislative leaders, would set up educational qualifications for voters after first voiding all names now eligible to vote. In addition, it would place arbitrary power into the hands of local county registrars to ask "educational questions" and to decide whether a prospective voter should be placed on the new lists.

RESTRICTION POSSIBLE

Political observers point out that by this method the registrars could restrict Negro voters to a small number and even eliminate "undesirable" whites who might be opposed to them. Fri. 12-31-48

Alabama's Boswell Amendment, which effectively kept Negroes from voting in the November Presidential election, has been attacked by Negro leaders in the courts, but has only reached the Court of Appeals.

The Business and Trade Resolution, ended by asking that "no steps be taken to permit the enactment such legislation," was directed to be sent to Governor Herman Talmadge, the speaker of the house, the president of the senate and to legislative leaders.

The resolution was signed by J. R. Henderson, retiring president, A. Chester Crystal, newly elcted president; C. E. Prothro, retiring secretary; R. R. Reid, 1949 secretary, Attorney E. E. Moore, C. A. Scott and W. R. Cochrane, all members of the resolutions committee.

Duke Says Challenged Voters Must File Again

Daily World

Georgia Negroes who plan voting in the approaching Fall elections had better make certain that their names are, first of all, listed on the registration rolls. That is the advice of Daniel Duke, Atlanta attorney, who is leading the fight to have restored the names of some 1700 Negroes of Laurens County, who were illegally and unlawfully dropped from the rolls.

Wed. 6-23-48

Mr. Duke, in an interview in Atlanta late Tuesday afternoon, told an Atlanta World representative that immediately preceding the Democratic Primary in 1946, "the names of thousands of Negro voters were challenged and their names removed from the list of registered voters. "Since that time, Mr. Duke declared, "there has been no organized effort on the part of those whose names were stricken to get their names restored to the list of qualified voters."

Mr. Duke said that any person whose name has been removed and who now possesses the legal qualifications as a voter have from this date to July 1, 1948 to reregister. In order to do this, he said, those who were dropped from the voters list must:

"Go to the Tax Collector's office and apply to the Tax Collector o his clerk, take the oath of an elector and subscribe your name on the voters' book underneath the written or printed oath or upon a separate printed oath.

Daily World

The Tax Collectors, Mr. Duke continues, are required each year to make up the registration list for the year by putting on such list all persons whose names appear on the voters' list and those who have registered at any tme since the filing by the registrars of the voters' list, which by law must be filed by June 1 of an election year. The Atlanta lawyer said that a list of all persons registering after June 1, 1948 must be furnished by the Tax Collector to the registrars so that these names may be added to the list of qualified voters.

Wed. Atlanta, Ga.

He concluded with the advice that in the event that any registered Negro voters are removed from the voters list after being challenged, such voters may file such an appeal as outlined above make the matter heard in the superior court of his county. 6-23-48

Ga. Registrars Ordered to Let People Vote

BRUNSWICK, Ga.—Registrars of Pierce and Jeff Davis counties last week were enjoined from discriminating against colored persons seeking to register as voters.

The order came from Judge Frank Scarlett, of U. S. District Court, who also ordered them to restrain from purging the names of any registered voters qualified under State law.

Judge Scarlett issued his order, upholding a petition filed in behalf of 700 residents in Hazelhurst in Jeff Davis County, and 800 others in Blackshear, in Pierce County, who charged that county registrars refused to permit them to register.

Another case involving the claim from Laurens County that the names of 1,800 would-be voters were purged is currently pending before Judge Scarlett.

Prominent Citizens Are Plaintiffs

SAVANNAH, Ga.—(SNS)—U. S. District Judge J. Frank Scarlett, acting on a petition filed by Dan Duke, Atlanta attorney, has ordered the Laurens County Board of Registrars to show cause why it should not restore 1,800 Negroes stricken from the voting lists. Judge Scarlett set a hearing for 11 a.m., June 26, at Brunswick.

The petition charged that Negroes were arbitrarily removed from the registration list in an illegal conspiracy that violated the U. S. Constitution.

Among those named in the action were Laurens Superior Judge Earl Camp, State Rep. Herschel Lovett and members of the Laurens Board of Registrars and Laurens Board of Commissioners.

The action was filed in behalf of C. B. Smith, D. B. Cummings, George C. Carswell, Georgia Carswell, A. L. Brewster, Thomas Coates, Mrs. Anna Clyde Duncan, and Mrs Sallie Barnett, all prominent Negro citizens of Dublin, Ga.

The plaintiffs also named E. S Baldwin, Ancil Chavous, M. W. Watson, F. M. Beall, W. W. Brinson, H. R. Gilder, Herschel V. Lovett, R. Earl Camp, J. D. Bush, T. A. Kane and U. T. Joiner in the suit which asked punitive damages aggregating nearly a million dollars. Each of the petitioners asked $55,000 damages. They also asked $20,000 attorney fees.

LENGTHY BRIEF

The brief of the eight Negro citizens covers 22 pages of 18 inches length. Dan Duke filed the petition with Judge Scarlett. He is being assisted in the case by Atty A. T. Walden representing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Daily World

The document covers all events that transpired up to the purging of 1,800 of the 2,477 registered voters. The plaintiffs linked the purge to action a part of the 1946 scheme, instituted by hostile political forces to nullify the effectiveness of the Negro vote. Atlanta, Ga.

Listed in the action were four college graduates, three ministers and a school teacher who charged they were illegally removed from the voters' list. The plaintiffs said they, and other Negroes voted in past Democratic primaries. Sun

The complaint urges that Lovett, political leader of Laurens County and power in state politics, and Judge Camp conspired with the registrars and county commissioners to deliberately disfranchise all but 500 Negroes in this year's Democratic primary. 5-30-48

CLAIM SHERIFF PAID

The reported purge of Negro voters was at a cost of $6,000 to Laurens County. Sheriff Carlus Gay, according to citizens of that county, was paid $3,800 for his services in delivering the notices to white and Negro voters. The law provides that he be paid $1 for every notice delivered. This was alleged to have been approved by the county attorney. Sun. 5-31-48

"Prior to this meeting, the Board Chairman, E. S. Baldwin, had consulted with Herschel V. Lovett," the petition continued. "Lovett had advised them that 'all of the n——rs except about 500 had to come off the qualified voters list, and if the Board of County Commissioners don't pay you for your work, I will see that you are paid.' Registration Order Disobeyed

Columbia, S.C.

SAVANNAH, Ga.—(SNS)—In an effort to stem the tide against the purge which operates in a number of ways against Negro voters, five Negroes in Southeast Georgia have filed formal charges against the registrars of Jeff Davis county with failure to obey a federal court order directing them to register Negro voters. Sun. 7-11-48

Several Negro officials connected with the Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic clubs, told an Atlanta World representative, well over 200 Negroes were denied registration, inspite of the federal order directing that applicants be permitted to register. The five Negroes who Thursday, were turned down, signed affidavits that they waited at the polling place in Hazelhurst until after 5 p. m. but the registrars did not appear.

The five signing the affidavit were Moses Parker, M. C. Barney, J. E Grant, Benjamin Armstrong and Elijah Kornegay. 7-11-48

Judge Frank M. Scarlett earlier had issued the order at Brunswick. Aaron Kravitch, Savannah attorney, represented the Negroes.

Increase In Voters Noted

World, Atlanta, Ga.

According to figures released by Fulton County Tax Collector and Registrar T. Earl Suttles, 82,010 voters of corporate Atlanta are eligible to vote in the September primary.

Of ths number, 21,506 of those eligible are Negroes, it was disclosed. Sat. 6-26-48

Outside Atlanta in Fulton county a total of 44,246 voters are said to be eligible, of which 2,569 are reported to be Negroes.

Mr. Suttles report shows that the heaviest concentration of Negro voters is in Atlanta's Third Ward where 15,611 are registered as against 10,782 whites. Precinct 3-B carries a load of 6,564 Negro registrants as against 10 whites.

In Fulton county, excluding Atlanta 46,815 persons are said to be registered. Sat. 6-26-48

INCREASE IN VOTERS

A substantial increase in Negro registrants is seen this year over against total reported figures of last year. This is largely due to relentless registration drives sponsored by a joint citizens committee.

In greeting the decided jump in registration figures Mayor Hartsfield remarked: "It should serve as a warning to the professional city-haters."

The Mayor added: "These figures indicate an awakened interest on the part of voters inside Atlanta. The large registration means that the people as a whole can decide the elections and that little pressure groups will have influence."

McGlockton, here in Atlanta, for a conference with Atty. Gen Eugene Cook, viewed this situation with alarm, because he said registration officials, were misinterpreting a Georgia law requiring voters to vote every two years, or have their names dropped from the rolls.

Since most Negro Voters qualified during June, 1946, any attempt to elicit information regarding their status, age-residence or otherwise was viewed as a trick to disqualify these voters, as two years wont have elapsed since these voters registered until, June, 1948.

The drive to purge Negro voters by this subterfuge was believed in line with the stepped-up gubernatorial campaign, which has been intensified by Talmadge supporters during recent weeks. Fri.

McGlockton called upon the Attorney General's office for an investigation of this scheme which would deprive Negro voters an opportunity to participate in the forthcoming elections. 7-16-48

Duke Says Challenged Voters Must File Again

34e(2)

Daily World

Georgia Negroes who plan voting in the approaching Fall elections had better make certain that their names are, first of all, listed on the registration rolls. That is the advice of Daniel Duke, Atlanta attorney, who is leading the fight to have restored the names of some 1700 Negroes of Laurens County, who were illegally and unlawfully dropped from the rolls.

Wed. 6-23-48

Mr. Duke, in an interview in Atlanta late Tuesday afternoon, told an Atlanta World representative that immediately preceding the Democratic Primary in 1946, "the names of thousands of Negro voters were challenged and their names removed from the list of registered voters. "Since that time, Mr. Duke declared, "there has been no organized effort on the part of those whose names were stricken to get their names restored to the list of qualified voters."

Mr. Duke said that any person whose name has been removed and who now possesses the legal qualifications as a voter have from this date to July 1, 1948 to reregister. In order to do this, he said, those who were dropped from the voters list must:

"Go to the Tax Collector's office and apply to the Tax Collector o his clerk, take the oath of an elector and subscribe your name on the voters' book underneath the written or printed oath or upon a separate printed oath.

Daily World

The Tax Collectors, Mr. Duke continues, are required each year to make up the registration list for the year by putting on such list all persons whose names appear on the voters' list and those who have registered at any tme since the filing by the registrars of the voters' list, which by law must be filed by June 1 of an election year. The Atlanta lawyer said that a list of all persons registering after June 1, 1948 must be furnished by the Tax Collector to the registrars so that these names may be added to the list of qualified voters.

Wed. Atlanta, Ga.

He concluded with the advice that in the event that any registered Negro voters are removed from the voters list after being challenged, such voters may file such an appeal as outlined above make the matter heard in the superior court of his county. 6-23-48

Ga. Registrars Ordered to Let People Vote

34e(2)

BRUNSWICK, Ga.—Registrars of Pierce and Jeff Davis counties last week were enjoined from discriminating against colored persons seeking to register as voters.

The order came from Judge Frank Scarlett, of U. S. District Court, who also ordered them to restrain from purging the names of any registered voters qualified under State law.

Judge Scarlett issued his order, upholding a petition filed in behalf of 700 residents in Hazelhurst in Jeff Davis County, and 800 others in Blackshear, in Pierce County, who charged that county registrars refused to permit them to register.

Another case involving the claim from Laurens County that the names of 1,800 would-be voters were purged is currently pending before Judge Scarlett.

Prominent Citizens Are Plaintiffs

SAVANNAH, Ga.—(SNS)—U. S. District Judge J. Frank Scarlett, acting on a petition filed by Dan Duke, Atlanta attorney, has ordered the Laurens County Board of Registrars to show cause why it should not restore 1,800 Negroes stricken from the voting lists. Judge Scarlett set a hearing for 11 a.m., June 26, at Brunswick.

The petition charged that Negroes were arbitrarily removed from the registration list in an illegal conspiracy that violated the U. S. Constitution.

Among those named in the action were Laurens Superior Judge Earl Camp, State Rep. Herschel Lovett and members of the Laurens Board of Registrars and Laurens Board of Commissioners.

The action was filed in behalf of C. B. Smith, D. B. Cummings, George C. Carswell, Georgia Carswell, A. L. Brewster, Thomas Coates, Mrs. Anna Clyde Duncan, and Mrs Sallie Barnett, all prominent Negro citizens of Dublin, Ga.

The plaintiffs also named E. S Baldwin, Ancil Chavous, M. W. Watson, F. M. Beall, W. W. Brinson, H. R. Gilder, Herschel V. Lovett, R. Earl Camp, J. D. Bush, T. A. Kane and U. T. Joiner in the suit which asked punitive damages aggregating nearly a million dollars. Each of the petitioners asked $55,000 damages. They also asked $20,000 attorney fees.

LENGTHY BRIEF

The brief of the eight Negro citizens covers 22 pages of 18 inches length. Dan Duke filed the petition with Judge Scarlett. He is being assisted in the case by Atty A. T. Walden representing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Daily World

The document covers all events that transpired up to the purging of 1,800 of the 2,477 registered voters. The plaintiffs linked the purge to action a part of the 1946 scheme, instituted by hostile political forces to nullify the effectiveness of the Negro vote. Atlanta, Ga.

Listed in the action were four college graduates, three ministers and a school teacher who charged they were illegally removed from the voters' list. The plaintiffs said they, and other Negroes voted in past Democratic primaries. Sun

The complaint urges that Lovett, political leader of Laurens County and power in state politics, and Judge Camp conspired with the registrars and county commissioners to deliberately disfranchise all but 500 Negroes in this year's Democratic primary. 5-30-48

RALPH McGILL

The Talmadge Victory Was Won

The Constitution

Herman Talmadge will be the next Governor of Georgia. His victory was one of the most impressive ever registered in State political history.

The long arm of coincidence makes him the second son of a Georgia Governor to be elected to that office and it happens that the first one, Joe M. Brown, was the son of Joe Emerson Brown, who had been four times elected the chief executive of the State. The late Eugene Talmadge also was four times elected Governor of the State.

34C(2)

How did he win so impressive a victory?

The threat of an FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Commission), and the civil rights controversy in general, helped him, although it was the FEPC which chiefly brought him votes from those who regarded this issue with fear.

The fact that he was his father's son and possessed to a great degree his father's ability to attract and hold loyalties, was another factor. For a quarter of a century Georgia has been largely a pro-and-anti-Talmadge State. This Talmadge faction felt that since his father had died before being able to take office there was an extra reason to put his son in office.

He had, too, the best political management in the State.

Fri 9-10-48

"For" While there was a large vote against Talmadge, there was little of it "for" his opponent. It was cast as an anti-vote, not a "for" vote.

The argument about whether the team of Ellis Arnall and E. D. Rivers, former Governors, helped or hurt Acting Gov. Thompson is settled to the point where one may say without fear of contradiction that this support assuredly did not help. It probably had a net "hurt" result.

Atlanta, Ga.

But the basic and inescapable fact is that Herman Talmadge won because he is his father's son and the people wanted him. Any other conclusion avoids the facts. This election was neither stolen nor coerced. It was won.

Why? It is important to understand Georgia's past political history to understand the Talmadge victory. Georgia is in many respects a "have-not" State in that our State income is low; we have not enough jobs; our farmers get less income; our children have less spent on them in schools; our people have less opportunity for medical care, and so on.

Georgia is the State of political protest which made Tom Watson such a power. Our politics, year in and year out, are politics of protest.

There were those simpletons who made fun of the fact that so many shabby, ancient and old, broken-down trucks had Talmadge stickers on them. This was not funny or a matter for ridicule. It was an important factor in the Talmadge success.

Obvious It ought to be obvious that in the State (and national scene) there are many, many Americans (too many, in fact) who have done the best they know how to do and still are badly housed, badly fed, badly cared for, and who live with grievances which are very real. They have done the best they knew to do. Therefore they don't feel at fault. It is here, too, that one finds most of the fear of the Negro as an economic competitor.

From their viewpoint these people were absolutely right in not heeding any of the Thompson promises. To them they were meaningless and would not have touched them. The very real reforms of the Arnall campaign did not touch these people or benefit them in any manner they could feel or see.

The late Eugene Talmadge, while knowing this, made the error of opposing the Roosevelt administration, which was reaching these people, and they refused to follow even him.

Signs It was early obvious that Talmadge was building up to a powerful victory. There is one illustration which will serve. That was the newspaper editors' poll. It showed Thompson running ahead, in the country editors' opinions, in a majority of the counties reporting. The Thompson managers so used it.

Yet, written all over it was a big sign reading, "Talmadge Victory." The only significant portion of it was a report from the large urban counties, always anti-Talmadge, showing Talmadge to be strongly competitive. Unless all political weather vanes were suddenly reversed, this new strength in the cities meant Talmadge was really walking about in the country. Later the Thompson headquarters, amazingly enough, admitted loss of strength in the cities. At least six weeks ago the Talmadge sweep was apparent.

Fri 9-10-48

Harris In years past I have said here, in comments on State elections, that Roy V. Harris, of Richmond County, was easily the most effective single political force in the State. He has proved it again. I would be less than honest if I did not say what I have said before, that while I differ with him widely on some issues, I like him very much and have never been deceived by him, even when I was on the other side.

It may be argued that Talmadge would have won without him. That may be true. But the victory would not have been nearly so complete, nor would it have been organized to come with such an ever increasing tempo.

He has scored what is perhaps, for him personally, his finest victory of revenge. He was double-crossed by Rivers and Arnall in the famous decisions of 1945-46. When political historians come to write the history of this era, they will write more than one chapter on what might have happened had not the rival ambitions of E. D. Rivers and Ellis Arnall led them to make a sacrificial goat of Roy V. Harris. The fact that the goat has butted the political stuffing out of both for at least the time being, can only serve to paraphrase for them the shopworn lines: "Of all sad words of tongue and pen, the saddest are these, it need not have been."

Should Primaries Be Abolished?

Wed 9-8-48

In view of the court decisions preventing the banning of Negroes from voting, the Democratic primary as a medium for electing public officials is now an expensive, useless, and archaic institution and should be abolished.

34C(2)

The only purpose of the primaries was to disenfranchise the Negro and make it certain that only white people had a voice in the actual selection of officeholders. That was why the primary was established. That is why it has been continued as a Southern institution. That is why it always has been called the Democratic white primary. Victory for a candidate in these primaries always has been regarded as tantamount to election. It is tacitly understood that the victor in the primary would have no opposition in the general election.

Atlanta Ga.

But why continue the medium of the primary when Negroes, by order of the courts, can vote in these primaries as well as in general elections?

Primaries are expensive, for one thing. The fees required of the candidates, in order to meet primary expenses, have become so high that many good qualified persons are discouraged from running for office because of the financial burden placed upon them by having to pay a high and sometimes prohibitive entrance fee. The entrenched politician, of course, is often the beneficiary of the primary system because the high entrance fees freezes out the opposition wihch cannot afford to pay the fee and run the risk of losing the election.

Wed 9-8-48

Furthermore, the large number of these primaries which usually are held, from time to time, keeps the voters on the jump going to and from the polls. They get fed up with so many primaries and, consequently, many of them simply do not vote.

Now that the Negro can vote in them, primaries should be combined or eliminated, thus saving money, time, and the necessity of the electorate being subjected to so many unnecessary political campaigns.

Voters Must Favor White Primaries

By NNPA News Service

WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga.—The Democratic Executive Committee of Johnson county disclosed here last week that voters, white and colored, and candidates in the county's March 3 Democratic primary will be required to take an oath to support a white primary and racial segregation, and oppose legislation against discrimination in employment.

City Judge W. C. Brinson, committee chairman, said the following pledge will be presented to prospective voters and candidates:

1. I favor the county-unit system now existing in the state of Georgia.

2. I favor the white primary.

3. I favor preservation of segregation for the races as now exists in Georgia.

Norfolk, Va.

4. I oppose Communism.

5. I oppose any organization that seeks to destroy the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of Georgia.

6. I oppose enactment into law the rules and regulations as promulgated by the Federal Employment Practice Committee.

7. I will support the nominees of this primary in the general election.

Voters must sign the pledge before they will be allowed to cast a ballot, Judge Brinson said, and candidates must sign before they can qualify to run.

In past years, Georgia Democratic executive committees have required only a pledge to support nominees as a requirement for primary voting.

Non-Racial Voter Qualifications

Atlanta Constitution

The people of Georgia, generally speaking, will agree with House Speaker Fred Hand that it is folly to be attempting to draft a white primary law for Georgia in the face of U. S. Supreme Court decisions from which there is no escape.

Jan 17-26-48

Speaker Hand is heartily in favor, however, of the proposal to strengthen the requisites for registration and is inclined to feel that a stringent educational qualification should be applied.

Atlanta Georgia

Once before we have referred to a radio quiz program on which a Philadelphia woman was asked where is the Liberty Bell. She did not know. This is but one of thousands of instances of appalling ignorance to be encountered on these quiz programs, and, we may add, from casual conversation on street corners.

IT WOULD be a solemn mockery to ask this Philadelphia woman to vote on some important amendment to the Federal Constitution when she doesn't even know anything so basic as the location of the place in which the Constitution was framed.

Speaker Hand declared that the problem of strengthening the laws for qualification of voters "must not be attacked from a racial viewpoint." Such procedure would certainly involve us in difficulties. Moreover, ignorance itself is a menace to the welfare of the State of Georgia.

It is proposed that would-be voters shall be required to give an intelligent interpretation of some section of the State or Federal Constitution. This may not be the ideal test that could be applied since the general intelligence of the voter is the thing to be sought. But perhaps this constitutional test is the best we can get and will at least give some indication of the intellectual level of the prospective voter.

THIS TEST should be applied to white and colored people alike. We do not hesitate to say that, in our opinion, there are thousands of white people who now have the right of franchise who are totally incapable of exercising it intelligently, as measured by any fair standard. They are in the same category with the Philadelphia woman. And it is too much to expect that where such ignorance prevails, we can have satisfactory results in elections which pass upon men and measures.

June 12-16-48

We are bound to admit that the final test of any educational requirement is in its administration. Perhaps no law of the kind could be drawn which would not be subject to abuse. But we must build up a public opinion in favor of the strict and impartial administration of the law.

In recent years there have been occasional suggestions that every qualified citizen should be compelled to vote in every election under penalty of a fine of greater or less severity. Nothing could be more absurd. It is highly desirable that as many of our people as possible participate in every election, but the results should be that of an informed public opinion, and not a mere motion of casting a ballot.

Georgians Seek To Cut Negro Vote

Montgomery Advertiser

Sat 12-18-48

ATLANTA, Dec. 17—(AP)—Gov. Herman Talmadge and his legislative leaders came out today with a "white supremacy" program frankly aimed at barring 80 per cent of Georgia Negroes from voting.

Montgomery Ala

The core of the plan is to wipe all present voters' registration lists off the books. Then a complete new state-wide registration would be undertaken with emphasis on "educational qualification."

House Speaker Fred Hand told lawmakers today:

"A good educational qualification will cut out 80 per cent of this ignorant bloc vote in Georgia. I like to think of it that way instead of going into this color angle. . . ."

Hand said the Georgia plan would be similar to the "Boswell Amendment" in Alabama, which requires prospective voters to interpret the Constitution to the satisfaction of registrars.

TALMADGE AHEAD ON EARLY TALLIES

Inconclusive Reports Mostly from Rural Areas

Thurs 9-9-48

(The Associated Press)

Atlanta, Sept. 8.—Scattered returns from 25 precincts in 15 counties 30 minutes after the polls closed tonight showed Herman Talmadge maintaining his lead over M. E. Thompson in the race for governor in today's Democratic primary.

At this time, Talmadge was leading with 26 indicated unit votes and a popular vote of 2223. Gov. Thompson had an indicated unit vote of 12 and a popular vote of 1701.

The reports, mostly from rural areas, remained fragmentary and inconclusive.

Reports drifted in of cross burnings by the Ku Klux Klan, Negro vote purges and attempts to slow down Negro voting.

On the eve of the election huge crosses, the trade mark of the KKK, flamed in three counties and one Negro reported a band of hooded men left a miniature casket on his doorstep.

The Griffin Daily News reported that 558 Negro registrants had been stricken from the vote list on the eve of the primary.

In populous Richmond county, the Augusta Herald charged polling officials in some places were permitting Negroes to vote at the rate of only three every hour.

A Herald reporter said the officials held up the voting by asking foolish questions.

The Fruits Of Hate

34e(2)

Atlanta Daily World

One Negro is reported dead as a result of his determination to vote in the recent Primary election. The dead man is listed as Isaiah Nixon, 31-year-old father of six and a turpentine worker in Montgomery county. Just how many floggings and minor clashes which also may have been the result of Negroes exercising, or attempting to exercise, their constitutional privileges to vote, no one is in position to state. But it is fair to conclude that Nixon's slaying was not the only incident connected with Negroes voting in the primary elections.

Thurs 9-23-48

It is also fair to say that the Negro's death is the logical aftermath of a long and unfortunate campaign of racial incitement, cross burnings, unsupported charges of bloc-voting and the diabolical purge, which spread to incredible lengths over the state. It would be illogical reasoning to anticipate any other result.

Atlanta Ga.

Be that as it may, the important thing now is for law enforcement authorities in Georgia to see that the guilty in this widely publicized crime is brought to justice. We have this as definite proof of the denial of constitutional justice. We have it on the word of the sheriff. We have it on the word of the FBI and all Georgians can be spared the humiliation and criticism which will follow if we prosecute

Ruling in Negro 'Ballot-List' Cases Handed Down by Judge Scarlett

The Constitution

Thur 8-12-48

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 11—Federal Judge Frank Scarlett today made two rulings affecting voting lists involving Negroes in two Georgia Counties—Spalding and Laurens.

In Spalding he ordered the Registrars to show cause why they should not stop purging Negroes from the voting list," and in the Laurens case where a suit had been filed by a group of Negroes against the Registrars and other County officials, the judge ruled the Registrars were in their legal right in holding meetings between October and April 20, leaving the question only of damages to be determined.

In the Spalding case the Registrars were ordered to appear before the court here Aug. 20.

The suit, entered by Atty. Frank Bowers, of Atlanta, charged the vote purge started July 26 when some 1,500 Negroes were summoned to appear before the Board.

All, said the suit, were notified they would be dropped from the voting list for failure to appear and answer questions concerning their qualifications to vote.

As a result, the suit continued, the names of between 500 and 700 Negroes were stricken from the list.

The suit also maintains the summons to appear before the Board were not issued in a legal fashion, and did not permit the Negroes to receive them in time to appear at a specified time.

Named as defendants were R. L. Addleton, T. C. Mann and Gus Anglyn, the Spalding Registrars.

The plaintiffs were listed in the suit as Clifford Caldwell, Leroy Booker and Bernice Boynton.

Regarding the suit filed against the Laurens County Registrars, County Commissioners, Superior Court Judge R. Earl Camp, W. H. Lovett, J. D. Bush and T. A. Lane, of the County Executive Committee, Judge Scarlett ruled that "The Registrars were within their legal rights to hold the meetings between October and April 20. The only question left to be determined is the question of damages, if any, which can be tried at the next regular term of court at Dublin on the third Monday in January, 1949."

It was alleged that the Board summoned about 1,900 Negro citizens before it and one question was whether the Board could be regularly assembled before April 20.

Damage amounting to several hundred thousand dollars was asked in the suit.

Dan Duke, Atlanta, represents the plaintiffs and the defendants are represented by Russell M. Daley, Carl K. Nelson, Dublin; Charles Bloch and C. Claxton Jones, of Macon.

Georgia Negro, 99, Gets Lifetime Vote

Wed 7-28-48

GRIFFIN, Ga., July 27 (AP).—One of Griffin's Negro citizens today was given the right to vote without further examination of his qualifications "as long as you live."

Spalding County officials, purging the voting lists, made the exception for Charles C. Cain, who has been voting for many years. Mr. Cain is ninety-nine years old.

Georgia Judges Would Abolish Primary System

By NNPA NEWS SERVICE

ATLANTA, Ga.—Bowing to decisions of federal courts outlawing the white primary, Judge Mallory C. Atkinson, of Bibb County Superior Court, and Judge Douglas Feagin, of Macon's City Court, advocate the abolition of primaries in Georgia.

They point out that the purpose for which primaries were originally designed in Georgia — to disfranchise colored people—has been declared unconstitutional.

Commenting on the question posed by these two jurists — why bother with holding party primaries?—The Atlanta Constitution last Wednesday, under the caption, "Why Hold Two Elections?" said:

"Since the Supreme Court has ruled that Negroes must be allowed to vote in primaries, and since Georgie operates under the one-party system, voting in the primary and in the general election has become a duplication of both effort and expense."

Judge Atkinson suggested the elimination of primaries entirely. He proposed that the Democratic Executive Committee certify to the Secretary of State all the candidates, regardless of how many offer for the same office, in the general election and "thus have that election serve the same purpose as the primary."

The Constitution is on record as favoring a two party-system in Georgia. "If and when Republicans gain sufficient strength to make this dream a reality, primaries would be necessary, they being the most democratic means of selection of candidates," the Constitution said.

"Until then, however, 'Why primaries?' is a valid question which more and more Georgians will be asking."

Primary Sets All-Time Vote Record

The Constitution

More voters cast their ballots in the Sept. 8 primary this year than at any time in Georgia's history, according to official consolidated returns released yesterday by State Democratic Party officials.

Figures showed 703,048 votes were cast this year as opposed to 691,881 in 1946, the previous record year. Only 691,239 votes were counted this year in the Governor's race, however, many votes reportedly being thrown out because ballots were improperly marked.

Herman Talmadge swept the Governor's race by carrying 130 counties with a total unit vote of 312. The only other candidate receiving any unit votes was Acting Gov. Thompson with 98 unit votes in 29 counties.

The popular vote was Talmadge, 357,865; Thompson, 312,035; Hoke O'Kelley, 13,226; Hoke Willis, 4,963, and Joe Rabun, 3,150.

S. Marvin Griffin carried the Lieutenant Governor's race by taking 147 Counties with 370 unit votes. Henry Persons, the only other candidate to receive unit votes, took 12 counties with 40 unit votes.

The popular vote was Griffin, 331,520; Persons, 206,384; Dr. L. N. Huff, 89,611, and Belmont Dennis, 47,812.

In the closest of the state-wide elections, Judge J. H. Hawkins carried 74½ Counties to 84½ for his opponent, Joe Quillian, in the race for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Hawkins won the nomination because of the higher unit vote of Counties he carried, however, with a unit vote of 217 to 193. The popular vote was 338,484 for Hawkins to 301,532 for Quillian.

In contested races for Representative to the United States Congress, the election report showed the following results:

Second District: E. E. Cox, 13 counties, 36 unit votes, 36,530 popular votes; J. N. Peacock, Jr., one county, four unit votes, 15,896 popular votes.

Fifth District: James C. Davis, three counties, 14 unit votes, 54,261 popular votes; W. C. Lowe, no counties or unit votes, 6,959 popular votes, and Helen Douglas Mankin, no counties or unit votes, 37,610 popular votes.

Eighth District: W. M. Don Wheeler, 12 counties, 30 unit votes, 29,598 popular votes; Country Johnson, six counties, 12 unit votes, 22,342 popular votes, and John S. Gibson, two counties, six unit votes, 16,578 popular votes.

In two contested Public Service Commission races, the results were as follows:

Sun 9-19-48

Race to succeed Perry T. Knight: Knight, 86 counties, 242 unit votes, 216,737 popular votes; Clark Gaines, 59 counties, 138 unit votes, 153,489 popular votes; Glenn Allen, 11 counties, 22 unit votes, 116,840 popular votes; A. J. Hartley, 2 counties, 4 unit votes, 84,169 popular votes, and John D. Elliott, 1 county, 4 unit votes, 68,046 popular votes.

Race to succeed James A. Perry: Perry, 129½ counties, 339 unit votes, 341,568 popular votes; Royal K. Mann, 27½ counties, 65 unit votes, 189,158 popular votes, and Hugh Striplin, 2 counties, 6 unit votes, 106,831 popular votes.

In the contested race for Court of Appeals, incumbent Judge J. M. C. Townsend received 141 counties, 66 unit votes, 389,103 popular votes. His opponent, Augustus Roan, received 18 counties, 44 unit votes and 240,573 popular votes.

Other statewide candidates nominated without opposition were W. Y. Atkinson, Supreme Court Justice; Jule Felton, Court of Appeals; Richard B. Russell. United States Senator. Congressional representatives nominated without opposition were: First District, Prince H. Preston; Third District, Stephen Pace; Fourth District, A. Sidney Camp; Sixth District, Carl Vinson; Seventh District, Henderson Lanham; Ninth District, John S. Wood, and Tenth District, Paul Brown.

Superior Court judges and solicitors nominated against opposition were:

Alapaha Circuit: Judge, Edwin R. Smith; Solicitor, Edward Parish.

Atlanta Circuit: Solicitor, Paul Webb.

Sun 9-19-48

Blue Ridge Circuit: Judge, Howell Brooke.

Coweta Circuit: Solicitor, Wright Lipford.

Dublin Circuit: Judge, J. Roy Rowland; Solicitor, W. W. Larsen.

Flint Circuit: Judge, Frank B. Willingham; Solicitor, Ben B. Garland.

Griffin Circuit: Solicitor, James J. Flynt, Jr.

Northern Circuit: Judge, Clark Edwards, Jr.

Ogeechee Circuit: Judge, J. L. Renfroe; Solicitor, Walton Usher.

Rome Circuit: Solicitor, W. T. Maddox.

White Primary Pledge Dropped by Ga. County

Sat 2-28-48

WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga.—(NNPA)—A storm of protest from citizens has caused the Johnson county Democratic executive committee to cancel plans to require voters in the March 8 primary to pledge their support to a white primary and racial segregation.

Baltimore Md

Since the proposal was not challenged, there had been speculations that a similar pledge might be required of State voters if the Herman Talmadge faction should win pending litigation over control of the State Democratic organization.

H. T. Hicks, secretary of the Johnson county committee, announced last week that protests from the citizens were so great the plan was abandoned without a formal committee meeting.

U. S. Probe Feared

W. C. Brinson, county chairman got in touch with committee members and obtained their permission for the change, Hicks said. Hicks had opposed the scheme from the beginning.

Reliable reports said that Federal authorities had become interested in the "pledge" proposal and might be making a quiet investigation.

Opponents of the "white primary" charged that if the Johnson county pattern had been successful, it would have been tried throughout the State as a means of "purging" colored voters from Democratic primaries.

Talmadge Method Recalled

In 1946 when the late Eugene Talmadge won the governorship a fourth time on a "white supremacy" platform, a different method was used.

Literacy tests given colored applicants for registration in several counties included such questions as: "Who was the 16th President?" "Define a republic," and "What agency controls the rivers of your State?"

Defeated Governor Asks Early Inauguration—Speculation on States' Rights Ticket Backing

Thu 9-10-48

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 9—Opponents of President Truman's civil rights program acclaimed today the sweeping victory of Herman Talmadge in yesterday's gubernatorial campaign, and there was immediate speculation whether he would call for support of the States Rights Presidential ticket. The 35-year-old son of the late Eugene Talmadge and, like his father, champion of white supremacy, dodged that issue, however, asserting that "this decision must be made by the state Democratic executive committee."

New York 9-9

Mr. Talmadge campaigned on a platform opposing the President's program. Though pledged to "oppose to the fullest" any efforts to eliminate segregation within the state, he has consistently said that the manner in which this state's electoral votes are to be cast "depends upon developments between now and November."

Meanwhile the Talmadge triumph reached landslide proportions in unofficial returns from 157 of the state's 159 counties. The incompleted tally gave him 310 county unit votes to ninety-eight for Gov. M. E. Thompson. In 1,399 of 1,763 precincts he led in popular vote, 287,776 to 258,104. Nomination is equivalent to election under Georgia's one-party system.

Fri 9-10-48

In a statement conceding his defeat, Governor Thompson said he would seek to have Mr. Talmadge installed a few days after the general election, Nov. 2. Incoming Governors customarily take office when the new Legislature convenes in January but Mr. Thompson's offer was prompted by the fact that this election was to fill the unexpired four-year term of Eugene Talmadge.

Replying to a request by Governor Thompson as to whether the earlier inauguration would be legal, Attorney General Eugene Cook ruled that the Legislature, at the Governor's call, could legally convene in extra session, canvass the vote and install Mr. Talmadge.

In other primary contests, United States Senator Richard B. Russell was renominated without contest and three of the ten Representatives who faced opposition were victors. They were James C. Davis, Eugene E. Cox and W. M. Wheeler.

Attempts To Intimidate Voters Told

World, Atlanta Ga.

34e(2)

Sat 9-17-48

ATLANTA, Georgia — (SNS) — Georgians voted in one of the most hotly contested Democratic primary elections in its history Wednesday, September 8, while several sections of the state reported attempts to intimidate or delay Negro voters. Despite the intimidation efforts, voting by Negroes was heavy along with the white balloting in almost every one of the state's 159 counties.

The Ku Klux Klan, outlawed by the state but operating as an association, reportedly burned fiery crosses election eve night in Valdosta, the home of Governor M. E. Thompson, in the northern part of Bulloch county of which Statesboro is the county seat, and in Houston county near a church and store owned by Negroes. In Bulloch, it was reported that hooded Klansmen placed a small casket on the front porch of the home of a Negro citizen located near a church.

VALDOSTA VOTE 9-17-48

Reportedly few Negroes voted at Valdosta, home of the Acting Governor, while there was a heavy white vote. It was assumed that the KKK cross-burning had its effect. Negro voting was heavy throughout the Second and Eighth Districts with the exception of Valdosta and Lowndes County.

In the hometown of Roy Harris Augusta stalwart, of candidate Herman Talmadge, a delaying move was reported. The Augusta Herald charged that election officials of Augusta were allowing Negroes to vote only at the rate of about three an hour by asking foolish questions. A reporter for the Herald said that the long line of Negroes at one voting place did not move an inch in 15 minutes while he watched. He said that a Cracker party election official commented:

9-17-48 Fri

"I believe we can kill at least 20 minutes per Negro. That will allow only three to vote each hour. There are going to be plenty of Negroes standing in line when the polls close at 6 P. M."

9-17-48

Some 558 Negro registrants were reported stricken from the Spaulding county registration list Tuesday afternoon, one day prior to the election. The Griffin Daily News made the charge, saying that the registrars did not turn the registration list over to election officials until late Tuesday afternoon, so the strikes did not become known until then. A suit has been filed in federal court at Brunswick to prevent the purge of Negro registrants in Spalding county. The Spalding registrants conferred with Judge Frank Scarlett and promised "to abide by the law," so the case was not pushed. The judge said he would keep the action on file in the event another complaint was made.

No Law to Back "All-White" Primary; To Welcome Negroes

Black Dispatch

34e(2)

MANCHESTER, Ga. — (ANP) —Failure of the legislature to get a "white primary" bill past Gov. M. E. Thompson, and the subsequent ruling that such a law would be unconstitutional, has caused an about-face in primary activities within the state. Saturday, Democratic leaders announced that they would call a convention July 2 to open the states election to Negroes.

Sat 4-3-48

Oklahoma City

Okla

The call was issued by James S. Peters, chairman of the Herman Talmadge-controlled Demotion in the hands of the Democratic party.

Party officials contend that this reduces the primary to the status of the election by a county club or any other private organization. But both district and circuit courts have taken opposite views, basing their decision on the intent of the state actions.

There are other states which preceded Alabama in freezing out Negro registrations. In Mississippi, prospective voters are required to "read or interpret" the constitution, to the satisfaction of circuit court clerks. The state also has a proposed constitutional amendment to change the language to "read and interpret."

Louisiana has election laws under which a registration official may require a voter to "interpret satisfactorily" the constitution. The "South Carolina" plan was sought for Georgia by the late Eugene Talmadge. However, since the district and circuit courts have declared the Alabama plan constitutional, Herman Talmadge has been advocating the same plan for Georgia.

Continued Drive for Ballot Rights Essential, NAACP Branch Heads Told

Baltimore Md

Sat 12-11-48

ATLANTA, Ga.—D. V. Carter, Montgomery County NAACP branch president, who was brutally assaulted for carrying voters to the polls in his automobile for the Georgia Democratic primary election, last week appealed to all NAACP branches for assistance in guaranteeing colored citizens in the South the right to vote without fear or intimidation.

"If we are to secure strong branch presidents to carry forward our program, they must know that the whole Association backs them up as they fight in the 'front line' trenches in places like Georgia," stated Carter in a letter addressed to all NAACP branch presidents.

He told of his branch's intensive two-year drive in a rural Georgia County to get colored citizens to exercise their constitutional right to vote, and of his personal activity in driving many of these voters to the polls on the day of the election.

Fled to Atlanta

Sat 12-11-48

"But there are white men in Georgia who do not know the meaning of the Constitution of the United States," Carter wrote. "It was a group of these men who attacked me on my way home from the polls on Sept. 8, beating me with iron bars until I was bloody, breaking my wrist, and ordering me at the point of a gun to go home and not to be caught hauling any more people to the polls."

The 41-year-old Carter fled to Atlanta to seek refuge after the assault, but his wife and ten children have had to remain in Montgomery County despite fear for their safety, because there is no place for them to go.

Identifies Assailants

Carter told NAACP attorneys in Atlanta that one of his assailants, Johnnie Johnson, was one of the two brothers recently acquitted in the slaying of Isaac Nixon, 28-year-old Montgomery County man who had voted in the same primary election despite warnings from whites.

Sat 12-11-48

Another of the men who attacked Carter was Thomas Wilkes, a brother-in-law to the Johnsons.

Both of these men have notorious records in the county for assaults on colored.

Montgomery County is adjacent to Toombs County where Robert Mallard, prosperous salesman, was recently lynched, allegedly because of political activity.

Georgia's New Scheme

34e(2)

Atlanta Daily World
Wed. 12-22-48
Atlanta Georgia

The Georgia General Assembly, when it convenes next January, plans to accomplish what the discredited White Primary failed to achieve: the disfranchisement of Negroes of the state in such an effective manner that those few who are permitted to vote will be so small that they will be easily controlled. That is the obvious and expressed intent, not only of Mr. Talmadge, who made it a part of his campaign promise, but likewise of most of those who compose the present legislature.

To say that Negroes will resist this rank discrimination with every ounce of their strength, should occasion no surprise from any intelligent person, even though prejudice and hate may becloud his sense of decency and fairplay. Because the guarantees of the free exercise of the right to full citizenship within the United States Constitution remain always the refuge of all who are willing to fight long enough to establish those rights.

Wed 12-22-48

Like all or most of her other outmoded rules on the stature books, the question of educational tests for voters never entered the thinking of those having to do with the making of laws until the Negro won the right to participate in the Primary elections. Now there is a fever-heat desire on the part of some of our editors and large segment of whites unfriendly to the advance of the Negro toward first class citizenship, to have strict laws setting up educational tests which may be used to hide behind and thus reduce the Negro vote to a neglible size, and thus perpetuate white supremacy from the courthouse down through the smallest and largest community, in job opportunities, in pay, in public appropriations, and in the schools.

The march toward human freedom is so swift and certain that it will only be a temporary expedient in Georgia to stem the tide against the Negro. The day of the Ku Klux Klan and the reign of the race-baiters are clearly numbered. History has already sealed their doom. But it will require some time yet to uproot their influence in places where, for over half a century, they have flourished without opposition or notice from either the outside world or the Negroes who were their chief victims.

So it is in Geogia. The General Assembly may meet and design all sorts of schemes to nullify the vote strength of Negroes but it can only be a temporary measure. The determination and intelligence of Negroes and their added confidence in the efficacy of court action against arbitrary rules, are weapons at their command. All of these and other weapons will be brought to bear upon the plot to stop the Negro. Wed. 12-22-48

Twiggs Negroes Seek Equal Chance To Become Voters

Sat. 8-14-48

Sat. 8-14-48

BRUNSWICK, Ga. — (SNS) — Without a fight and with hands down, the Twiggs County Board of Registrars Friday agreed to follow the orders of Federal Judge Frank Scarlett and begin at once the registration of Negroes, without further discrimination by reason of race and color.

Under the temporary and voluntary agreement, at a prehearing presided over by Judge Scarlett, the case was left open, pending the outcome of the agreement entered into by the registrars to desist from the practice.

The suit against the registrars was filed by attorneys on behalf of Edward Glover, David A. Glover, Matthew Glover, Sr., and Matthew Glover, Jr.,

Defendants were listed as C. S. Kitchens, G. F. Benjamin and D. Y. Califf, members on the Twiggs County Board of Registrars. The registrars explained to Judge Scarlett that they thought that they had been adhering to the law in the matter of registration of Negroes and in purging the current registration lists.

With consent of counsel, Judge Scarlett directed that the registrars proceed without discrimination because of race and said the case would be left open on the records in the event of further complaint. Sat. 8-14-48

The Glovers brought suit against the registrars on behalf of themselves and approximately 900 other Negroes similarly situated Attorneys for the plaintiffs were T. W. Johnson and Virgil Shepard, both of Macon.

The registrars were represented by R. A. Harrison, Charles J. Bloch, C. Baxter Jones and Denmark Groover.

34e(2)

Judge Scarlett has before him, a number of other suits involving the registrars in other Georgia communiites for refusing to register Negroes or for purging them after they have registered. Two of these, one at Griffin, involving the registrars of Spalding county, and th other at Albany, charging unfairness to the registrars of Dougherty county, will be heard next Friday, August 20.

Georgia's Christmas Present To Democracy

FRED HAND, speaker of the Georgia House of Representatives, speaking for himself and his colleagues, and for Governor TALMADGE, their leader, has announced that, immediately, the Georgia legislature will enact a new law to disfranchise 80 per cent of its Negro voters.

The law will abolish present registration lists and require all voters to re-register under an "educational clause." The prospective voter must read "and interpret" the state constitution "to the satisfaction of the registrar."

The catch in the law is that it will look, on the statute books, as if it applied to all citizens, white and Negro. It is therefore constitutional.

In enforcing the law, the registrar may register a white illiterate with impunity. At the same time the same registrar may refuse to register a Negro college graduate, who may also be a graduate of a law school. He may do this, also, with impunity.

There is no way to stop the Georgians from going through with their plan. Later on, citizens will find a way to take the law to the United States Supreme Court, and it may be knocked out. TALMADGE's own political advisers concede this point.

Sat 12-25-48

What interests the average person with a sense of decency is the callousness with which Mr. HAND and his colleagues announce their plan to the world.

They boast that because Georgia public schools for Negroes have been and still are so inferior the law will disfranchise 80 per cent of Negro adults, who, they feel, have only a third grade education. In Mr. HAND's own words: "Only 20 per cent of Georgia Negroes have completed the sixth grade in a notoriously bad school system that is equal to about the third grade in white schools."

It will be easy, therefore, to disfranchise them. The same legislators that made the school system what it is, now rejoice that they have kept 80 per cent of half the population in their state illiterate.

Sat 12-25-48

Their lack of wisdom, as well as their lack of vision, is reflected in the relatively low state of civilization found in Georgia.

In a few years their work will be undone. Selfish, ignorant, arrogant men cannot stop the march of progress —even in Georgia.

75% Of Laurens Voters Purged

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Jun. 5-9-48

34e(2)

DUBLIN, Ga.—(SNS)—Seventy-five percent or 1,833 qualified Negroes of the 2,477 registered to vote in Laurens county have been purged by action of a three-man registration board said to be linked with staunch Talmadge supporters,

Beginning in last October, the wholesale purging of Negro registrants included church officers, landowners and even college graduates has continued. Most of those purged from the lists had been registered more than three years and had voted in 1946.

The purge was said to have moved at full speed in January. Chairman of the board E. S. Baldwin, related that one district was worked at a time.

SENT NOTICES

Registrars Baldwin and Marvin W. Watson said in considering the registration lists for any district their first act was to agree that the voting rights of those they "knew" would not be questioned. All others were sent notices that they were to appear for a hearing at a specific date and hour for determining the voter's qualification.

The notice read:

"You may appear, if you so desire, and be examined as to your qualifications as provided by law."

According to Chairman Baldwin only about 30 Negroes reported for the scheduled hearings and of this number about five were purged.

DIFFERENCE SHOWN

Whites sent notices were not questioned when they appeared for hearing. On the other hand, those who did not appear, were not purged unless known to be dead.

And yet, all Negroes failing to appear were automatically stricken from the voters' list.

Jun 5-9-48

Those Negroes purged from the lists will have no way of knowing their ineligibility until the list is filed with the court clerk next week or perhaps until they go to the polls on June 2, attempting to cast a ballot.

In linking the purge with Talmadge supporters, it was pointed out that political control of the county is in the hands of Representative W. Herschel Lovett, a Talmadge supporter whose followers include the county commissioners and the registrars.

The third registrar is Ancil Chavous.

OPPOSE REPRESENTATIVE

Negroes in the county are generally known to oppose Representative Lovett.

The three registrars were appointed by Superior Court Judge R. Earl Camp in October.

Being advised in October by the county attorney that they could not meet until April 20, 1948, the purging was temporarily halted.

Judge Camp, however, advised the registrars they could meet any time after the first of the year. He justified the registrars' action after Jan. 1, terming it an "emergency" and saying the old registration list was lost.

It was revealed that the list was not lost but in possession of the court clerk while another copy was held by the tax collector.

'News' Backs Governor's View

1-16-48 34e(2)
Memphis World

ATLANTA, Georgia — (SNS) — The Macon News, one of the strongest Georgia daily newspapers has come out editorially for the re-election of Governor M. E. Thompson. At the same time, the News commends the state chief executive for his stand against proposed subterfuges to prevent Negroes from voting in Georgia elections. Candidate Herman Talmadge had proposed that illiterate whites ought to be allowed to vote, but that illiterate blacks should be denied the ballot.

Says the January 12 Macon News editorial: Memphis, Tenn

"Governor Thompson is to be commended for his forthright declaration that he will not stand for the perpetration of any fraud to deprive the Negro of his constitutional right to vote in this state. The Governor's statement is worth direct quotation. He said: "A constructive plan for adjusting our primary elections to the mandates of the courts and the spirit of the Constitution must be worked out .... I will never be a party, by use of trickery, subterfuge or otherwise, to any attempt to evade the spirit or the letter of the law." Fri. 1-16-48

"These are not the weasel words of a politician, conscious of his duty, but lacking the character and the courage to do it. They have the ring of sincerity of belief and the promise of determination in action. And they bespeak an honest desire to observe the Constitution and an intent to obey the laws.........

"..Governor Thompson is entitled to such praise for this anouncement because the intelligence that prompted it and the courage with which it was done, have been all too rare in Georgia politics. So this newspaper commends the Governor for his action and wishes him well in his campaign for re-election."

Legislators Scheme To Nullify Ga. Negro Voting

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta Ga.

34e(2)

Georgia legislators are studying three schemes to limit Negro registration and voting. These measures will be presented to the 1949 General Assembly. The total effect of the proposed legislation would be to revive the "white primary" through devices such as are utilized by Alabama's infamous Boswell Amendment.

The core of the legislation is House Bill 96 that died in the Georgia Senate in 1947. The subterfuge calls for voter qualifications which would imperil the franchise all Georgians regardless of race.

Jun 12/19-48

The three bills being considered would:

1. Require both good character and educational qualifications and that every voter be required to register again, with qualifications tests being waived for those persons who have regularly voted prior to 1938.

Jun-12-19-48

2. Another plan would compel any voter to re-register every two years, and financing of the registration would be aided by a $1 registration fee.
3. The registrars of the various counties would have the discretion of passing upon the qualifications of would-be-voters.

ASSAILED BY LEADERS

These patterns or voting requirements have been assailed by Negro leaders who contend that they would have the same effect as the Boswell Amendment in Alabama which requires "voters to understand and explain the U. S. Constitution to the satisfaction of the registrars." The Amendment has almost totally disfranchised Negro voters in Alabama.

Speaker of the House Fred Hand, of the Georgia Legislature, in pressing for the legislation openly admits that the proposed measures are aimed at nullifying Negro voting.

Hand alleges tht approximately 1,000,000 Negroes, or 30 per cent, have gone past the sixth grade in a "notoriously poor school system."

34e(2)

Jun-12-19-48

Institution of an educational or literacy test here in Ga. would try and circumvent the U. S. Supreme Court which has ruled that Negroes are entitled to vote in primaries.

This enfranchisement ruling has been strengthened by U. S. Judge J. Waites Waring in the South Carolina Vote Case.

CHALLENGE BOSWELL ACT

Negroes in Alabama have a dozen test cases pending in Birmingham, Montgomery, and Mobile in which the constitutionality of the Boswell Amendment is challenged.

If such a measure is passed in Georgia, it would be immediately attacked in state and federal courts as a subterfuge to "reinstitute" the white primary, leaders point out.

Herman E. Talmadge campaigned on an anti-Negro and anti-bloc voting issue. He promised, if elected, to stop "bloc voting" by passing restrictive legislation which would make the ballot "as white as possible" without defying the Supreme Court.

Jun-12-19-48

Negro leaders ha[illegible]ted the proposed legislation as designed to limit N[illegible]ting, while permitting ignorant whites the full bene[illegible] of the ballot.

Georgia Voters Terrorized

[illegible]

Eight hundred and fourteen Negroes were registered to vote in Johnson County, Georgia, when the election was held last week, but only one Negro arrived at the polling place, and he hurriedly left for home after learning what had happened the night before. When questioned about this sudden shunning of the polling places, Judge W. C. Brinson, of Wrightsville, with total disregard for the facts, said:

"The Negroes are just not interested in county affairs."

Now this hypocritical judge, whose marble-hearted conscience permitted him to utter such falsehood, knew full well that the infamous order of the Ku Klux Klan had held a demonstration on the courthouse lawn the evening before the election, and that the grand dragon of this un-American organization had openly, and with his face exposed to public view, shouted to his hearers that "blood would flow in the streets" if Negroes sought to cast their ballots along with white men on election day.

Negroes react to terrorism just as men and women of other races. Quite recently Legionaires appeared in a white home in California, where loyal citizens were discussing political questions, and ordered them to disperse. According to news stories regarding this sordid and criminal violation of freedom of assembly, several of the women in the meeting suffered from nervous shock, from which they have not entirely recovered. For the Klan to parade openly in Wrightsville, and to announce publicly that force and violence would be visited upon Negroes who had the intestinal fortitude to vote, was notice to all informed blacks that the Klan was in connivance with existing government, and that there was no recourse or help to which they could resort from such an unholy alliance.

A frightful condition exists, and organized society has gone to the bow-wows when integrity and virtue take flight. Justice is a kingdom's strength. The Negroes of Wrightville knew on election morning that corruption and evil were present at the polling places and that the klan and local government were one.

Thoughtless white people who guffaw and laugh at such wanton denial of civil liberties, apparently overlook the fact that in the end poor white people lose just as much or more down in Dixie as the blacks, through fascist practices such as this. Millions of whites, condemned to low wage scales because the black peon is his competitor, suffer from malnutrition, illiteracy, poor housing and disease in the same identical manner as the blacks. The basic design down South is to keep the two labor groups separated while both are exploited. In fact, the Ku Klux Klan is financed and kept alive in Georgia by carpetbagger industrialists, who obvious attempt is to divide and rule.

That lawlessness and violence once unleashed knows no color was aptly shown last week when the Ku Klux Klan, with its insatiable desire to rule or ruin, down at Columbus, Ga., seized two reputable white newspaper men, forcibly poured unconcienable amounts of whisky down their throats, and after further doping these two members of the Fourth Estate, left them stupefied to be arrested as common drunks. If the newsmen had been encased in black hides they probably would have been found shot, but the fact that white men were tortured in this atrocious manner indicates the pattern of viciousness and vileness to which invisible government will stoop as soon as government succumbs to Klan dictation and does not penalize them for brutalizing white men. By its outrageous mistreatment of these two reporters, the Klan gives notice the day will come in America when there is no freedom of the press. Freedom will in such an hour have taken flight and fascism will control America.

What do you suppose was the purpose of the Klan in buring a fiery cross the night before an election in Wrightsville, Georgia? What was the meaning behind the threat of blood-letting if the Negro voted the following morning? Everyone knows that such frightful acts express open rebellion against the law and the constitution. It means that Negroes in the land of the free and the home of the brave do not have liberty to use the ballot, and do not have freedom from fear. This is the infernal paternalism patriotic, loyal citizens of this nation are asked to recognize as for their best interests. Our "best friends" advise Negroes that their "best interests" lie apart from the ballot box on election morning.

For Voter-Qualification Laws

Atlanta Constitution

An intelligent and informed electorate being the basis of a working democracy, Georgia needs more stringent vote-qualification laws.

Revision of the qualifications for voting came in for a good deal of discussion at last week's pre-session conferences of Legislators. That was as it should have been. The Constitution repeatedly has called attention to the need for more adequate safeguards in this respect and we hope the General Assembly will not postpone action beyond the January session.

Mon 12-20-48

There is, properly, a great deal of concern over the proposals at last week's caucuses to abolish all present voting lists and require complete new registration. If such a procedure is adopted every precaution must be taken to insure that re-registration will be undertaken in a nonpartisan manner. While there may be merit to the argument that re-registration would result in fewer qualified voters, some States successfully follow a plan of requiring re-registration at periodic intervals. The theory here would seem to be that if the eligible voter is sufficiently interested he will go to the trouble to register, and if he is not that interested it is better that he not vote anyway.

Atlanta Georgia

All who can see will agree with House Speaker Fred Hand that the so-called white primary proposal is dead. In the face of numerous Supreme Court decisions upsetting similar laws in other Southern States, it would be foolish for the Legislature to waste time on such a measure.

Mon 12-20-48

We also think Speaker Hand summed up the situation admirably when he declared the problem of strengthening voter qualification laws must not be attacked from a racial viewpoint. No one can object to the State's exercising its legal right to insure that those who go to the polls are capable of understanding and interpreting the issues involved. But any attempt to apply qualifications to one group, leaving the other free of restrictions, is to give official sanction to discrimination which, as we have seen, will not be tolerated by the Federal Courts.

Georgia Plans Test to Bar 80% Of Negro Voters

New York Herald Tribune

Educational Qualification To Be Used; Talmadge Aid Says It Will 'Hold Water'

Sat 12-18-48

New York N.Y.

ATLANTA, Dec. 17 (AP).—Governor Herman Talmadge and his legislative leaders came out today with a "white supremacy" program frankly aimed at barring 80 per cent of Georgia Negroes from voting.

Hardly a ripply of opposition was apparent as the plan was outlined at an informal conference of seventy-five legislators. The program is being drafted for a regular meeting of the Georgia General Assembly Jan. 10.

The core of the plan is to wipe all present voters' registration lists off the books. Then a complete new state-wide registration would be undertaken with emphasis on "educational qualification" of voters.

"Ignorant Bloc"

House Speaker Fred Hand, who will steer the measure in the Legislature for Governor Talmadge told lawmakers today: "A good educational qualification will cut out 80 per cent of this ignorant bloc vote in Georgia. I like to think of it that way instead of going into this color angle. Under this plan it will no longer be a menace. It will fix things where we can handle it."

Mr. Hand reminded the Assemblymen that forty-six Georgia counties have more Negroes than whites, and Negroes form 25 per cent of the population in 114 of the state's 159 counties.

"You might not think 25 per cent is so bad," he said, "but look at the voting returns and see how much you won by."

Mr. Hand said the Georgia plan would be similar to the "Boswell Amendment" in Alabama, which requires prospective voters to interpret the Constitution to the satisfaction of registrars. Alabama political leaders said it was aimed at Negro voting.

Say It Will "Hold Water"

Mr. Hand assured the group the Georgia plan would "hold water"—be constitutional.

During Mr. Talmadge's campaign last summer he often shouted, "If we can't have an all-white primary in Georgia, then we want one just as white as we can get it."

Sat 12-18-48

Speaker Hand said he based his estimate that 80 per cent of Negroes would be barred from polls on educators statistics. "Only 20 per cent of Georgia Negroes have passed the sixth grade in a notoriously bad school system," he said. "That is equal to about the third grade in white schools."

Mr. Hand said bloc voting by such an uneducated group was "a serious problem. They are led to the polls like sheep and told how to vote. They don't know what they are doing."

He said he hoped to improve Negro educational standards so more Negroes would become qualified to vote in the future.

Prejudice Is Betrayed As a Demagogue's Device

34e(2) Ala. The Courier Journal

Louisville, Ky. Wed. 1-7-48

NEVER has Negro-baiting been shown up as sheer political depravity more clearly than in HERMAN TALMADGE's new proposal to keep Georgia's ballot lily-white. Old GENE's son is a bright young man, and doubtless sees the trend of the times as well as anybody else. But he knows when he has a vote-catcher, and he is making the most of the knowledge.

It is now as plain as day that Federal courts will throw out, as fast as the points are raised, any and all devices of the white supremacy boys to keep Negroes from voting. The rule has been made. The death blow has been laid upon the white primary and through it upon all laws which would restrict the suffrage. These have been properly described as subterfuges to evade constitutional guarantees. And in proposing for Georgia an educational test for voters, TALMADGE merely seizes upon another subterfuge. The Courier Journal Louisville, Ky

TALMADGE proposes a law to make would-be voters answer "satisfactorily" certain questions propounded by a group of registrars. This is an obvious dodge. It is the principle of Alabama's iniquitous "BOSWELL Amendment." No matter how highly educated a Negro may be (or anybody else whom the local machine would keep from voting), or how profound his statement, the registrars can simply say the answers are not satisfactory. And the younger TALMADGE not only proposes the law, but says in a quaintly dictatorial manner of announcing a sure thing, that the law will be passed. Wed 1-7-48

The point is that TALMADGE is running for Governor of Georgia, and the primary election is only about six months off. Thus his proposal is betrayed as campaign thunder. It is the old game of playing to local prejudice to gain an immediate advantage. The law cannot be passed until after the election. Indeed, it may never be passed. And if it were passed, it is almost certain to be invalidated, as the un-American thing it is, by the Supreme Court. TALMADGE's own words, confessing that the thing is aimed at keeping Negroes from voting, is the best evidence of undemocratic intent that any court could ask. The Courier Journal Wed 1-7-48

However, the purpose will then have been served. TALMADGE, being his father's son, knows the incendiary nature of the issue he has raised. He will, he fancies, have won, and the race issue will not have been the least of the factors of victory. But the secret is out. This is why demagogues and well-schooled sons of demagogues keep the issue alive.

More Voter-Qualification Laws Seen By White Rule Exponent

ATLANTA, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Voter-qualification laws, administered so as to bar Negroes from elections in the South, may become the last barricade of "white supremacy" advocates.

Georgia's leading exponent of white rule, Herman Talmadge, acknowledged Monday that this would be attempted. He said it was the only avenue left open by a recent ruling of the U. S. Circuit Court of Apeals, invalidating the South Carolina "white supremacy." 8-6-48

Talmadge, widely regarded as a spokesman for white rule, said in an interview that voter-qualification laws probably would be enacted with intent to exclude most Negroes from franchise. He said he thought this was proper, even though registrars would bar Negroes while allowing illiterate whites to vote.

Alabama already has a voter-qualification law. It is the so-called Boswell Amendment to the State Constitution. At the time of its adoption in 1946, white leaders proclaimed openly that it was aimed at discouraging Negro voting. 34e(2)

The Boswell Amendment requires Alabama voters to be able to "understand and explain" any section of the Federal Constitution to the satisfaction of local registrars. A court challenge is being prepared by Negro leaders.

A. T. Walden, an attorney for the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, commented: "The Boswell Amendment, and anything like it, is nothing more nor less than a subterfuge equivalent to the white primary. We are confident it will receive the same judicial condemnation."

South Carolina sought to bar Negroes from its elections by divorcing primaries from state control. It made the Democratic Party an exclusive club, open to white persons only. The U. S. Court of Appeals ruled this unconstitutional, saying:

"No election machinery can be upheld if its purpose or effect is to deny to the Negro, on account of his race or color, an effective voice in the government of his country or the state or community wherein he lives." 34e(2)

The late Eugene Talmadge, red-gallussed advocate of white rule and father of Herman Talmadge, urged adoption of the South Carolina plan in Georgia. During an abortive bid for the governorship, following his father's death, Herman obtained legislative enactment of a "white primary" bill on that pattern. It was vetoed by Gov. M. E. Thompson after the State Supreme Court ousted Talmadge.

Talmadge forecast Monday that the issue of white supremacy would be intensified by the Federal Court decision. He expressed traditional southern view that the ruling "interfered" in state affairs.

"I believe," said Talmadge, "that 85 or 90 per cent of our white citizens should vote. There are many good white people in our country counties who can't read or write. But they own their own farms and they do their own thinking.

"I don't think more than 10 or 15 per cent of our Negroes should vote."

HERMAN TALMADGE

Talmadge's Latest

The News Birmingham, Ala.

Mon 1-12-48

During the campaign to incorporate the Boswell amendment into the constitution of Alabama, the charge was frequently made that it would be used only as a means of preventing Negroes from voting. Requiring, it will be remembered, that would-be voters be able to understand and explain the constitution of the United States to the satisfaction of a local board of registrars, it seemed definitely built for use in limiting the electorate.

34e(2)

Now there comes out of Georgia a statement from Herman Talmadge that, because of the Federal Court's invalidation of the white primary in South Carolina, a plan similar to Alabama's must be instituted in other Southern states to be what he calls a "last chance." He is quite frank in saying that he intends, if possible, to bar the Negro from voting anywhere in the South.

The statement carried Tuesday by The Associated Press may have given a false impression to some readers. It sounded very much as though some concerted plan were under way in which many political leaders of the South were engaged. A closer reading of the dispatch, however, indicates that it is nothing more than a popping off by Mr. Talmadge. Yet Talmadge has been in the public eye often enough in months past for what he says to be accepted as the idea of a type of Southern individual with a certain strength at the polls. The News

What Talmadge has always stood for is a type of prejudice now happily passing out of existence. The majority of the people in Georgia have yet to prove that they prefer Herman Talmadge to a more enlightened man. They voted for Ol' Gene, it is true, but that may have been because he was something of a sentimental idol to so many of them. They have never voted for Herman, and it is doubtful whether he has the following his father had built up through the years. What happened in Mississippi last year is some indication that though personal loyalty may be given to a man who exemplified extreme prejudice, there isn't enough of that kind of feeling left to elect another man like him over a more enlightened opponent. Mon. 1-12-48.

Therefore it is unlikely that Talmadge should be taken too seriously when he talks about the establishment of a law in every state similar to our Boswell amendment. How long it will remain on the statute books in Alabama is not certain, for it surely will be tested in the courts. The higher levels of American jurisprudence have been consistently favorable to granting civil rights to minorities. That is the reason that Talmadge felt it necessary to make his statement. It sounds much like a last gasp of a dying point of view. 34e(2)

Negro Voters Still Barred In Some Georgia Counties

The Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala. Wed. 2-25-48

By PERRY MULLEN

ATLANTA, Feb. 24.—(AP)—Negroes still are denied the vote in some Georgia counties despite decision of the U. S. Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court several times has ruled that Negroes cannot be deprived of the right to vote in primaries. In the one-party South, primaries usually serve a selections. The Democratic nominee seldom has real opposition in the general election.

Negroes now vote in state-wide Democratic primaries and in many county primaries in Georgia. But in other counties with heavy Negro registration, few if any are permitted to vote. Strict enforcement of voter qualifications laws rule out hundreds. Wholesale striking of Negro voter lists has been alleged in some counties. The Advertiser

The Federal Government recently attempted to prove a case of wholesale disfranchisement of Negroes in Dodge County. It claimed registrars failed to supply county election officials with a list of 1,300 registered Negroes.

A federal grand jury in Savannah was asked to look into the matter. It scanned evidence submitted by the U. S. district attorney and declined to indict.

In about 40 of Georgia's 159 counties, the Negro population outnumbers whites. White residents fear they might have Negro sheriffs and other county officers if Negroes are given the ballot. Montgomery, Ala.

The county sheriff, tax commissioner and other officers enforce both state and county laws. The road or tax commissioner sets the county tax rate and decides where roads and schools will be built. County Democratic executive committees, elected every four years, have practically complete control of election machinery. The committees may call an election whenever they wish.

State law sets up voter qualifications but it is left to the county registrar or tax collector to determine if an individual meets the test. Wed. 2-25-48

The official can decide whether a citizen is of "good character" and understands duties and obligations of citizenship that give him the right to vote.

He also can require the prospective voter to "correctly read in the English language any paragraph of the Constitution of the U. S. or of this state," and write the same.

If the applicant is unable to read, the official may decide he can vote if he is "able to understand and give a reasonable interpretation of any paragraph" of the federal or state constitution.

Lots of white persons might muff voter qualification tests under this provision of the state constitution. The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Georgia advocates of White Supermacy welcome the current furor over President Truman's civil rights program. The hotter the arguments over equal rights for Negroes, they say, the more votes they can expect at the next election. Wed. 2-25-48

Talmadge, Thompson Want To Disfranchise Negroes

The Worker
New York, N.Y. Sun.

ATLANTA—The Boswell Amendment method of keeping the people from voting has two new advocates in Georgia—Herman Talmadge and Governor Thompson.

Talmadge told reporters recently that with the invalidation of the South Carolina white primary, something similar to Alabama's voter-qualification plan was necessary. 1-18-48

"I believe," he said, "that 85 to 90 percent of our white people should vote. . . . I don't think more than 10 or 15 percent of our Negro people should vote."

Governor Thompson, somewhat less brazen, says substantially the same thing:

"This can be done by a reasonable and impartially administered educational requirement for voting. . . .

"Our state constitution provides for segregation of the races in public schools and I am already on record for segregation of races at the polls. . . ." state. The Worker New York, N.Y. Sun.

IT SEEMS CLEAR that this sudden concern of the Talmadge and Thompson cliques over the control of voter registration comes not only from the recent quashing of the South Carolina white primary subterfuge in the courts. They fear that the Third Party movement might well get out an independent mass vote in Georgia, which would be completely outside the control of the state Democratic machine.

They know further that the 200,000 registered Negro voters are potentially a good core for an independent voters movement in the WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga., Jan. 21.—Voters and candidates in Johnson County's Democatic primary scheduled for March 3 must sign pledges saying they favor the white primary, segregation of races and oppose communism, Democratic executive committee chairman W. C. Brinson said yesterday.

Brinson, who is also judge of the city court here, said voters would be required to sign the pledge before casting their ballot. Candidates qualifying for the primary must make similar written vows he said.

IT'S A 'FREE' COUNTRY

The pledge states:

- I favor the county unit system now existing in the state of Georgia.
- I favor the white primary.
- I favor preservation of segregation for the races as now exists in Georgia.
- I oppose Communism.
- I oppose any organization that seeks to destroy the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of Georgia.
- I oppose enactment into law the rules and regulations as promulgated by the Fair Employment Practices Committee.
- I will support the nominees of this primary in the general election.

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Thurs. 1-22-48

In past years Georgia Democratic executive committees have required only a pledge to support nominees as a requirement for casting votes in a primary election.

A similar plan existed until recently in Mississippi. It was generally regarded illegal but was never tested in court.

Under the Mississippi pledge Negroes were required to sign statements saying they favored the white primary before they were allowed to vote.

Gentlemen:

Yesterday in an adjacent county Negroes were turned away from the polls when they attempted to vote in a county-wide election. A representative to the state legislature stood guard with a shotgun and the statement, "If a Nigger votes in this election, he'll be a dead Nigger." Several white people, including a doctor and other substantial citizens, protested but to no avail. No Negroes voted.

I am a white man myself, but I see in this kind of thing a threat to my own rights, for as long as a man at the polls with a gun can keep one man from voting, he can keep any man from voting.

Feeling that something should be done to bring these parties to justice, I would like your advice as to how to begin. 'Way' To Hold a 'White Primary' Will Be Found, Harris Believes

The Constitution

Atlanta, Ga.

A Supreme Court decision Monday upholding in effect the right of Negroes to vote in South Carolina Democratic primaries drew a blunt prediction from some leaders of the Talmadge faction in Georgia that a "way would be found" to hold a white primary in this State. Tues. 4-20-48

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Although Herman Talmadge had "no comment" on refusal of the U. S. Supreme Court to review a lower court decision that Negroes were entitled to vote, his stalwart advisor, Roy Harris, declared:

"I'm still in favor of a white primary, and I believe a way will be found to hold one." Tues.

Acting Gov. Thompson, on the other hand, termed the Supreme Court decision "final," and added he would respect it. His statement was as follows: 4-20-48

Throughout all my life, I have respected the decisions of courts. The action of the Supreme Court of the United States is final and pertains to the right of Negroes to vote. I shall continue to respect the decisions of the Court.

"Before I vetoed the so-called White Primary Bill, passed by the General Assembly in 1947, I had been advised that the Supreme Court of the United States would have invalidated the act of the General Assembly. Today's action by the Supreme Court justifies the position which I took." Tues.

Southerners generally agreed the Court action will have widespread effect in the South. 4-20-48

Sen. Maybank, Democrat, South Carolina, told a reporter "Although I am distressed at the ruling, I am certain that William P. Baskin (State Democratic Chairman) of Bishopville, will immediately call the State Executive Committee together to set up proper regulations."

Rep. McMillan, Democrat, South Carolina, commented, "The only thing to do now, is to allow Negroes to vote. But we must set up qualifications for all voters. I think we should at least require a fourth grade education for every voter in the State."

The Constitution

Sen. Johnston, Democrat, South Carolina, said: "I am utterly astonished to read the report that the Supreme Court will not hear this case. I felt we lived in a free country and we have freedom of speech. There are many legal issues which are debatable in this case. The Supreme Court should have heard what each side has to say. As a lawyer I feel each side should have had its chance to argue before the high court." Tues.

Atlanta, Ga.

Rep. Rivers, Democrat, South Carolina, however, said: "I am not surprised. The Supreme Court Judges have long since abandoned interpreting the law. They've gone into the legislative business. They either don't care or they don't know any better." 4-20-48

Dublin Minister Seeks Restoration Of Purged Voters

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

DUBLIN, Ga.—2 (SNS)—Rev. A. L. Brewster, AME minister and member of the Dublin Citizens Democratic Club, is spearheading the drive to restore 833 Negroes back on the election rolls following a wholesale purge of Negro voters several days ago. Tues. 5-18-48

The group has secured the services of Dan Duke, Klan-busting attorney of Atlanta, Ga., who will represent the purge voters when a civil suit is filed in the Federal District Court.

Duke plans to file damage suits against the registrars and if immediate action is not forthcoming he will attempt to prevent the holding of the Laurens County Democratic primary scheduled for June 2.

Meanwhile, the Federal Bureau of Investigation is probing the vote purge for criminal prosecution. This action came as the result of a letter from Attorney General Tom Clark to J. Edgar Hoover.

On the heels of the purge of Negro voters came the announcement that Ancil Chavous, would be a candidate for the legislature.

Purged Laurens Negroes Fail To Reregister

DUBLIN, June 15—Although Laurens County reopened its registration lists to qualified Negro voters purged from the lists, not a single Negro applied for registration or reregistration today.

Refuting earlier reports that many Negroes had registered during the day, Tax Collector T. C. Keen said only a few white college students had come in to register.

Both Teen and E. S. Baldwin, Chairman of the Registration Board, declared that anyone meeting the legal requirements for voting may apply and appear before the Board for reregistration. Both said all who qualified would be returned to the lists. 6-16-48

1,800 Ask Punitive Damages

SAVANNAH, May 28—A powerful State political figure and a Superior Court Judge were accused Friday of conspiring to illegally disfranchise 1,800 Negroes in a petition filed here in Federal Court. Sat. 5-29-48

The Negroes asked punitive damages aggregating nearly half a million dollars of Superior Court Judge Earl Camp, State Rep. Herschel Lovett and members of the Laurens Board of Registrars and Laurens Board of County Commissioners.

The Laurens County Board of Registrars was ordered to show cause why it should not restore 1,800 Negroes allegedly stricken from the voting list.

Dan Duke, Atlanta attorney, filed the petition with Judge Scarlett, charging that the Negroes were removed arbitrarily because of their race from the registration list in an illegal conspiracy that violated their civil rights.

Shortly after Judge Scarlett signed the "show cause" order, Duke filed it in Dublin with Miss Jessie Baldwin, Deputy Clerk of the Federal District Court.

Judge Scarlett set a hearing for 11 a. m. June 26, at Brunswick.

Each of the eight Negroes asked a total of $55,000 damages. They also asked $20,000 for attorneys' fees. Duke said that four college graduates, three ministers and a school teacher comprised the list of plaintiffs who charged they were illegally removed from the voters' list. They said they, and other Negroes, voted in past Democratic primaries.

The petition alleged that Lovett, political leader of Laurens County and power in State politics, and Judge Camp conspired with the registrars and county commissioners to deliberately disfranchise all but 500 Negroes in this year's Democratic primary. Sat.

"In September, 1947, the registrars, at the request of Judge Camp, met and discussed means and methods of removing all the names, except 500, of Negro persons who were certified by the previous Board of Registrars as qualified electors, and whose names appeared on said list as filed by said Board with the Clerk of the Superior Court," the petition alleged. 5-29-48

"Prior to this meeting, the Board Chairman, E. S. Baldwin, had consulted with Herschel V. Lovett," the petition continued. "Lovett had advised them that 'all of the niggers except about 500 had to come off the qualified voters list, and if the Board of County Commissioners don't pay you for your work, I will see that you are paid.'" The Constitution

The petition charged that Ancil Chavous, member of the Board of Registrars, consulted with Camp and Lovett to plot a procedure to require the examination of each of these Negroes on the registration list. Atlanta, Ga.

Atlanta, Ga.

GRIFFIN, July 29—(AP)—Some 1,500 registered Negro voters in Spalding County have been summoned before the Board of Registrars to determine if they are qualified to vote.

The subpoenas issued through the Sheriff's office ordered the Negroes to appear Monday and "from day to day" until the cases are disposed of.

R. L. Addleton, member of the Board of Registrars, said subpoenas had been issued only when "there are any doubts" about qualifications. Wed.

Two Atlanta attorneys, S. B. Wallace and Frank Bowers, have been employed by Negro citizens of the County to represent them before the board. 7-28-48

Of the 77 persons called before the board Monday, all but 19 were qualified.

Ga. Democrats To Open Vote To Negroes

Columbia Record

Columbia, S.C.

MACON, Ga., July 1—(AP)—Georgia Democrats who have clamored loudest for "white supremacy" convene tomorrow to open the state's primary ballot to Negroes.

Leaders expected the Georgia Democratic convention to be a fast-moving affair, capped by a howling, old-fashioned demonstration for young Herman Talmadge, political heir of the late Eugene Talmadge

More than 5,000 followers were slated to join the fun, a rousing prelude to Herman's expected announcement and formal qualification Saturday as a candidate for governor in the September 8 Democratic primary.

Followers of Herman and red-gallused "Old Gene," fiery opponent of Negro voting, must alter party rules in the face of repeated court decisions that the South cannot bar Negroes from Democratic primaries.

Party chieftains said today they accept the move as inevitable and planned no subterfuge.

The 1946 Talmadge-dominated Georgia Democratic convention tried to establish the party as a private club which could limit its membership to white persons.

Ticklish national issues were tossed aside in pre-convention planning today. Leaders said they foresaw no move toward naming Georgia's Democratic presidential electors. Thu. 7-1-48

Nor did leaders care to tackle the problem of instructing Georgia delegates to the Democratic national convention. The state delegation, avowedly opposed to President Truman, has been named by the party executive committee. The committee probably will name the electors after the presidential nominee has been selected.

Democracy In Reverse

Atlanta Daily world

We thought we had seen Democracy slip to its lowest depths this week when Georgia's Second Congressional committee decided to change the rules and thus remove the threat which almost defeated Congressman Eugene Cox in his race for the U. S. Congress in 1946. In 1946, an Albany lawyer, Neely Peacock, received a heavy urban vote against Congressman Cox, who, after finding that he was going to run against him again this year, had the rules changed from a popular to a county unit count. In other words, the Congressman is determined to cut the cloth to fit the garment and thus not take any chances on his race for Congress.

Sat. 7-3-48

But we think something more significant than that is about to take place in Sixth Congressional District, where last week, Herschel Lovett of Laurens County, in fear of the Negro vote, called upon the white people to discourage opposition to Congressman Carl Vinson in his approaching race for re-election.

Atlanta, Ga.

"As a duty to the white people," said Mr. Lovett, "we must see that our congressman does not have any opposition." This means that white candidates must be discouraged to file for the same office, because if that happens it will certainly divide the white vote and will mean the almost certain defeat of Rep. Vinson, granting that the over 2,000 Negroes of the County cast their votes. What a pity it is that they are unwilling to trust their fate in a democratic society. They are willing to hold the hand of one candidate and give the other a free hand in an election race. It means much more than that, it means that the people must not be permitted to make a free choice but must take whomever the leaders place before them. It happened against Mrs. Mankin when the rules were changed to favor Congressman Davis. It happened in the 8th district, thus giving Mr. Cox the advantage over Mr. Peacock. And it is being urged for the 6th congressional district.

7-3-48

It will be remembered by Negroes, at least, that Lovett, Superior Court Judge Earl Camp and members of the Laurens county board of registrars and county commissioners are now subject to a federal court suit totaling almost a half million dollars in connection with the purging of nearly 2,000 Laurens county Negroes from the voters' rolls.

Georgia Negroes Fight Mass Purge From Voting Lists

34e(2) Daily Worker

Mon. 6-7-48

ATLANTA, June 6 (FP).—A mass purge of Negroes from the voting lists of Georgia has encountered a formidable obstacle in Klanbuster Dan Duke, former state attorney general, who has filed suit for nearly half a million dollars on behalf of eight Negro clients.

Of the Negro complainants, four are college graduates, three are ministers and one is a school teacher. Each is asking a total of $55,000 damages for being deprived of the right to vote.

Among the 11 defendants named as co-conspirators in the case are Superior Court Judge Earl Camp, state Rep. Herschel Lovett, two candidates for the Georgia senate and members of the Laurens county board of registrars and county commission.

6-7-48

The suit charges that the defendants conspired to, and did remove, the names of 1,800 Negroes from the voting lists of the county since November of last year. This figure represents 75 precent of all the Negroes who were registered in the county.

HEARING JUNE 26

A hearing on the case has been set before U.S. District Court Judge Frank M. Scarlett for June 26.

During a similar mass purge of Negro voters by Talmadgite registrars in Georgia's 1946 gubernatorial campaign, Scarlett ordered the registrars of Appling county to reinstate 600 Negroes and at the same time enjoined Coffee county registrars from further purging there.

These threats of federal prosecution put the fear of Uncle Sam into other Georgia registrars, who reinstated thousands of purged Negroes without waiting to be personally prodded.

During February, 1948, however, a Dodge county grand jury sitting at Savannah refused to indict two registrars for purging 1,300 Negroes. This has caused the purge to spread to other Kluxer-Talmadge strongholds in various parts of the state.

New York

The purge pattern consists of registrars sending, via the sheriff, summonses to Negro registrants to "appear and show cause" (usually at some inconvenient hour) why they should not be dropped from the voting lists for "literacy, criminal record, bad character," etc.

Most of the Negroess are too intimidated to appear and so are dropped "automatically."

ATLANTA—(NNPA) — Bowing to Federal court decisions outlawing the white primary Judge Mallory C. Atkinson of Bibb County Superior Court, and Judge Douglas Feagin of Macon's City Court, advocate the abolition of primaries in Georgia since its purpose was to disfranchise colored people.

34e(2)

The Atlanta Constitution last Wednesday said: "Since the Supreme Court has ruled that colored people must be allowed to vote in primaries, and since Georgia operates under the one-party, voting in the primary and in the general election has become a duplication.

Take All Candidates

Baltimore, Md.

Judge Atkinson proposed that the Democratic executive committee certify to the Secretary of State all candidates, regardless of how many offers for the same office, in the general election and "thus have that election serve the same purpose as the primary.

The Constitution favors a two party-system in Georgia. "If and when Republicans gain sufficient strength to make this dream a reality, primaries would be necessary, they being the most democratic means of selecting candidates," the Constitution said.

Georgia Leads Dixie in Gain Of Negro Voters

34e(2) The Constitution

Atlanta, Ga.

Georgia's increase in the number of Negro voters since 1940 leads the South, according to statistics compiled for the Southern Regional Council here by Prof. Luther P. Jackson, of Virginia State College.

7-14-48

The number of registered Negro voters in the State jumped from 20,000 in 1940 to 125,000 in 1947, according to the statistics. Negro voters in the South jumped from 211,000 in 1940 to 645,000 in 1947.

Although seven States retain the poll tax, the report declares, only in Mississippi, Virginia and Alabama does it "constitute a significant barrier either by the amount of money to be paid, by the time and method of payment, or by its accumulative features."

Prominent Citizens Are Plaintiffs

Columbia, S.C.

SAVANNAH, Ga. -(SNS)—U. S. District Judge J. Frank Scarlett, acting on a petition filed by Dan Duke, Atlanta attorney, has ordered the Laurens County Board of Registrars to show cause why it should not restore 1,800 Negroes stricken from the voting lists. Judge Scarlett set a hearing for 11 a.m., June 26, at Brunswick.

The petition charged that Negroes were arbitrarily removed from the registration list in an illegal conspiracy that violated the U. S. Constitution.

Sat. 7-10.

Among those named in the action were Laurens Superior Judge Earl Camp, State Rep. Herschel Lovett and members of the Laurens Board of Registrars and Laurens Board of Commissioners.

6-6-48

The action was filed in behalf of C. B. Smith, D. B. Cummings, George C. Carswell, Georgia Carswell, A. L. Brewster, Thomas Coates, Mrs. Anna Clyde Duncan, and Mrs Sallie Barnett, all prominent Negro citizens of Dublin, Ga.

The plaintiffs also named E. S Baldwin, Ancil Chavous, M. W Watson, F. M. Beall, W. W. Brinson, H. R. Gilder, Herschel V. Lovett, R. Earl Camp, J. D. Bush, T. A. Kane and U. T. Joiner in the suit which asked punitive damages aggregating nearly a million dollars. Each of the petitioners asked $55,000 damages. They also asked $20,000 attorney fees.

LENGTHY BRIEF

The brief of the eight Negro citizens covers 22 pages of 18 inches length. Dan Duke filed the petition with Judge Scarlett. He is being assisted in the case by Atty A. T. Walden representing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The document covers all events that transpired up to the purging of 1,800 of the 2,477 registered voters. The plaintiffs linked the purge to action a part of the 1946 scheme, instituted by hostile political forces to nullify the effectiveness of the Negro vote.

Listed in the action were four college graduates, three ministers and a school teacher who charged they were illegally removed from the voters' list. The plaintiffs said they, and other Negroes voted in past Democratic primaries.

The complaint urges that Lovett, political leader of Laurens County and power in state politics, and Judge Camp conspired with the registrars and county commissioners to deliberately disfranchise all but 500 Negroes in this year's Democratic primary.

CLAIM SHERIFF PAID

The reported purge of Negro voters was at a cost of $6,000 to Laurens County. Sheriff Carlus Gay, according to citizens of that county, was paid $3,800 for his services in delivering the notices to white and Negro voters. The law provides that he be paid $1 for every notice delivered. This was alleged to have been approved by the county attorney.

Immediately after Judge Scarlett signed the "show cause" order, Duke filed it in Dublin with Miss Jesse Baldwin, Deputy Clerk of the Federal District Court.

METHODS DISCUSSED

Dan Duke states in the petition: "In September, 1947, the registrars, at the request of Judge Camp, met and discussed means and methods of removing all the names except 500, of Negro persons who were certified by the previous Board of Registrars as qualified electors, and whose names appeared on said list as filed by said Board with the Clerk of the Superior Court," the petition alleged.

"Prior to this meeting, the Board Chairman, E. S. Baldwin, had consulted with Herschel V. Lovett," the petition continued. "Lovett had advised them that 'all of the n——rs except about 500 had to come off the qualified voters list, and if the Board of County Commissioners don't pay you for your work, I will see that you are paid.'

An Ally Joins Ranks Of 'Southern Revolt'

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

34e(2)

THE bright pennons of Southern hotspurs, as they sally forth to tilt against federal laws on civil rights, are a bit tarnished today. Those streamers bear appeals in behalf of the Constitution, of local self-government, of freedom itself. They declare that the South must be permitted to take care of its affairs in its own way. But the rest of the country may demand to know whether that way is not the way which was taken in Wrightsville, Georgia.

News from that spot tells of Ku Klux Klansmen, hooded and robed, burning a cross on the court house lawn. There was no question that this affair was linked with the Southern revolt against the President. In the words of the Klan's chief medicine man, its Grand Dragon SAMUEL GREEN, the connection was plainly stated. Thurs. 3-4-48

The President was defied. A threat was uttered that blood will flow in the streets "whenever a Negro takes his place at the side of white men." The Southern representatives who speak in legalisms, who in Virginia attempt formally to subvert established processes of election, thus acquire allies they cannot shake off. They may profess to be displeased by this turnout of kindred spirits, but there it is.

It is true that to a certain extent the Klan is outlawed, and by Georgia's own action. Its charter has been revoked. It persists only as a kind of informal cult of intolerance and terror. But this very fact makes the demonstration representative. For the dispatches say nothing of any citizen's lifting his voice in protest as the fascist terrorists marched. There was no police action as they took over the seat of county government, committed their accustomed sacrilege upon the crowning symbol of faith, spoke their words of lawlessness. You must, then, accept it as an approved manifestation of the "Southern revolt," of which the shouts in Congress and the more or less dignified plottings in Richmond and other Southern State capitals are also manifestations, different perhaps in kind but hardly in spirit.

It should, but probably won't, be easier now to point out the justification of a federal anti-lynching law, against which so loud an outcry presently is stirring. The great argument of the super-heated opponents is that the South will settle the problem if left alone. Yet, tacitly encouraged by public or official inaction, though doubly illegal because of the semi-outlawed nature of the Klan, the Wrightsville incident is a poor demonstration of proper intentions. The Courier-Journal

Both the Grand Dragon of this mumbo-jumbo by his threats, and the law officers of Wrightsville and Johnson County, by their silence, give the best testimony for needs of the law. The threat of bloodshed, law or no law, is in moral effect nothing but lynching. When it is timed on the eve of a local election, obviously to warn Negroes not to vote, it muffles the self-righteous thunder of politicians claiming to invoke high principle. Louisville, Ky.

Pre-Vote Klan Threats Substitute For Poll Purge of '46—Thompson

The Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Thurs. 3-25-48

Election eve intimidation by Ku Klux Klansmen is the 1848 pattern for purging Negro voters.

Lawrenceville and Conyers on the eve of local primaries. The demonstrations failed to develop.

Don West, a Georgia leader in the Wallace-for-President movement, termed such action "pointless." He suggested the Acting Governor send Patrolmen to communities holding elections in order to insure the voting rights of all citizens, white and black. Thurs.

The Chief Executive disagreed. He said local elections should be just as free from State interference or control as from intimidation by the Klan. 3-25-48

"If ever a citizen should be free it should be in a voting booth," Thompson said. "He should have neither Klansmen nor State Troopers looking over his shoulder.

"Besides," Thompson added, "I haven't heard of anyone being actually refused a ballot at the polls if qualified."

"It appears that during 1948 intimidation of voters by the Ku Klux Klan is being employed as a substitute for the purge campaign of 1946," Thompson remarked at his press conference. Thurs.

The Chief Executive referred to the Eugene Talmadge-James V. Carmichael-Ed Rivers gubernatorial campaign in which Talmadge supporters, in some counties, carried on wholesale purging of Negroes from voting lists. 3-25-48

Thompson called on still more cities and towns to pass regulations against hooded parades. And he praised city officials in Jackson and Conyers for refusing permission for demonstrations by the hooded order. Atlanta, Ga.

He also commended Lawrenceville officials for saying they would enact a similar ordinance.

Meanwhile, The Constitution State News Service reported from Albany that City Council there had passed an ordinance prohibiting the meeting, assembly or parading of persons wearing hoods or masks. Mayor Pro Tempore Richard Hobbs proposed the ordinance, while Mayor J. W. (Taxi) Smith indorsed the proposal which was carried without opposition.

Thompson Tuesday night sent Patrolmen to observe Klan demonstrations reportedly planned for Acting Gov. Thompson charged Wednesday. The Constitution

Since the Australian system of balloting was used, no results will be available until Thursday morning. The Constitution

Despite pre-election talk of probable Ku Klux Klan activities in connection with the voting, there was no disturbance of any kind and observers called the primary "the most orderly in Rockdale County for many years." A separate room was provided for Negro voters.

Posts to be filled included Sheriff, Commissioner, School Commissioner, Tax Commissioner, Clerk and Ordinary.

LAWRENCEVILLE, March 24—Approximately 100 Negroes out of a registration of 181 in the Lawrenceville District had voted late Wednesday in the Gwinnett County primary when it was expected that the total vote, white and Negro, would be around 8,000 in the County. Thurs. 3-25-48

The voting today followed widespread reports during the week that there would be a Ku Klux Klan parade here Tuesday night, which failed to materialize, however, as several thousand people gathered to watch for appearance of the hooded band.

Warning on Civil Rights Made on Eve of Georgia Primary —400 Eligible to Ballot

Thursday

34e(2)

WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga., March 3 (UP)—Negroes stayed away from the polls in today's Democratic primary after the Ku Klux Klan chose this rural mid-Georgia county for a public warning that racial equality programs would lead to blood-letting in the South.

3-4-48

Although more than 400 Negroes in the county are qualified voters, none was reported as having voted at the two Wrightsville booths and the eleven outlying precincts by this afternoon.

Johnson County, a stronghold of the late Eugene Talmadge, recently showed signs of revising its "white supremacy" traditions. Bowing to public pressure, election officials decided against forcing voters to sign a pledge that they would support segregation and the "white primary."

But the Georgia Klan, led by its Grand Dragon, Dr. Samuel Green, picked election eve to demonstrate against President Truman's civil rights program and burn a cross on the courthouse lawn.

Green asserted that "blood will flow" in the South if the Negro took a place at the white man's side.

The Klan would see to it that "the people of this country do not become a mongrel race," he asserted. Thu. 3-4-48

Green said that Prehident Truman faced certain defeat unless he retracted certain of his civil rights demands and added "if he wants to take the Negro as his equal, that's his business."

Negroes were as conspicuous by absence in Wrightsville during the Klan's demonstration as they were during the voting today.

In Atlanta, Gov. M. E. Thompson, commenting on the recent series of Klan meetings and demonstrations in Georgia, said "it does seem to me that if the Ku Klux Klan is so proud of its membership and the Klansmen are so proud of their order, they would not go around hiding their faces under hoods and masks."

Governor Thompson said he had been asked to halt the Klan parades but had no authority to do so as long as they were conducted in an orderly manner.

Talmadge Sees White Primary

The Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

LOVEJOY, March 28—(UP)—Herman Talmadge, head of the faction which controls Georgia's Democratic Party, Sunday indicated he had not given up hope for restoring the State's white primary. Mon. 3-29-48

Talmadge said also the Southern civil-rights secession made re-alignment of national political forces possible.

James Peters, Chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, Saturday announced the Party rules barring Negro votes would be dropped at the July Convention in Macon.

"Mr. Peters is speaking for himself," Talmadge said. "The future of the white primary depends on the United States Supreme Court, but frankly, the people of Georgia do not have too much confidence in the Supreme Court."

The High Court, Talmadge said at his ante-bellum plantation home near here, had refused to follow "long-established precedents" in other Negro-vote cases.

"The people of Georgia want a white primary, and if they can't have an all-white primary, they want it as white as they can get it," Talmadge added.

Peters also announced Saturday the State Executive Committee would name National Convention delegates in May or June. Talmadge commented Sunday: "President Truman is a dead duck," and would "not get a single vote out of Georgia in the National Democratic Convention." His nomination would "'destroy the Democratic Party." If Mr. Truman were nominated, however, Talmadge said he thought a Southern walk from the Party might possibly be "the beginning of a new era in national politics."

The logical thing, he said, would be a division into conservative and liberal parties. Southern traditions and habits would rule out putting a Republican label on conservative Dixie statesmen. The Constitution

Talmadge refused a definite statement on Republican chances in the South in the November Presidential election in case Mr. Truman carried the Democratic banner. Atlanta, Ga.

"It would depend," he said, "on the GOP candidate's position on the civil-rights matter." Mon.

Michigan Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, for example, Talmadge said, could probably carry Georgia if he did not wave an all-out-for-civil-rights flag. 3-29-48

Contacted by telephone at Manchester by The Constitution, Peters refused to comment on Talmadge's statement.

GEORGIA DEMOCRATS DROP WHITE PRIMARY

The Times

MANCHESTER, Ga., March 27 (AP)—Georgia's Democratic party leaders today abandoned the concept of an all-white primary and called a convention July 2 to open the state's election to Negroes. The call was issued by James S. Peters, chairman of the Democratic executive committee, controlled by Herman Talmadge, long an advocate of "white supremacy." The convention will be held in Macon. New York, N.Y.

In 1946 the convention adopted a set of rules which would have barred Negroes from participating in the primary on the assumption that the Legislature would pass a "white primary" bill. The legislature did, in fact, but the law was vetoed by Gov. M. E. Thompson. Subsequently, Federal courts held such a law unconstitutional. Sun. 3-28-48

Georgia's vetoed law was similar to the one adopted in South Carolina which made the Democratic party a private club in which Negroes were barred.

Mr. Peters said the convention would wipe out its rules pertaining to Negro voting which are now in conflict with court rulings.

Talmadge To Reopen Negro Vote

By M. L. ST. JOHN

The Herman Talmadge-controlled State Democratic Convention will reconvene in Macon July 2 for the purpose of reopening the primary ballot to Georgia Negroes.

The Convention of November, 1946, adopted rules banning the Negroes from voting in anticipation of passage of the "White Primary Bill" by the Georgia Legislature. Acting Gov. Thompson vetoed the measure, and since that time Federal Courts have held such acts unconstitutional. Negroes voted in the 1946 primary, and the 1948 primary is the first State primary to be held since the Talmadge leadership sought to ban Negro voting.

At Manchester Saturday, State Democratic Chairman James Peters announced that he would issue a convention call soon "for the purpose of modifying rules and regulations of the Democratic Party in Georgia with reference to the White Primary, and such other business as may come before the Convention."

Asked if this meant the wiping away of the "white primary" rules, Peters replied: "Yes." He cited the decision of Federal Judge T. Waits Waring which outlawed South Carolina's plan of making the primary a "private club" affair. Georgia's plan was fashioned after the South Carolina plan. The Constitution

Peters threw the convention wide open, stating that "all Jefferson-Jackson Democrats who believe in 'States' rights' and Southern traditions are invited to participate in the proceedings." They will join the delegates of the 1946 convention. Atlanta, Ga.

Herman Talmadge, regarded as a gubernatorial candidate, will speak. Sun. 3-28-48

Asked if Act. Gov. Thompson would be invited, Peters said no special invitations would be sent, but that no one would be barred.

Peters And Talmadge In Statement

Atlanta Daily World - Atlanta Ga.

No Change Of Heart, However; Blame Thompson

Wed. 3-31-48

The Talmadge faction had no change of heart on the Negro vote question although the group will not insist on the "white primary" this summer. In a joint statement James Peters, Chairman of the Georgia Democratic Party and Herman Talmadge, gubernatorial aspirant had declared Tuesday that they had not abandoned their fight eventually to bar Negroes from voting.

Blaming the failure of Gov. Melvin E. Thompson to sign a White Primary Bill for their inability to resurrect the vote issue, Talamadge and Peters said "If Thompson had signed the White Primary Bill, we would have a white primary this summer: Since he vetoed the legislation and the Legislature doesn't meet again this year, we must comply with State law, so the Democratic Convention will necessarily have to change its rules so as to permit Negroes to vote."

CITES DECISION

Talmadge called attention to the fact that the United States Supreme Court had not yet decided whether the South Carolina plan of barring Negroes from voting in the primary is legal. The decision of U. S. Judge T. Waites Waring at Charleston outlawing the white primary was upheld by the United States Court of Appeal at Richmond. The State of South Carolina has appealed the decision to the High Court.

Showing no change of opinion in his attitude on the Negro vote question, Talmadge stated that the only reason Negroes would participate in the primary is "because we cannot prevent them from voting under the present law."

Gov. Thompson had questioned the diverse viewpoints coming from the Peters - Talmadge political camps.

Forget the White Primary!

34e(2) Ga.

Atlanta Constitution

Georgia's Supreme Court has ended the controversy over which faction of Georgia Democrats is in charge of the party machinery in this State.

Unanimously, the Court held that last year's convention was illegal and that James S. Peters, named Party Chairman at the 1946 convention is the legal claimant to the post. Atlanta, Ga.

Like the ruling of a year ago ending the controversy regarding the succession of the Lieutenant Governor, this decision is a valuable one in that it removes confusion. Both have been helpful in clarifying situations potentially dangerous to the fabric of government. Wed. 2-25-48

As before, all parties concerned have accepted the verdict without hesitation. There will be only one primary.

As soon as the present status of the soldiers' vote law is determined, Chairman James Peters will call a convention to determine delegates to the national convention and also to adopt plans for the forthcoming primary.

Meanwhile, before any action is taken, we think it proper and necessary to urge, in the interest of the State's good name, that the white primary be forgotten.

As all have obeyed the State Supreme Court, let all obey the Supreme Court of the United States.

There can be no white primary. Any attempts to create a subterfuge will be bowled over by the Court, bringing embarrassment to the supporters of the subterfuge. Whether we like it or not, qualified Negroes have a right to the ballot.

The Constitution has always stood for a fair qualifications law, properly administered. Many States have such laws and have administered them without interference by the courts. Wed. 2-25-48

In this connection, it is well to note that the Governor of Alabama and most of the legal minds of that State regard the Boswell Law, as written, illegal.

But the States do have authority to qualify the right to the ballot by legitimate means. Wed. 2-25-48

So, let us obey the courts, forget the white primary, and give the State a campaign pitched on a plane which will honor candidates and voters.

No 'White Primary' This Year---Talmadge

The Constitution Tues. 3-30-48

Atlanta, Ga.

By M. L. ST. JOHN

In a joint interview here Monday, State Democratic Chairman James Peters and Herman Talmadge declared there would be no "white primary" this Summer because Acting Gov. Thompson vetoed the "white primary bill," but they declared they had not abandoned their fight eventually to bar Negroes from voting.

"If Thompson had signed the White Primary Bill, we would have a white primary this Summer," Talmadge and Peters said. "Since he vetoed the bill and the Legislature doesn't meet again this year, we must comply with State law, so the Democratic Convention will necessarily have to change its rules so as to permit Negroes to vote." 3-30-48

Talmadge said that the United States Supreme Court has not yet decided whether the South Carolina plan of barring Negroes from voting in the primary is legal. The decision of Federal Judge T. Waits Waring at Charleston outlawing the plan was upheld by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Richmond. An appeal from the appellate court has been taken under advisement by the Supreme Court. The Constitution

Talmadge emphasized that the only reason Negroes will be voting in the Georgia primary this Summer is "because we cannot prevent them from voting under the present law." He said there had been no change of front in the Talmadge camp on the fight for a white primary. Atlanta, Ga.

Acting Gov. Thompson, in a press conference at the Capitol earlier in the day, took a "dig" at the division in the Talmadge camp as indicated in separate quotations from Talmadge and Peters over the weekend. Thompson said that he knew his organization "is united," and that his united organization supports the decisions of the courts. Tues

Asked if he planned to attend the State Democratic Convention called by Peters for July 2, and to be addressed by Talmadge, Thompson replied: "That meeting is some months off yet. I am busy with duties of the Governor's office, and I cannot say now whether I will be at the convention." 3-30-48

Fail To Report To Polls Wednesday; Truman Hit

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

By THE S. N. S.

Georgia leaders Wednesday night were scrutinizing occurrences in Wrightsville and Johnson County, where, apparently not a single Negro voted in the Wednesday primary, following an election eve Ku Klux Klan demonstration and a threat from the leader of the nefarious organization that "blood will flow in the streets" through Federal interference.

The Klan apparently accomplished the purpose of its demonstration, more thoroughly than even the Johnson County Democratic Committee had set out a few months ago with "white primary pledge" ballots.

According to Wrightsville sources Negroes did not venture to the polls because they felt it unsafe and unwise to do so "at this time."

NO TELEPHONES

Efforts to contact the Negro leadership in the small southeast Georgia county seat failed because, according to the telephone exchange, Negroes do not have telephones in Wrightsville.

According to the Associated Press there are 400 Negroes registered out of 5,600 registrants in Johnson County. Some 241 are registered in the Wrightsville district. Thurs.

Approximately 300 hooded and robed Klansmen paraded through Wrightsville Tuesday night on the eve of the heralded election. They burned a 15-foot cross on the lawn of the county courthouse and formed in a circle around the cross hearing a fiery talk by Dr. Samuel Green, of Atlanta, the Grand Dragon of the Klan. 3-4-48

Dr. Green, the only unhooded man in the group, declared that blood would flow in the streets of the South, if the Negro takes a place at the side of white men through force of Federal bayonets.

CRITICIZE TRUMAN

Criticizing President Truman's civil rights program, the Klan leader declared:

"We reaffirm our loyalty to the Constitution, our vow to uphold the laws but there are some things beyond the law.

According to Wrightsville sources leading white business and civic leaders of the town are members of the Klan.

The Tuesday night demonstration was the second Klan appearance within a week in that section of Georgia. A cross had been burned the previous Wednesday some 20 miles away at Gordon, in Wilkinson county, where a Democratic primary also was held March 3.

In Atlanta, Governor Thompson criticized Ku Klux Klan parades in connection with political elections, but said he had no power to stop the demonstrations. CONVENTION TO "MODIFY" PRIMARY RULES JULY 2

Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Sun. 3-28-48

Still apparently groping to find a way to circumvent the United States Supreme Court decision granting to Georgia Negroes to unqualified constitutional right to participate in all primaries without discrimination, James S. Peters, State Democratic Party Chairman, came forth Saturday with suggestion of doubt as to whether the primary will be thrown open to them in the approaching State primary in September. Sun. 3-28-48

"All delegates to the 1946 convention and such Jefferson-Jackson Democrats as believe in state's rights and Southern traditions are invited to attend and to participate in the proceedings of a convention which will be held in Macon on July 2," Mr. Peters' statement said.

Mr. Peters would not say that the polls would be thrown open to Negroes in the coming Democratic primary. But he did mention the action of the 1946 State Convention, held in Macon, October, 1946, which adopted a strict primary rule on the theory that the 1947 legislature would repeal the Neill primary laws and leave the state primary entirely under the control of the Democratic party organization.

The "Convention," said Chairman Peters, "has been called to modify the white primary law and to transact such other business as may come before it."

It was predicted that President Truman's civil rights proposals would come up for discussion at the convention.

Walden Reports On Wrightsville Threats

34e(2) Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Attorney A. T. Walden, President of the Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic Clubs and a member of the Legal Council of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, returned to Atlanta Thursday night, following a probe of threats and intimidations against Negro voters by the Ku Klux Klan at Wrightsville. Mr. Walden told a World representative several prominent white and Negro citizens of Johnson County were interviewed during the course of this investigation and that the State Association is exploring the possibilities of legal action. Fri. 3-5-48

The Johnson County probe terminated a three-day speaking schedule in Liberty, Chatham and surrounding counties for the Atlanta lawyer, who said that another trip to Wrightsville is planned in the near future. Fri. 3-5-48

Attorney Walden, accompanied by E. J. Stebbins, his personal Secretary in charge of the State office of the Association, and Charles Greenlea, State Organizer, addressed a mass-meeting Tuesday evening in Liberty County, where Negroes of three adjoining counties packed the Dorchester Cooperative Center for the address. Following his message, the Citizens Council of Liberty County, under whose sponsorship the meeting was staged, resolved itself into the Liberty County Citizens Democratic Club, and promptly affiliated with the State Association of Citizens Democratic clubs. There are nearly 2,400 registered Negro voters on the registration rolls of Liberty County, with an active registration campaign now in progress, reported the leaders. 34e(2) Thurs.

On Wednesday evening, Attorney Walden addressed another Mass-meeting of voters at Savannah, sponsored by the Chatham County Citizens Democratic Club, led by John W. McGlocton. In the next few weeks, Mr. Walden said, he plans to make a tour of most of the counties where Democratic clubs are functioning. The state Organizer will also make independent tours, in an effort to form new county units.

How Vote Rights Get Runaround in Georgia

34e(2) PM New York, N.Y.

Wed. 2-25-48

By Associated Press

ATLANTA

Negroes still are denied the vote in some Georgia counties despite decision of the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court several times has ruled that Negroes cannot be deprived of the right to vote in primaries. In the one-party South, primaries usually serve as elections. The Democratic nominee seldom has real opposition in the general election.

Negroes now vote in State-wide Democratic primaries and in many county primaries in Georgia. But in other counties with heavy Negro registration, few if any are permitted to vote. Strict enforcement of voter qualification laws rule out hundreds. Wholesale striking of Negro voter lists has been alleged in some counties.

Federal Test Case

PM

The Federal government recently attempted to prove a case of wholesale disfranchisement of Negroes in Dodge County. It claimed registrars failed to supply county election officials with a list of 1300 registered Negroes. New York, N.Y.

A Federal grand jury in Savannah was asked to look into the matter. It scanned evidence submitted by the U. S. District Attorney and declined to indict. 2-25-48

County Powers

The county sheriff, tax commissioner and other officers enforce both State and county laws. County Democratic executive committees, elected every four years, have practically complete control of election machinery.

State law sets up voter qualifications, but it is left to the county registrar or tax collector to determine it an individual meets the test. New York, N.Y.

The official can decide whether a citizen is of "good character" and understands duties and obligations of citizenship that give him the right to vote. 2-25-48

Reading Tests

He also can require the prospective order to "correctly read in the English language any paragraph of the Constitution of the U. S. or of this State," and write the same.

If the applicant is unable to read, the official may decide he can vote if he is "able to understand and give a reasonable interpretation of any paragraph" of the Federal or State constitution. Wed 2-25-48

Lots of white persons might muff voter qualification tests under this provision of the State constitution.

Georgia advocates of white supremacy welcome the current furor over President Truman's civil rights program. The hotter the arguments over equal rights for Negroes, they say, the more votes they can expect at the next election.

The Klan And Georgia Politics

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Once again, Negroes demonstrated rare courage, Monday in braving the Ku Klux Klan forces in Twiggs county by going to the polls in appreciable numbers, notwithstanding the fact that they did so at their own risk. The Jeffersonville burnings and demonstrations by the Klan mark the third time within a four week's span where Negroes were given to know that the Klan, rather than local government, is in control of State and county election machinery. And with the single exception of Jackson, Georgia, where the Mayor has ruled out any possibility of any such demonstrations, no local enforcement officials have made any public move to banish the Klan from mixing in governmental affairs. 34e(2) Wed 3-24-48

The situation has grown to such proportions that we fear serious consequences if they are not checked promptly. This much is certain, Negroes are going to call for a show down and that will be real soon. To prove this contention one needs only to have visited and talked with Negro leaders Monday in Twiggs county, where some of us had the privilege of going. There, although many of them had voted without incidence, these Negroes were resentful of the Klan's insult to the boiling point. More and more this feeling is going to develop until race riots and blood shed will be the results.

Governor Thompson, we believe, is doing the best he knows how to put down this shameful affront to orderly government. But he is limited without laws to support him. But real power lies in public sentiment in the local areas affected. That is the argument southern politicians use in opposing anti-lynching and other federal legislation. The only difficulty in it is that the South does not follow these arguments with concrete action. Daily World

We commend the action of the Twiggs County Negroes and appeal to the law enforcement officials in upholding law in elections. The situation facing Negroes and whites of Georgia is far more serious than moct people imagine. The Klan has created most of it. we believe, but whether it can be depended upon to check these developments is another question. In the months ahead there will be serious complications if they continue the practice which has been started. Atlanta, Ga. Wed. 3-24-48

State Officials Disfranchising Georgia Voters

The Worker

New York, N.Y.

Sun. 5-30-48

ATLANTA.—The most recent attack on the voters of Georgia by county officialdom has been exposed in the Atlanta Journal.

Over 75 percent of the Negro voters of Laurens County—1,823 out of 2,477 by latest count—have been flagrantly purged from the voters list. The Worker

Political control of the county centers in H. Herschel Lovett, a long-time Talmadgeite, who is now a candidate for state senator. The county Democratic committee and the three-man board of registrars dance to his tune. Sun. 5-30-48

The purge began in October 1947, and was stopped temporarily when the local judge ruled that the lists could not be gone over until April 1948. The purge was illegally resumed in January of this year, after a peculiar claim was made that the list of county voters had been lost. New York, N.Y.

A number of the Negroes who have been purged have been sent summons to appear before the county board of registrars. Such a summons is both unheard of and illegal, according to Dan Duke, Atlanta attorney, who has been advising the purged citizens on their rights under the 14th Amendment. About 30 Negro citizens answered the summons. All the rest—nearly 2,000—were not even notified that their names had been dropped from the lists.

★

A GROUP of white citizens of Dublin, the county seat, called on the board to have a special session to discuss the flagrant procedure. This request was in effect pushed aside, since only one of the three board members appeared, and, without a majority, no business can be transacted. Sun.

The fight to reinstate the voters, most of them with three years standing on the list, will be continued. 5-30-48

Laurens Registrars Quit Under Fire

Tues. 5-25-48

Daily World

Two Laurens County registrars, apparently seeing the handwriting on the walls in the vicious purge of nearly 2,000 Negroes from the voters' lists Monday handed in their resignations without comment.

The two resigning registrars, were Marvin W. Watson, who in a letter to Superior Court Judge R. Earl Camp, stated that he had suffered a nervous breakdown in April, and Ancil Chavous, who announced his intentions to file for the General Assembly. Atlanta, Ga.

U. T. Joiner, a former service station operator, has been appointed registrar. No one has yet been appointed to fill the other vacancy. The resignations thus leave the board with only one member who took part in the pernicious purge of over 75 per cent of the 2,477 registered Negro voters who qualified themselves to vote in the 1946 General election. Tues.

Some specifications are that the two new registrars may refuse to sign the purge lists prepared by the resigning registrars. Attorney Daniel Duke, who is conducting a sweeping investigation into the charges, told Georgia Negro leaders Friday that he will direct that Negroes of the county who have been notified of the purge to ignore them altogether, since he can show that the purges were conducted unfairly with intent to limit the Negro voting strength. 5-25-48

No 'White Primary' For Georgia in May

The Courier

34e(2) Pittsburgh, Pa.

ATLANTA, Ga.—There will be no insistence on the "white primary" in Georgia this summer.

Agreement to this surprise move on the part of Talmadge forces was announced last week in a joint statement by James Peters, chairman of the Georgia Democratic party, and Herman Talmadge, son of the late race-baiting "Sage of Sugar Creek" and gubernatorial aspirant. Sat. 4-10-48

RACE STAND REMAINS

Nevertheless, Talmadge showed no change of heart on the Negro vote question.

Talmadge and Peters blamed the failure of Acting Governor Thompson to sign the General Assembly-passed "white primary bill" for their inability to resurrect the Negro vote issue this summer. Their joint statement said:

"If Thompson had signed the white primary bill we would have a white primary this summer. Since he vetoed the legislation and the Legislature doesn't meet again this year, we must comply with the State law. So the Democratic Convention will necessarily have to change its rules so as to permit Negroes to vote." 4-10-48

Young Talmadge called attention to the fact that the United States Supreme Court had not yet decided whether the South Carolina plan of barring Negroes from voting in the primary is legal.

LAFAYETTE, La. — Scores of Negro registered voters were intimidated and driven from the polls on attempting to vote in the democratic gubernatorial primary here last Tuesday, according to the statements of some 50 residents of this city. Complaint of the denial of the voting privilege to Negroes here was made to Attorney A. P Tureaud of New Orleans, president of the state conference of NAACP branches, who referred it to the Department of Justice.

Last Tuesday's incidents happening in Precinct 17 of Ward 3, followed by one month a race-baiting speech made near this city by United States Congressman James Domengeaux, a local resident who was campaigning in behalf of Sam H. Jones who sought the democratic nomination as governor. 1-31-48

A partial list of Negro voters driven from the polls includes, August Mouton, Mrs. Gustavia Reynolds, Mrs. Eva M. Reynolds Lumus R. Ruth W. Jones, W. Foote Russell Mouton, Doremus Dorsey, William Reynolds, Louis Perry, Mrs. Clara Barabin, Blaine Barabin, Mrs. Martha Victor, Joseph Foote, Athony Prince, Maurice Mouton, James Phillip, Jerry M. According to information received by the New Orleans Informer-Sentinel, Negroes went to the polls early Tuesday in the Seventeenth precinct of the Third Ward The voting place was located in a private residence and a number of white men were gathered outside the house and on the porch to challenge Negroes who came to vote

It was learned that after a large number of Negroes had been ordered away from the voting place they called on Sheriff Gaston Her-ert for assistance. He was quoted as saying he could not come but would send someone to investigate. The Negro would-be voters waited in vain then telephoned Deputy Sheriff Fisher who failed to come to the scene, informants declared.

The Informer

The assistance of a Catholic priest was sought, witnesses say and when he contacted the deputy sheriff he was told to get the names of the persons being refused entrance to the voting booth.

Houston Texas

After waiting all day vainly seeking to vote, scores of Negroes in the Seventeenth precinct had gathered hoping to be admitted. Later that afternoon they were all driven a distance of two blocks from the polls by city police officers who yelled, "Get off the streets; keep walking; do we have to talk French to you?", witnesses declared. 1-31-48

Observers are of the opinion that Tuesday's treatment of Negro voters is the aftermath of Congressman Domengeaux's speech made at Henderson, La., near here about December 20, when he said that the Negro vote in the South was a threat to Democracy.

The remarks, made at a public mass meeting with Sam H. Jones on the speakers platform, also included the statement:

"The registration of Negroes is the most serious problem in Louisiana and in the Southland. Negroes have not reached the intelligence level to exercise the right to vote"

Congressman Domengeaux closed the speech last December by charging that Earl K. Long, another gubernationial candidate, was "helping to get those Negroes registered."

Still Clinging

The exact wordage of the unanimously adopted resolution discloses that the unreconstructed white citizens of the south are clinging to what appears to be the last vestige of their traditionally vicious "states rights" program.

The Resolution

Take a look at just part of the resolution: "WHEREAS, the Democratic State Central Committee of the State of Louisiana has ordered the Democratic primary to be held throughout the State of Louisiana on August 31, 1948 for the purpose of nominating United States Senators, Congressmen. Public Service Commissioners, etc. .. THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the Democratic Executive Committee of the Parish of East Carroll that a white Democratic Primary to be held August 31, 1948 in Ward 2 and Ward 3 of East Carroll . ." NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 5. — The Progressive Party announced that it will take to the courts its fight for the right of Negro citizens of St. Bernard Parish to register so that they can vote in the presidential election.

The method used to bar more than a dozen Negroes from registering in the parish recently, said the Progressive Party, is for the Registrar, Mrs. Camilla LeClerc, to stay away from her office during legally prescribed registration days and hours. LAKE ARTHUR, LA. — A definite attempt to discourage Negroes from voting in the Louisiana gubernatorial democratic primary on Jan. 20, in fact a direct threat obviously designed to frighten Negroes and keep them from participating in the election was brought to light here last Friday by the Louisiana State Association of NAACP Branches.

According to the organization's officials, Howard Higginbotham, a resident of this city, received a "warning" through the mails on Friday telling him that he and eight other Negro voters would "be out of business" if they voted in the primary The letter, postmarked, "Lake Arthur, La., January 15, 5 p. m., 1948", was signed with a crudely drawn skull and cross bones and the letters "KKK."

The letter stated:

"Warning· Leader, if you or any of 8 voters try a act on 20th it will mean that you will be out of business. If one vote of the 8 you shall be the one to pay:-Emma Collin, Roosevelt Collin, Rodney Collin, Albert Cheney, Booker T. Brown, you and your wife." (signed) KKK." 1-24-48

This town is located in Jefferson Davis parish of Louisiana where there are more than 200 Negroes registered as voters. The group mentioned in the threatening letter includes all of the Negro registered voters in Lake Arthur, the other registered Negro voters residing in Jennings and other towns of the parish.

Notified of the threat, Attorney A. P. Tureaud of New Orleans, president of the State NAACP Conference, immediately requested the United States Department of Justice to investigate and to prosecute any violation of civil rights. He sent copies of the letter to postal inspectors and the United States Attorney General and urged an immediate probe of the condition and the protection of Negroes desiring to exercise their franchise in the primary. 1-24-48

Late Saturday, Mr. Tureaud said he was awaiting a reply from government authorities.

Bar On Negro Voting

Montgomery, Ala.

JACKSON, MISS.—(AP)—The House of Representatives gave its final approval Wednesday to a proposed constitutional amendment which supporters say is designed to bar Negroes from voting.

Miss.

The proposal, which would bar all persons from voting who do not "sustain a good moral character," was approved after more than an hour of secret debate. It went to the Senate where it must pass on three readings before being submitted to the people in the form of an amendment to the State constitution. 4-1-48

Proponents of the constitutional amendment have been frank in saying it is intended to bar Negroes from voting.

Rep. Harvey T. Ross, of Coahoma County, last week told the House that 60 per cent of the population in his country is Negro and that "we can't stop them (from voting) under present law."

Eastland Wants Voters To Have Good Character

He Will Ask Mississippi Electors To Ratify Amendment

JACKSON, MISS.—(AP)—Sen. James O. Eastland (D), Mississippi, said Sunday he proposed to stump the state in the interest of a constitutional amendment that would require voters to sustain a good moral character.

When the amendment was being discussed on the floor of the Mississippi legislature several months ago it was described by some lawmakers as intended to make voting by Negroes more difficult.

Mississippi voters will ratify or reject the proposed amendment in the Nov. 2 general election.

Under its provisions local election officials would decide whether a prospective voter meets moral qualifications to cast his ballot.

Legislative proponents asserted that a large percentage of Mississippi Negroes live together without being married and consequently would be barred from the polls.

A leader in the States' Rights movement, Eastland also said Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower would be "an excellent prospect" for Democratic presidential nomination, but expressed doubts as to his "availability."

He added that Eisenhower and other high officials of the armed forces are against anti-segregation plans for the forces.

Eastland suggested that the South "on the level of the Southern Governors' Conference" create a long-term organization to counteract development of an anti-Southern point of view in other sections.

He said the South should:

1. Show an independent hand in politician maneuvering.
2. Work with individual sections in the East, North and West to oppose activities of Communistic and minority groups.
3. Sponsor an information set-up to "lay our case before the people of the North."

On the international situation, Eastland said, regarding the blocking off of supplies to Berlin by the Russians, "our country must fulfill its obligations and use force if necessary."

"This will prevent war and give the world a breathing space in which to find a peaceful solution," he asserted.

Miss. Solons Fear Constitution Teaching Bill Would Aid Negroes

World Memphis Tenn

Fri. 1-30-48

JACKSON, Miss.—(ANP)—The real reason why Negroes are denied the vote franchise came to light here Saturday when a bill requiring that the state constitution be taught in public schools reached the state legislature. It is not that Negroes are not good citizens nor that they know little or nothing of how the federal, state and local governments are operated. It's all because proponents of "white supremacy" want to keep them from preparing themselves for voting.

Memphis Tenn. 34e(2)

The measure would insert in the curriculum of Mississippi high schools the teaching of the state constitution. However, Sen. John Culkin of Vicksburg objected vigorously to its passage because "if a Negro presented a circuit clerk with a diploma showing he had been taught the state constitution, the clerk might find it difficult not to register him.

FARMER VOTE BAR

The state constitution requires, among other things, that a voter be able to read or interpret it to qualify to vote. This provision has been used in the past to prevent Negroes from registering to vote in Democratic party primaries.

The legislature is also up in arms over two other measures, one which would amend present primary laws requiring voters to support the nominee of the party in whose primary they participate and the other authorizing a department of law at Alcorn A. and M. College. Mississippi has no professional schools for Negroes, except that of teacher training at Alcorn Word

The bill to amend primary laws as introduced three days after Gov. Fielding L. Wright warned Democratic leaders that state party members would no longer tolerate "their sponorship of anti southern legislation." It provides, in the election of a President and a vice-president, that "votes may be cast entirely without regard to party lines and without any penalty for doing so."

Washington

Backward Step

34e(2) Miss.

The plea for moderation in pressing for Federal legislation affecting civil rights would come with better grace from the Southern States if they themselves were making a more vigorous effort to conform to basic American principles. While leaders of the Democratic Party were sweating over their civil-rights plank at Philadelphia, word came from Mississippi that Senator Eastland, who has virtually no opposition in his campaign for reelection, will stump the State for an oppressive change in the Mississippi constitution. This proposed modification would permit election authorities to require that applicants for registration offer evidence that they had "sustained" a "good moral character." Fri 7/16 48

Patently this is a scheme to disfranchise Negroes, or, rather, to prevent them from taking advantage of the right they won through a Supreme Court decision of participating in the Democratic primaries. Officials having the power to exclude from the polls voters supposed to lack "good moral character" could exercise dictatorial control over the choice of public officials. Government by the people would be changed to government by sufferance of those in power. The scheme is so obnoxious to the ideals of American democracy that it will strengthen the hands of those who are trying to impose upon the South a code of civil rights that it is not willing to accept. How long will it take for politicians of the deep South to understand that their own flagrant departures from the American concept of human rights is the strongest argument of the extremists who wish to make Washington responsible for enforcement of all civil rights?

Out-Boswelling Boswell

Birmingham News

Mississippi voters in November will cast ballots on a proposed constitutional amendment that goes farther even than Alabama's Boswell Amendment in giving broad powers to boards of registrars. The amendment would permit Mississippi registrars to refuse the franchise to applicants they do not regard as "morally qualified" to vote.

Birmingham, Ala.

In one respect, of course, the Mississippi proposal is not unique. In no state are convicts permitted to vote. Persons convicted of crimes involving moral turpitude or of crimes punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary are not qualified in Alabama. Similar provisions are found in most states. They are wise provisions. Persons convicted of felonies are usually too low in morals or in intelligence to warrant the ballot.

Mar. 5-48

But Mississippi goes farther. It would empower boards of registrars to make broad conclusions on a person's morality.

Elaborate Precautions To Foil Group

Amendments Of Bias Heavily Approved In State

Atlanta Ga

JACKSON, Miss.— (ANP)— The state of Mississippi, like its southren sisters, is taking elaborate precautions to foil attempts of Negroes to qualify or participate in the coming elections, by rigging up two more to its already three pronged voting laws. The two additions are to close up all loopholes which might be used, whether or not the poll tax law goes.

First of its anti-Negro vote laws is the poll tax, which the state is fearful will be abolished if President Truman and northern Republicans can get a federal law on the books mixing this barrier to voting. The poll tax has been the mainstay against Negroes who attempted to exercise the franchise. It is $2 a year and must be paid for at least the last two previous years.

READING, EXPLANATION

Backing this up, is a provision of the state constitution requiring no one shall be registered, for voting unless he is able to read any section of the state constitution or give a reasonable explanation of it when it is read to him.

Feeling that these two were not enough, since the agitation is beng carried on the abolish the poll tax and thus render the constitutional provision almost ineffective, a third amendment was proposed which provides that applicants must be able to "read and explain" any section of the constitution. Similar to that adopted by Alabama last year, it will go before the people at the November election.

34e(2)

Fourth in the anti-Negro voting movement is a proposal to amend the constitution to provide that a voter must be of "proven good moral character," with burden of proof resting upon the applicant. Advocates of this admendment say that the same provision is to be found in Connecticut's constitution, "the most Yankee state in the union." The election commission would have the power to refuse balloting to any person deemed wanting in moral character.

Rep. John Bell Williams, one-armed Air Force veteran, also won renomination in the voting yesterday; and Reps. William M. Colmer and Thomas G. Abernethy held commanding leads over their opponents on the basis of incomplete returns.

Rankin captured a strong majority in his northeastern hill country's First Congressional District, and forced a quick admission of defeat by two younger opponents.

Wed 8-25-48

Victory in the Democratic primary is tantamount to election in single-party Mississippi.

The 66-year-old Rankin, dean of Mississippi's congressmen, won 13,923 ballots against 5,579 for Judge Raymond Jarvis and 4,335 for Claude F. Clayton, a war veteran, in unofficial returns from 202 boxes out of 224.

Jarvis and Clayton conceded Rankin's nomination a little more than three hours after polls shut down.

Rankin led in all 10-counties of the district.

Rep. Williams, one-armed Air Force veteran in the populous southwestern Seventh District, buried his opponent in an avalanche of votes.

William ticketed 16,750 ballots to 4,405 in 208 out of 320 precincts for State Sen. Decatur P. Butler. The 28-year-old Butler, a freshman candidate, conceded and extended his congratulations.

Butler, who started his public career as a Senate page during the administration of the late Theodore G. Bilbo, also announced he would run again next time.

New Mexico Also Has Its Racial Voting Case

Columbia, S.C.

The other day a special three-judge federal court in Santa Fe handed down an opinion holding that a New Mexican constitutional provision denying the right to vote to Indians not taxed was contrary to the United States constitution and therefore null and void.

The decision, in effect, gives the voting privilege in New Mexico to Indians.

The court ruled that New Mexico's constitutional section providing that "Indians not taxed" may not vote contravenes the Fifteenth amendment to the United States constitution which guarantees that no citizen may be denied the ballot on account of race or color.

The action grew out of the refusal of a clerk of Valencia county to register Miguel H. Trujillo, an Isleta Indian, living at the Laguna Pueblo, to vote in the New Mexico primary election on June 8.

And the action closely parallels the Elmore case in South Carolina. More attention, of course, has been paid to the denial of the ballot to the Negroes in the primaries of some of the Southern states, but Arizona in denying the ballot to Indians was doing no more nor less than South Carolina was doing, although its methods may have been different.

The Arizona decision was inevitable like the Waring-Parker decisions in the South Carolina case. No state can prohibit either Negroes or Indians voting on account of race or color. It cannot prevent them voting in the primary since the courts now consider the primary a part of the electoral process.

Arizona might, of course, have eliminated the racial angle and provided that payment of taxes be made a qualification for voting. But it limited this tax paying qualification to the members of one race, the Indians.

South Carolina may yet limit participation in the Democratic primary to Democrats, but it cannot limit participation to white Democrats.

Registrar Quits Job Rather Than Qualify Negroes

FAIRMONT, N. C.—The appearance of more than 100 Negroes prompted the resignation of a Mr. Van Beach, registrar, here Saturday. Two Negroes had been successfully registered before the resignation. After the resignation "it was impossible to register them," Eugene D. Bond, chairman of the Robeson County Board of elections. said.

Bond said that Van Beach resigned because his job was "not satisfactory."

On the other hand, Robert H. Beatty, chairman and organizer of the Cumberland County Voters League, said Beach resigned rather than register the Negroes. He said that Mrs. Rosa McArthur and C. L. Jones qualified in the first precinct after which Beach resigned.

Beatty reported that Mrs. McArthur qualified after she had read and explained sections 2, 7 and 20 of Article 1 of the United States Constitution and explained habeas corpus. Her test extended from 10 a. m. until noon, when the registrar took two hours for lunch, Beatty said, and she was not notified that she had qualified until 2:30 in the afternoon. 5-22-48

Voting Decision Questioned

Columbia, S.C.

"A people's electoral methods are the express image of its electoral talent."—Thomas Carlyle.

Tues. —— 1-13-48

Through the years, electoral methods of the South have reflected a talent for keeping enormous Negro populations from voting in such numbers and lack of qualification as would bring disaster both to whites and blacks. As southern Negroes have advanced in education and responsibility, more and more of them are being permitted to vote. The process must continue and needs championing by right-minded southern leaders. But many perfectly right-minded ones are certain that the South is still in need of electoral talent to save it from outside pressures for imposing more Negro political power than is safe or equitable.

Is it equitable, some of these are asking, to deny southern whites the right to a political party of their own if others are free to organize political parties, too? Is it equitable to deny a group of people the right to organize politically on a basis of the issue they deem paramount over all others? Does the fact that the organizing results in victory at the polls make it any the less a right of individuals under our democracy?

In the South Carolina case, the federal circuit court has accepted the argument that the white primary is actually the election, since its nominees always win. But isn't this like denying the right of voting majorities to win? Isn't it like saying Republicans in rock-ribbed Maine should let Democrats vote in their primaries because those really determine Maine elections?

Tues. —— 1-13-48

If what the court has in mind is that exclusion must be on a basis of political beliefs rather than color of skin, these southerners are wondering if some such plan as has been undertaken in Mississippi will be acceptable, namely, requiring of those who seek to vote in Democratic primaries such political conviction as no Negro would be likely to have and as would be disproved by his very application?

The Record

General elections, of course, are not yet wide open to Negro voters even though, as stated above, more and more are being accepted. Some southern leaders hold that, as this situation grows, maintenance of the white primary would bring about a Negro primary, too, and a hateful division of white against black on general election day. That is a consideration calling for deep thought among Southerners in their present efforts to preserve the white primary.

Columbia, S.C.

But the federal courts, as such, have before them only the legality, not the political wisdom, of the white primary. And it is hard to find illegality—or inequity—in letting Americans organize exclusively on the political question they consider most important. If the matter could be considered in a vaccum, free of all political or social sympathies, the legal controversy would be over the general election, not the primary, I believe. Excluding Negroes from the former is a very different matter legally from primary exclusion, one would suppose.

Tues. —— 1-13-48

Has not the circuit court looked in the wrong place, therefore, for southern political sin when it says white primaries determine elections and should be open to all? Should not the court direct its attention not to the exclusiveness of the primaries but to what lets them determine elections?

In Defense of the South

The Courier-Journal

Many unjust and uninformed critics have maligned the South for asserting its inalienable right to State sovereignty. This Union was made possible through mutual and unqualified recognition of States' rights, and that is all the South is contending for today.

Let us appeal to reason. The Negro should not have been given unrestricted universal suffrage. This privilege can only come through his own personal and concerted application to attain this qualification. In many localities in Southern States the Negro is in the majority and possesses a very small per cent of the taxable wealth. To give him a free hand to levy taxes and to fill the legislatures and Congress with unqualified Negro representation would be a gigantic tragedy, disastrous to the entire nation.

This great country was won and sustained through the spirit of rebellion against domination. Since when has the glory been stripped from the voice of the immortal who cried, "If this be treason, make the most of it"? Mon. 3-15-48

NEW MOVES IN THE SOUTH TO RESTRICT NEGRO VOTING

The Times

Supporters of the 'White Primary' Won't Give Up Despite High Court Ruling

New York, N.Y.

By GEORGE HATCHER

Sun. 4-25-48

Special to THE

ATLANTA, Ga., April 24—White-supremacy advocates in scattered Southern areas this week predicted adoption of new measures to restrict the participation of Negroes in Democratic party primaries.

All hope for any form of a "legal white primary" appeared to have been abandoned as the result of the United States Supreme Court's refusal to review a lower court decision outlawing electoral procedure that discriminated against Negroes. But it is expected that there will be new qualification laws for voters in some states, and the tightening of similar statutes in others.

From many quarters, including some which had supported the white primary in principle, came appeals for Southerners to accept the high court action as final and to attempt no further efforts to circumvent the law. 4-25-48

But party leaders in Columbia, the South Carolina capital, were represented as favoring a special session of the General Assembly to enact voters' qualifications and other primary election laws.

On Tuesday, the day following the high court decision, a few Negro electors turned out in Columbia to vote in a city primary. It was the first time they had participated in a meaningful South Carolina primary since carpetbag rule was overthrown in 1876.

In Mississippi the legislative session just ended provided for a constitutional referendum on a proposal which would make it mandatory for all voters to be "of good moral character."

In Louisiana the General Assembly convening this summer is expected to approve a requirement that all future registered voters must have a grammar school education. The Times

Educational and character requirements are already in force in some of the other Southern states. And the poll tax remains in Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. New York, N.Y.

Georgia's gubernatorial campaign, with the principals in the 1946-47 "two-Governors' battle"—Gov. M. E. Thompson and Herman Talmadge opposing each other—may be strongly affected by the Supreme Court decision. Mr. Talmadge has been promising to restore the "white primary." His supporters in the last Legislature pushed through a white-primary measure, but Governor Thompson vetoed it. Sun. 4-25-48

According to a survey just completed by the Southern Regional Council, there are 5,069,805 Negroes of voting age in the Southern states and only 610,000 of them at present qualified to vote. Qualified whites, the council estimates, outnumber the Negroes from 14 to 1 in Florida to 100 to 1 in Louisiana.

Disfranchisement Found To Be Gradually Fading Out

Number of Colored Voters In South Has Tripled In The Past 8 Years

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va.

Sat. 1-24-48

PETERSBURG, Va.— The number of Negro voters in the South has tripled since 1940, according to a report prepared by Dr. Luther P. Jackson, professor of history at Virginia State College, for the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta, Ga.

number of Negro voters increased

For the South as a whole, the from 211,000 in 1940 to 645,000 in 1947, the latter figure representing 12 per cent of the Negro population of voting age.

Leading the southern states in this increase is Georgia, where Negro enrollment is estimated to have jumped from 20,000 to 125,000 between 1940 and 1947. But the study shows that it is the border state of Oklahoma which has the highest percentage of its eligible Negro population qualified as voters—29.6 per cent.

POLL TAX STATE

Although seven southern states retain the poll tax, the report declares, only in Mississippi. Virginia and Alabama does it "constitute a significant barrier, either by the amount of money to be paid, by the time and method of payment, or by its cumulative features."

On the basis of a state-by-state inquiry into voting practices, Dr. Jackson concludes that it is registration which is most commonly used as a means of discrimination against potential Negro voters. This is accomplished, he states, by registrars who make severe application of qualification requirements against Negroes only, by policies of evasion, and by deliberate insults or threats at registration places.

Dr. Luther P. Jackson, professor of history at Virginia State College, directed the survey which brought out the fact that many whites in the south have encouraged Negroes "in the pursuit of these efforts toward a fuller citizenship."

It was also pointed out that white supremacy "was not threatened" by the increase in the number of Negro voters because the number of white qualified voters has increased at a faster rate.

A noteworthy fact of the survey is the realization that Negroes vote more in cities where they have a chance to work on the city program. Virginia, N. C., S. C., Ga., Fla., Tex., Ark., Tenn., and Okla. are named as those places where enthusiasm runs high. But Ala., Miss. and Louisiana received a low rating. In the former cities Negroes

In the former cities Negroes have a chance to compete in elections to city councils, city commissions and school boards

"It is not always the barriers to voting which disqualify the colored people, but sometimes the absence of a voting consciousness among them," the report continued.

The report also pointed out, contrary to the belief of many, that "it would be difficult to point to more than a handful of Southern cities with a population of 25,000 or more in which there is vigorous opposition to Negroes becoming registered voters. In Memphis, Atlanta, Jacksonville or New Orleans they may qualify with as much ease as they may in any Northern City."

Georgia headed the state list for the increase with the number of voters rising from 20,000 to 125,000 during the past eight years. Savannah, Ga., was listed as the leading city. Oklahoma was listed as having the largest percentage of Negro qualified voters 29.6 per cent. Total figures for the south were listed as 211,000 in 1940, and 645,000 in 1947. The 1947 figure represents 12 per cent of the Negro population which is of voting age.

In Nashville, Tenn., last week at a session of the Race Relations Institute conference, Henry Lee Moon, director of public relations for the NAACP predicted that 4,000,000 Negroes will vote in the November elections. He said each candidate —President Truman, Governor Dewey and Henry Wallace—will probably receive a third of the total Negro votes cast.

G MEETING

34 B (2)

White Supremacy Democrats from all over the South are preparing for the big meeting scheduled for Jackson, Mississippi, on May 10. There they will decide when and whether to break with the national party of Truman and civil rights.

New Republic

New York

Alabama Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile corporation lawyer, has organized Alabama's leading reactionaries into a "State Democratic Campaign Committee." This is publicly blackmailing candidates for delegate to the Democratic National Convention into advance pledges to walk out at Philadelphia if "any part" of President Truman's civil-rights program is adopted in the platform.

Mon. 5-3-48

McCorvey warned he would give "wide publicity" before the May 4 primary to the list of those who do not agree to bolt on his terms. Twenty-seven candidates for the 34 delegate positions quickly bowed to his will. Governor "Big Jim" Folsom, who is against any walkout, has set out to "free" McCorvey's captive delegates.

Tennessee's Boss Crump has sworn that "we will never vote for Harry Truman down this way," and he will undoubtedly be able to hold a part of Tennessee's voters.

34 B (2)

The Talmadge forces in Georgia are preparing an even deeper last ditch from which to carry on the fight against Truman. Secretary of State Ben Fortson has taken advantage of the Republican National Committee's action—in recognizing a rump "lily-white" slate of delegates for the Republican convention instead of the "Regular" organization of past years—to refuse to provide the machinery for a primary.

New Republic

New York N.Y.

In 1944, although the Regulars had national sanction, Georgia state officials placed another mixed slate on the ballot. At that time, the Regulars charge, Talmadge's motive was to set up an electoral alternative to Roosevelt and the Democrats in case he wanted it in the general election. Should the '48 convention come out four-square for civil-liberties laws, Georgia White Supremacists would still have a back door through which to revolt, by joining the lily-white Republicans on the general election ballot.

Negro Says Race's Vote Still No Threat In South

34 B (2)

The Courier - Journal

Atlanta, July 17 (AP)—A Negro professor said today that there is no threat to "white supremacy" in the South yet from the ballot-armed members of his race.

The threat, said Dr. Luther P. Jackson of Virginia State College, simply does not exist though the number of qualified Negro voters increased from 211,000 in 1940 to 645,000 in 1947.

Dr. Jackson, a professor of history, observed in a report for the Southern Regional Council:

"In spite of the gains made by Negroes as voters during the decade of the 1940's, it is correct to say that the whites have likewise been advancing and in most states at a faster rate. . . . In Florida, the ratio is about 14 to 1; in Virginia, 20 to 1, and in Louisiana, 100 to 1."

Sun. 7-18

Barriers Are Reduced.

While the barriers to registration of Negroes as voters still are considerable. said Dr. Jackson. ment of a slightly higher tax, but they are being reduced slowly from their former heights.

He observed that of the 11 Southern States which once required payment of a poll tax, four have abolished it. These are Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, and North Carolina.

7-18-48

South Carolina and Arkansas retain the poll tax, but it is only one dollar and nonaccumulative. Texas and Tennessee require payagain it is nonaccumulative.

18 "Only Mississippi, Virginia, and Alabama remain, then," he wrote, "where this celebrated instrument constitutes a significant barrier. . . ."

High Court Asked to Keep S.C. Primary Lily-White

The Afro American

WASHINGTON

Fighting to the last ditch to keep colored citizens from voting in primary elections, Democratic party officials of Richmond County, S.C., have asked the Supreme Courte toshrd lcmfwy vbgkq shrdl Court to overrule a lower court decision giving all groups the right to vote in Democratic primaries.

Baltimore, Md.

The U.S. Circuit Court in Richmond ruled that election machinery could not be upheld if its purpose was to deny colored citizens, on account of race or color, an effective voice in the government of their country, their State or the community in which they lived.

Notice of Authority

Contending that the Democratic party in South Carolina is a voluntary political association which can exercise unrestricted choice of membership, the party officials say the Circuit Court had no authority to act in the case.

After the Supreme Court ruled in 1944 that Texas could not bar colored people from the Democratic primaries, South Carolina took its primary laws from the statute books and turned the Democratic party into a private affair, not created by law.

"There was no State action involved and the primary was not required by law and was not an election," the appeal papers state. It adds that primary elections are conducted solely under party rules.

Fighting the Democrats private club plan, the colored citizens took the case to court last July and Judge J. W. Waring ruled in Charleston that they could not be excluded despite the club system. He opined that the S.C. Democratic party is no different now than it was before 1944.

His opinion was upheld by Judge John J. Parker of Richmond later.

Whether the Supreme Court will review the case will be announced later. A refusal is tantamount to an upholding the decision.

Court To Hear Negro's Bid To Vote In Primary

CHARLESTON, S. C., July 16— — A Negro's request for the [illegible] vote in South Carolina's Democratic primary was to be heard in Federal District Court today.

The petition was filed by David Brown, of Beaufort County. It is opposed by 88 state and county officials of the Democratic Party.

Brown has asked for a permanent injunction against state party rules that limit Negro enrollment membership, and a pledge endorsing racial segregation, are required for primary voting rights.

The petition will be heard by Judge J. Waties Waring. Judge Waring ruled a year ago that qualified Negro electors be allowed to vote in the party's primary elections.

Since then, the party has accorded membership only to those Negroes who hold general election registration certificates. Brown contends that Waring's order includes other Negroes as well.

B'ham News

Pending the hearing, a Federal Court order has reopened party enrollment books to Negroes. The books normally are closed June 22.

7-16-48

Negro leaders in the state claim several counties have not complied with this order and that others are still demanding that Negroes possess the general election certificates.

Negroes Charge Four Counties Violate Order

Columbia Record

Violations in four counties of a federal order opening Democratic enrolment books, to Negroes were charged today by John H. McCray, chairman of the Progressive Democrats.

McCray said that affidavits of violations in Marion, Sumter, Marlboro and Chesterfield counties had been obtained. Attorneys for the Negroes had taken the affidavits under advisement, he said.

It was understood, however, that plans were made to turn these affidavits over to Federal Judge J. Waties Waring of Charleston. He ruled in two separate decisions that the South Carolina Democratic party must open its primaries and enrolment books to Negroes.

McCray charged that the violations occurred since Judge Waring's second order July 19 in the David Brown suit against the party leaders.

He said that in those counties Negroes were required either to present registration certificates or submit to the regulations necessary to obtain these certificates. Some Negroes, he said, reported they had to show poll tax receipts to be able to read and interpret the constitution to enrol on the party books.

Sat 7-31-48

McCray charged that these requisites were in violation of the order of Waring specifying that there should be no political discrimination because of race, color or creed.

He said that white persons in those counties were able to enrol by merely signing their names to the books.

"This practice might be more widespread than the violations in these four counties would indicate," McCray said.

"We expect one or two instances of this kind, especially this year, but we intend to go to court on them." He requested Negroes having difficulty enroling to report to the Progressive Democrats.

While he said attorneys for the Negroes were studying the violations, McCray expressed a desire to "see the whole election tied up and thrown out where violations occur."

McCray insisted that the Progressive Democrats were operating within the framework of the Democratic party.

"We never had any intention of running an opposite party," he said.

COLUMBIA, ~~S. C.~~ Aug. 10.—(UP)—Senator Burnett R. Maybank, never a loser in a South Carolina primary, swung into a majority lead over four opponents Tuesday night as returns rolled in from a Democratic senatorial primary in which negroes voted freely.

Memphis Tenn.

Returns from 427 of the state's 1565 precincts gave Maybank 41,236 to 18,236 for former Representative William J. Bryan Dorn, 11,743 for Neville Bennett, 4595 for Alan Johnstone and 2912 for Marcus Stone.

A tide of Maybank votes from Charleston, where he was former mayor and began his rise to the top of Palmetto State politics, enabled him to establish his majority as the count of precincts approached the one-third mark.

Negroes voted heavily in Charleston as in other larger cities, their unqualified voting rights assured for a primary for the first time since the Reconstruction.

South Carolina Disappoints Northern Critics

A great many South Carolinians, who had been misled by the politicians and their fellow travelers into thinking that the world would end when the Negroes voted in the Democratic primaries of South Carolina, must feel a little silly now.

For Negroes voted in substantial numbers in Tuesday's primary. More voted, maybe many more than would have been the case had the party leaders had the good sense to have accepted Negro Democrats as party members in the beginning as the federal courts had said they should be. Instead the party tried to find a way around the decisions and the Negroes had to make a second fight in the courts to get the rights the courts had declared they had. Anything denied takes on especial attractions for any person.

And everywhere the Negroes conducted themselves with decorum. There was not a single instance, so far reported, of any untoward incident. They went to the polls, got their ballots, made their choice, voted.

This test was made under what must have been the most trying of conditions. The Democratic primary in South Carolina is still a lawless primary. The general assembly which might have enacted laws to govern the primary—and they should have been enacted—was not summoned into special session or given the chance to do anything. That will be the job for the new legislature, taking up its work next year.

All along the Negro leaders in the fight to obtain the ballot have displayed commendable restraint. They did not suggest that Negroes attend the club meetings, but as a matter of fact seem to have advised them not to attend, expecting the party to do what the Elmore decisions required should be done. A few Negroes did attend a club meeting in Dillon county on their own hook and the white majority of the club members did a generous thing by electing them delegates to the county convention. They were not seated, of course, under instructions from the state executive committee, but that East Dillon club has been vindicated by every act and every decision since then.

There has been confusion worse confounded ever since the state convention. It could have been eliminated and avoided, as it should have, but it wasn't. Negro participation in the primary, under compulsion of the courts as it had to be, instead of decreasing racial prejudice appeals in the campaign intensified them.

But the white voters—and they deserve commendation also—proved themselve better men than the politicians. They accepted the verdict of the courts. Many of them, maybe the majority of them, would have been willing to have seen the party grant qualified Negroes the right to party membership without federal court compulsion. And this would have been better still. But it was not to be.

But because Tuesday's primary, in which Negroes voted in substantial numbers for the first time, passed off without incident there must be wailing and gnashing of teeth in the North where too often the dogooders succumb to the temptation to consider that the South is nothing but a region of race baiters.

As The Record said before—it will bear repeating—South Carolina did itself proud Tuesday.

Governor Thurmond Should Act On Negro's Charges

One incident of violence against a Negro participating in the first primary, and only one, has been reported.

A Negro Baptist minister, the Rev. Archie Ware, 66 years old, has now filed an affidavit with Tom Clark, attorney general of the United States, in which he charges that he was beaten and knifed as he left a Calhoun Falls voting place after casting his ballot in the first primary.

The affidavit gave details of the alleged attack by a group of white men carrying knives and other weapons. One, the affidavit declared, beat the Negro minister with a club and then others set upon him with knives.

The affidavit should have been filed also with Governor J. Strom Thurmond. But the Governor can take notice of the case without the affidavit. Believing in state rights, he defends the right of the states to control their own law enforcement and should be especially zealous to see to it that nothing like the Abbeville county incident shall occur or if it occurs that it shall not go unpunished. It was his prompt action in the Greenville lynching that has won him approbation even as the States Rights candidate for president.

He should act now with equal promptness to have the Calhoun Falls report investigated and if there be violation of law to bring the law violators to trial. State rights cannot exist without state responsibility.

South Carolina is now minus the presence of the Rev. Archie Ware of Calhoun Falls who was viciously attacked after he voted in the Democratic primary of August 10.

Not only has the 66 year old minister taken himself from the state but he has subsequently sold his home and business in the town of Calhoun Falls, and doesn't plan to return to live in the state of his birth.

This is a sad indictment of certain white people in the state. It is always sad to observe that peace loving citizens cannot find enjoyment and happiness in their homes while following purely legal actions. Rev. Ware broke no law. He was simply a Negro who wanted to vote.

We trust that that there will not be another such incident anywhere in the state. We hope also that the state and federal government will apprehend the guilty parties and compel them to face the full fury of our system of law and order.

Rev. Ware Balks At Facing Co. Sheriff

Rev. Archie Ware, 66 year old Calhoun Falls minister whose brutal violation by a group of men on August 10 has aroused general interest, balked at attending a meeting of investigators, which included the sheriff of Abbeville county this week.

The Reverend Ware, who traveled more than 1,000 miles to be back in the state for the meeting between civic leaders and investigating officers, said he felt such a meeting with any person from Abbeville county present, might again place his life in jeopardy and before the meeting was scheduled to begin at 10 a. m. Friday departed from the state and had not heard from by Tuesday.

The minister, much improved following the brutals stabbings he suffered after voting in the first sate primray this year, became obviously jittery and unnerved when told that the Abbeville county sheriff woud be present at the conference.

Citing several instances in which Negroes from that section of the state reported to have been shot to death by whites because the former stood up for thier rights, the minister declared he didn't wish again to be placed in the position of facing death. No change was made in his thinking after lengthy reassurances and discussions to the contrary.

Meanwhile, invetigations by both the state constabulary and the U. S. Department of Justice were believed underway this week.

Thousands of Richland county voters will trek to the polls Tuesday to cast ballots to nominate four candidates to the House of Representatives, and a local contest will name the next magistrate for Waverly.

The vote is expected to fall far short of the 18,000 who voted in the first primary August 10.

Polls will open at 8 a. m. and close at 6 p. m. in 54 Richland precincts.

County Committee To Meet

John I. Rice will preside at the county Democratic executive committee meeting to be held at 11 a. m. Thursday at the Wade Hampton hotel when results of the second primary will be declared.

Duncan Urges Promptness

The assistant party secretary, Sidney D. Duncan, urged executive committeemen to call for the election boxes at the courthouse.

The boxes were lined up in the first floor corridor and many remained to be called for this afternoon.

The boxes contain the ballots and election paraphernalia.

Candidates Are Listed

The eight candidates for the four remaining places on the delegation are as follows: (Vote for four) Edmund G. Grant, Bee Harper, James H. Hayne, M. V. Horne, Alva M. Lumpkin, Jr., G. Raymond McElveen, Francis L. Rawl, John T. Sloan, Jr.

The two candidates for Waverly magistrate, which area serves Five Points, Waverly, Edgewood, Lakeview and Hampton, are Cal M. Lawson and L. P. Rivers, Sr.

Thre other House members, S. Rhea Haskell, Claud N. Sapp, Jr., and A. Ray Hinnant, were nominated on the first ballot.

Ward Nine Changed

There will be only one change in polling places from the first primary.

Ward 9, which was on Taylor street, has been moved just around the corner in front of the Barber Advertising company, 1529 Lyon street, in order to avoid the long lines of congestion which occurred at the first primary. Ward 9 has a large voting population, including many Negroes, who cast their first ballots in a Democratic primary two weeks ago.

Clergy Leads South Carolinians To Register For Voting In 1948

Journal & Guide

Norfolk, Va.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Despite the possibility that Democratic party leaders in the state may yet determine upon an appeal of the historic federal court decision affirming the right of Negroes to vote in the party primaries in South Carolina, Negro leaders here have started a drive 150,000 qualified Negro voters in the state in 1948.

Columbia pastors and ministers lead the way to the polls in 1948 Monday and Tuesday when the entire personnel present at both ministerial unions adjourned their weekly meetings to the registration office in Richland county courthouse and there qualified to vote by obtaining registration certificates. Sat. 1-17-48

BAPTIST MINISTERS LEAD

Baptist ministers took the first step when James M. Hinton, state NAACP president, addressed them at their regular meeting Monday. The International Alliance, made up of all city pastors, took the same action at their meeting the next day.

Both the Pilgrim and North Carolina Mutual Insurance district officers here reported their agents had registered 100 percent. Office workers at the Lighthouse and Informer had also registered.

OTHER ESTABLISHMENTS

Other establishments reported that many of their employees had registered and many of Columbia's business and professionals left their posts to qualify to vote.

In South Carolina all voting certificates issued before 1948 began became null and void December 31, 1947. This means that citizens wishing to be in good standing and qualified to vote without questioning, must obtain new certificates during the year. [illegible]

Ward 3 Attempts 'Trick' On Woman

Arkansas Survey

Only reported instance of an irregularity [illegible] voting of Negroes came from Ward Three where four women saw their votes placed in separate envelopes of which their names had been written, and cast in the regular ballot box.

Tues. 4-25-44

The women were, Mrs. J. L. Reeder, Mrs. Mittie Pearson, Mrs. Alberta Marshall and Mrs. Margaret Harris all of whom appeared shortly after three o'clock in a party of friends who were accompanying each other to respective voting places.

Mrs. Reeder said the man in charge had ordered each to place their names on the envelopes and had made some remark "about going to jail."

James M. Hinton, state NAACP president, and attorney Harold R. Boulware, both said however that they had received assurance from city Democratic chairman W. Felix Wheeler that the votes would be counted, that the precinct worker had violated regulations and offered an apology for the action.

TO DECIDE SOUTH CAROLINA DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY CASE

California Voice

Oakland California

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 24—A request for a permanent injunction guaranteeing Negroes the right to vote in South Carolina Democratic primary elections, brought before the Federal District Court here by NAACP Special Counsel Thurgood Marshall, has been taken under advisement after hearings held this week. Fri. 12-10-48

In response to a petition presented by attorneys for the NAACP on behalf of David Brown and other qualified Negro voters, Judge J. Waties Waring granted a preliminary injunction on July 16 prohibiting racial discrimination at the polls.

NAACP lawyers had charged that officials of the South Carolina Democratic Party sought to keep Negroes from voting by barring them from membership in Democratic clubs, and by requiring that voters present Democratic Club registration certificates at the polls. Every member of the Democratic Party had been required to taken an oath to uphold racial segregation and oppose federal fair employment practices legislation.

The NAACP now seeks a permanent injunction to replace the preliminary injunction requiring the State Democratic Party to enroll Negroes with full rights to participate in party affairs. Fri. 12-10-48

SC Party Heads Ask Jury Trial On Negro Voting

Columbia Record

Thurs. 8-12-48

Columbia S.C.

CHARLESTON, Aug. 12—(AP)—South Carolina Democratic party officials named in a federal court suit on Negro voting have asked for a jury trial of the case.

Under federal court procedure, a formal demand for a trial by jury was necessary, and lawyers for the party made the demand yesterday.

The case was brought on complaint of David Brown, who alleged that his name was purged from Beaufort county party enrollment books because he was a Negro.

That complaint resulted in a temporary order by Judge J. Waties Waring of Charleston admitting Negroes to full participation in the party. The temporary order is in effect pending final decision in the Brown case.

Negroes Commit Major Blunder In 'Bloc' Voting

The Columbia Record

That was a major blunder committed by the Negro leaders of South Carolina in Tuesday's Democratic primary, understandable perhaps but still a blunder ranking almost with the Democratic party's foolish attempt to obey the letter of the Elmore decisions and to violate their spirit.

What the Negro Democrats did, as John H. McCray, head of the Progressive Democratic party, explains, was to hold a meeting last week in Richland county, to which all enrolled Negroes were invited.

Columbia S.C.

Now there was nothing wrong with holding the meeting. There was no error made in utilizing it for the purpose of instructing new voters as to how to prepare their ballots. This was a laudable purpose and the instruction probably contributed to the orderly conduct of the election despite the influx of thousands of new Negro voters.

But the Negro leaders went beyond this. The meeting also considered the qualifications of the various candidates and "prepared recommendations and made them available to members." Thurs. 7-12-48

"What was done in Richland county was done throughout the state," McCray tries to defend the error. "It was the only course to avoid confusion and to provide these new voters the opportunity to stand together at the polls, as they have been forced by law, custom and tradition to stand together . . .

"The same practice has been done within all parties in all elections. We don't want to become victims of office seekers now, as we have been the helpless victims of officeholders in the past. Thurs. 7-12-48

"Our votes, while they may not mean much to anybody else, are too priceless to be sold, or to be handed to beggars."

By this single act or more accurately by these 46 acts if similiar meetings were held in every county the Negroes surrendered everything for which they fought in the Elmore and the Brown cases.

If the Negro Democrats can hold a caucus and select candidates, then in logic the white Democrats can hold a caucus or even conduct a primary and choose their candidates. They would be justified even in so doing. Thurs. 7-12-48

By this blunder the Negroes, who undertook so to segregate themselves instead of allowing themselves to be absorbed into the party as they had been arguing they should be—they didn't even achieve their aim of "bloc" voting, of course; in every county there were Negro voters who made up their own minds and in Charleston the Negroes apparently had not one, but two candidates for the United States Senate—have supplied the precedent and the excuse for white "bloc" voting which is all the advocates of the white primary have ever desired.

The white Democrats now, controlling the General Assembly, can abolish the primary, in which Negroes have been allowed to participate, and then provide instead for the holding of nominating conventions by say, the States Rights Democratic party, composed only of whites, and allow the Progressive Democratic party, which should have gone out of existence when Judge J. Waties Waring handed down his latest decision, to do the same thing.

And no Negro who participated in these meetings or in the "bloc" voting—a violation of the spirit of the Democratic party rules of South Carolina, which the Negroes may be forgiven for not knowing—can say them nay. For they have themselves supplied the precedent and the example.

When and if this is done South Carolina will be back just where it was. Except that the general election will be the real election in the state, in which two parties, one composed of whites and one composed of Negroes, vote. And this is exactly what every sensible person, white and Negro, in South Carolina has striven to avoid.

The Negroes' mistake, as has been said, was understandable. They wanted to make their influence as Negroes felt, but this is the reverse of the logic on which the Elmore and Brown cases was based. In arguing for the ballot they argued that there should be no racial discrimination, that Negroes and whites alike should be considered citizens and voters. And this they won. Then they throw it away. They do not want to allow each Negro to make his own choice for himself.

It is disheartening. Negro votes may be too priceless to be "sold or handed to beggars"—and that is a good thing—but they are not too priceless to be frittered away by foolishness. But it isn't necessarily an irretrievable mistake. The Negroes should themselves repudiate this idea and reject it. There should be no "bloc" tickets in the second primary.

Thurs. 7-12-48

And What Now Will Be The South Carolina Plan?

Columbia Record

It begins to appear that the last chance of an amicable settlement of the Negro voting issue is dead. Columbia, S.C.

The Southern rout at Philadelphia—these Southerners have never learned the lesson, as Napoleon taught it, that God is on the side of the heaviest artillery and insisted on taking their state rights fight to the convention floor where they got floored for their pains—has done nothing to calm the tempers of the South Carolina politicians who have been trying to find a way to escape the plain language of Judge J. Waties Waring's decision in the Elmore case.

The judge's refusal to change the date for the hearing on his rule to show cause, still set for today, also will not make those of the Democratic leaders, who were attending the national convention and had to return, any more amiable, despite the fact that it saved them the trouble of being there for the final debacle.

So the Democratic leaders of South Carolina, those of seven counties excepted, will appear in court today at Charleston to argue that they complied with Judge Waring's order when they made provision for Negro qualified electors to vote in the primary, even though they denied Negroes the right to participate in party affairs, refused them the right to enrol and the right to party membership and in addition attempted to limit the participation of qualified Negro electors by requiring them, as well as the whites, to take a thought-control oath.

Five of the six counties which elected to obey the court decisions instead of the party rules—Richland, the sixth and the defendant in the first action, was omitted from the new injunction—will probably file separate returns explaining that none of the allegations of the injunction petition apply to them since they permitted the enrolment of Negroes on the same basis as whites. As far as they are concerned no injunction is necessary. And Jasper isn't enrolling any voters.

The 39 counties which chose to abide by the rules, changed by the state chairman when the protest appeared to be spreading throughout the entire state, have no real hope of winning the argument. The Waring-Parker decisions in the Elmore case settled most of the issues, either directly or by clear implication. And except for the fact that their emotions were all mixed up in the dispute, the party leaders would never have made the mistake of thinking that the politicians' plan, in which the state convention delegates, weary from an all-day session, agreed, actually met the conditions of the decisions.

Judge Waring is practically certain to issue the requested injunction, nullifying those of the state party rules that conflict with his opinion and that of Judge Parker and requiring the Democratic party to allow Negroes to enrol on the same basis as whites and to admit them to party membership.

And what then? The Charleston News and Courier has urged the abandonment of the Democratic primary and this proposal was seriously considered for one year by the party leaders before they hit upon the plan finally adopted, the plan which has been described as a plan to invite a new law suit. This would involve nomination by a convention and the Negroes would have to be allowed to participate in the meetings to name the members of the nominating convention. Or if no nominations were made the choice would have to be made in the general election from all those who elected to make the race, creating a condition which in some cases might result in the election of a Republican since the Democratic vote would be divided instead of united. Fri. 7-16-48

It is the theory of the Waring-Parker decisions that the primary is an election. And this being so why doesn't the General Assembly meet to apply the general election requirements to the primary, to enact laws to control the primary and to punish fraud, vote purchasing and the like in it? If this be done what reason is there to fear that the Negroes, allowed to vote under the same conditions as whites, in such an event could or would exercise any more influence in the primary than they have exercised in the general election? They have always had the right to vote under the same condition as whites in the general election.

What A Tangled Web

Columbia Record.

There is talk of appealing Judge J. Waties Waring's preliminary injunction in the Beaufort voting case, talk in which Senator Olin Johnston now joins. Columbia S.C.

But any appeal at this stage would be silly. For by the time that it could be perfected the Democratic primary, to which the order applies, would have been held.

If there is to be any appeal it should be from the permanent injunction which may of course embody corrections or changes in the original order.

And the fundamentals of the Waring order will not be changed by any appeal. They will be affirmed for they were already res judicata, matters settled by the Elmore case.

There is complaint that Judge Waring, in order to make his original order effective went beyond the normal injunction function, in requiring the party officials to open the enrolment books, already closed; set limits on the voters' oath, which incidentally happen to be the very limits that the Democratic party of South Carolina heretofore has set for itself, and prescribed the qualifications for voting in the primary, which happen to be the only legal qualifications in South Carolina law for elections—in other words has decreed the rules of the Democratic party of South Carolina. And there is some validity in the complaint.

But whose fault is it? Essentially it is the fault of the General Assembly of South Carolina, which by its failure to enact laws to govern the primaries in South Carolina left the field open for law-making by judicial interpretation. Fri 7-30-48

The Record, believing that these things should be transacted in an atmosphere of calm and study, not hysteria, suggested to the 1948 legislature that new laws to govern the primaries, to fix the qualifications for voting, to prescribe the penalties for fraud and corrupt practices in the primary be passed at the regular session.

Recognizing the fact that the South Carolina Democratic party's case in the federal courts depended in part on the allegation that the Democratic party in South Carolina was a lawless party, involving no state action, it suggested that these new primary laws, drafted after careful study, be ratified on the last day of the session and delivered then to Governor J. Strom Thurmond who could hold them until they were needed.

The suggestion was born of The Record's recognition of the fact that the Democratic party was certain to lose its appeal and was in anticipation of this. When the supreme court of the United States acted, the Governor could have signed the acts and they would have become law.

This advice, adopted in part by the House, was ignored by the Senate. When the Waring-Parker decisions were affirmed South Carolina was, therefore, caught unprepared.

There are dangers in the lawless primary and they are multiplied and magnified by the admission to the party of numbers of new voters. So The Record then appealed for a special session to restore the primary laws, pointing out that there was more excuse for a special session to re-enact laws to govern the primaries than there ever was for the special session in 1944 to erase them.

And there was still time then to do everything. But this suggestion fell on deaf ears. Governor Thurmond did not issue the call which could have brought the legislators together to do what common sense and self interest suggested should be done.

Now it is almost too late, unless the primary be postponed, to correct this mistake. The election will be held, governed not by law as declared by the legislature of South Carolina, which declared nothing, but by the orders of an United States judge, who simply fills the vaccum left by the General Assembly. Columbia, S.C.

But something might have been salvaged and the confusion, to which the party and primary have been brought, avoided if the leaders of the Democratic party of South Carolina—in many instances they are also the leaders of the General Assembly—had had the wisdom to accept the Waring-Parker opinions as written and apply them to the state party organization. The Brown case grows directly out of this forlorn decision to try to evade the federal court decrees and to defy them. It was doomed from the beginning and the party's attorneys would have told the party leaders so, if they had been consulted, as they were not. The Record did tell them and before long practically every newspaper in the state joined in the demand for a new state convention to undo what the May convention had done in error. For there was still time to correct these mistakes and conduct the primary in an orderly, legal manner, still time to get rid of the confusion.

But the party leaders—not all of them, of course, for many of them could see what was happening—couldn't take newspaper advice. They were too busy playing ostrich and worrying about the national convention. The state convention was not reassembled. Nothing was done. If South Carolina was to learn anything it had to be the hard way—in a court room. 7-30-48

Even when the suit was brought the party could have cut the ground from beneath the petitioner's feet by reconvening the convention and amending the rules to bring them into conformity with the Elmore decisions. But, although this suit had been expected and should have been foreseen, it apparently had not been anticipated. And the party leaders could only appear at Charleston and, for all practical purposes, throw themselves on the mercy of the court.

The Brown petition did not specifically ask this—perhaps it should have—but Judge Waring could have avoided the error of confusing the injunction and mandamus by simply restraining the party leaders and all associated with them from conducting the primary until the party should conform its rules and practice to the federal court decisions, leaving it up to the party convention to make the necessary rule changes—not that this would have saved him from criticism; this is, after all, a political year.

The whole thing from beginning to end has been a tragi-comedy of errors. And to what result? Who has profited by it? Nobody, not even the politicians.

VOTING IN SOUTH CAROLINA

The right of colored citizens to full membership in the Democratic party in South Carolina was permanently established last week by Judge J. Waties Waring of the U.S. District Court at Charleston. Jul. 17th – 1948

Judge Waring, by granting, last July, a temporary injunction against the party and its officials, made it possible for more than 35,000 colored citizens to take part in the August primary and in the November general election.

His action last week made that injunction permanent. He had previously threatened jail terms for any persons who denied colored persons the right to vote and will be remembered for his now famous plea to South Carolina to "come back into the Union." Afro-American

The veteran judge, himself a native Charlestonian, debunked the theory that the party is a "private club" and branded illegal the rule requiring primary voters to pledge their support to the principle of racial segregation.

The lily-white primary, cornerstone of "white supremacy" in the South, was slapped down last April by the U.S. Supreme Court. Previous rulings had opened primaries in Texas and Florida, and other Dixie States have fallen in line.

Judge Waring's ruling, by opening party membership to all, goes a step further along the road to full citizenship. We have applauded his courage and fairness before. We are happy to do so again. Baltimore Md

SCHEMING WHITE FOLK

If what Negroes in Clarendon county are telling us is true some of the white people down there are behaving like mad men and are headed for trouble to themselves and the county.

In person, and by letters, Negroes report that the registration board located at Manning, this year has refused certificates even to Negro teachers, many of whom have long, competent records, hold degrees from many fine universities. The board, they say, has even flatly rejected heavy land owners and is refusing to allow men to register who cannot produce a poll tax receipt at least six months old.

These reports come not from a single person. They are general in the county; they come from teachers, ministers, large farmers and from the rank and file. And to go one step further, men who in all the years past have been accustomed to having the poll tax included on their property tax bill sent from the auditor's office, accustomed to paying it as a matter of form have suddenly discovered that the poll-tax was mysteriously missing this year. Practically all of them had overlooked it when they paid their property taxes. Anxious to pay it now, they are finding that the sheriff, the auditor nor anybody else will accept it. The excuse is "we can't locate the books."

Clarendon county has a population of 31,559 residents. Of this number, 22,576 are colored and 8,893 are white. It is largely a farming county and, typical of southern practices, its provision for colored are far inferior to those for whites. A suit to obtain bus transportation is already in court from that county.

The registration board, if as we are told is the fact, is being aided by the county officials. But it is violating the law. It has set up two registration lanes, the better with which to accomplish its end. Whites come in one behind the other while they let a single Negro in on his side, make him read here and read there; if he does this all right, they then require him to explain this sentence or define that word.

It is against the law to compel a citizen seeking registration papers to "explain" or "interpret" or "define" any part of the constitution or governmental operations. The "interpretation" provision was in the constitution which expired in 1898. Moreover, it is illegal to require a poll tax receipt of men seeking to register. The poll tax receipt is required only before voting in general election. In some municipal elections, which are in reality local general elections it is required for a city certificate.

But in no case is it necessary to have a poll tax receipt issued six months before in order to register or vote. The six months tax requirement also expired by 1898. One of the men of Clarendon board turned down because of the poll tax was a 74 year old farmer who owns 53 acres of thriving land. This man doesn't even have to pay the poll tax. Men between 21 and 59 pay it.

The plain truth about the Clarendon county situation is that the whites counted noses, found themselves hopelessly outnumbered and turned to schemes and unlawful tricks. Those involved ought not to be put in jail; they ought to be put under the jail. The Negro is seeking nothing more than the same privilege to qualify for citizenship others have. He wants no more than the chance to prove he is capable or is not. Whatever the verdict, arrived at in honesty, he will abide by it.

We think the Clarendon board and those behind it are going to learn this fact real soon. And the same goes for a few other registration boards we do not discuss just now.

Judge Upholds Board's Refusal On Registration

Journal & Guide

Norfolk, Va

UNION, S. C. — (ANP) — Judge E. H. Henderson of common pleas court has upheld the Union county registration board's refusal to register Claude Copeland and other members of his race by ruling that the petition for mandamus brought by Copeland was irregular.

Judge Henderson ruled that Copeland must present himself again in March before the peal again to common pleas court. He was represented by Atty. Harold R. Boulware of Columbia.

Sat. 3-13-48

At Columbia NAACP state leaders said they did not understand Judge Henderson's ruling, it appearing that Mr. Copeland was being instructed to do what he and many others had already done in February.

The registration board refused to register more than two Negroes in February. Among explanations it gave were, it hadn't had instructions to register Negroes and, it had been too busy with other matters.

However, in a long distance telephone conversation with John H. McCray, state chairman of the Progressive Democratic Party and James H. Hinton, state NAACP president, W. T. Vaughnm, board chairman, had told both the board was registering every Negro who applied.

Cross Burning Reported Near Negro Meeting

Columbia Record

Tues 8-10-48

Columbia, S.C.

AIKEN, Aug. 10—(AP)—A cross burning in Aiken county last night near a church where Negroes were getting a talk on voting in today's Democratic primary was reported today by a Negro leader.

State President J. M. Hinton of the state chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said the cross, about eight feet tall and made of two-by-fours, was burning about 1,000 yards from the church as he drove towards it for the meeting.

Hinton said he approached the church, the Storm Branch Baptist between Clearwater and Hamburg, about four miles from Augusta, from the Clearwater side.

Another cross, he said, was burning on the other side of the church, about the same distance away, on the Augusta side, "in case I had come in from that direction.

"In either case, I was sure to get plenty of light."

He said no white persons were in evidence at either cross site, and that the meeting proceeded without further incident.

Sheriff W. Price Fallaw of Aiken county said this morning he knew of no demonstrations having taken place in the county last night. He said he could not confirm Hinton's report.

A previous report from Columbia described a motorcade of robed and hooded persons which appeared near the capital city Saturday night, apparently coming from the direction of Aiken. Many of the cars in the procession bore Georgia license plates.

The leading car in the procession was decorated with a large cross mounted on the front.

Two other instances of cross-burnings have been reported recently near the center of the state. One was in the Booker-Washington Heights area near Columbia; another in an area near West Columbia.

NEGRO VOTER SAYS GANG CLUBBED HIM

South Carolina Minister Tells Justice Department Police Failed to Protect Him

Tues 8-24-48

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 23 (UP)—A Negro minister filed an affidavit with the Justice Department today that he was clubbed, stabbed and left for dead while two policemen looked on after he voted in the Aug. 10 Democratic primary.

The Rev. Archie Ware filed the affidavit with United States Attorney General Tom C. Clark through the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. James M. Hinton, state N. A. A. C. P. head, said the object, "of course, is to bring criminal prosecution."

Mr. Ware named the man he said was the leader of his attackers and the two policemen who, he charged, watched the incident without lifting a hand.

The incident occurred at Calhoun Falls in Abbeville County, Mr. Ware said. Chester Fleming, Abbeville Sheriff, said he had made a formal investigation of the charges but had not taken any action "because there weren't any eyewitnesses that I could find." He said Calhoun Falls police professed to know nothing of the affair.

Mr. Ware, 66, related in his affidavit that he voted at the Calhoun Falls gymnasium, exercising the right assured Negroes by a recent United States Supreme Court decision invalidating the South Carolina all-white primary.

When he left the polling booth, Mr. Ware said, he saw his chief attacker approach with "a squarish looking club about two feet long and two by two inches.

"He had it drawn back and was calling my name," Mr. Ware charged. "There were four or five younger men with him. They had drawn knives. I threw up my hands as ——— began to try to hit me on the head.

"I started begging. 'Mr. ——— please don't hit me.'

"He kept saying 'Damn you. I'm gonna bust your damned head open.' I knew that the two officers were there and I thought these officers would help me and I kept backing away; but they did not help so I made a quick turn and started to run."

Mr. Ware charged that the leader stunned him with several blows and that as he tried to ward off the club "the younger men standing there stabbed my left thigh to the bone before I could start running again.

"I heard one of them say 'I'm going to cut your throat.' I tried to protect myself but I could not duck all of them and I was getting weaker and weaker. One of the men cut me with a hook-nose pocket knife in my right side. They thought I was dead and walked away."

Tues 8-24-48

Mr. Ware said Dr. Aaron C. Ward, a Calhoun Falls physician, carried him to the hospital at Abbeville.

Calhoun Falls is about fifty miles south of Greenville County where Willie Earle, a Negro, was lynched in 1947. Twenty-eight white men were charged with lynching him. All were acquitted.

Negroes Cast First Large Primary Vote

Columbia Record

Tues 8-10-48

Columbia, S.C.

Negroes invaded the South Carolina Democratic primary on the same basis as whites for the first time today as the party chose its nominees to political offices.

The primary, usually tantamount to election in the Palmetto state, was expected to draw some 350,000 voters.

Voting was orderly and speedy. No incidents of any kind had been heard of by early afternoon.

Fair weather helped the vote, which appeared, according to some predictions, to be of record proportions.

In Columbia, voting was generally heavy with Negroes voting in large numbers in the wards where most of them are enroled.

The same was true at Charleston, which reported a "predominant Negro vote" in several city and suburban precincts. "Steady Negro vote" in several city and suburban precincts. "Steady but light" was the report on the early vote in rural sections of the county.

Charleston

Charleston had more than 7,000 Negroes enroled out of a total of 31,524.

Greenville's vote was heavier than in 1946 and a probable record turn-out was expected. That county had a total enrolment of 34,046 and a vote of 75 to 80 per cent of that figure was anticipated.

The heaviest Negro vote in greater Greenville was ten per cent of the total in one city precinct. At other places, the Negro vote was not believed to be more than one per cent of the total.

Spartanburg

At noon, Spartanburg reported 2,078 votes, of which 125 were cast by Negroes, in 15 city precincts.

There is an estimated 40,000 total enrolment for Spartanburg county.

Sumter reported heavy voting but few votes were cast by Negroes, of whom only 493 are enroled in that county despite a large Negro population. There had been more than 1,000 votes cast in the city by 11 a. m.

Tues 8-10-48

Many Negroes in Sumter were reported to have tried to vote on presentation of general election registration certificates but precinct managers stuck to instructions to allow voting only by those enroled. A number of unenroled white people also tried to vote with registration certificates but were turned away also, it was reported.

Top race was the five-man campaign for United States Senate with Senator Burnet R. Maybank of Charleston strongly defending his post.

Three congressional races, three circuit solicitorships, local contests and legislative campaigns all were featured in the Democratic balloting today.

Senate, House

South Carolinians were to name 124 members to the House of Representatives and 23 (or half) the members to the State Senate.

While Negroes have voted in the State Democratic primaries in years past—even in Spartanburg county two years ago—this year will mark the first that they expect to vote in any numbers under court protection.

34E(2)

Negroes won their first round in the battle for enfranchisement by a Richland county court case brought by George Elmore. Federal Judge J. Waties Waring of Charleston ruled that Elmore was entitled to vote in the primary here.

Tues 8-10-48

Convention's Action

The State Convention May 19 then adopted two sets of rules. One permitted whites to vote by enroling on the precinct books. Enrolment is necessary for participation in party affairs.

The other set of rules opened the primaries to Negroes who were "qualified electors" and could present their general election registration certificates.

Negroes, subsequently, balked at the rules, particularly to that phase which barred them from participation in party affairs. David Brown of Beaufort, backed by the National Association For the Advancement of Colored People, went to court and received an order from Judge Waring permitting Negroes to enrol on the club books.

Thus, Negroes today will file to the polls generally for the first time since 1876, when the native whites resumed control of the state government.

Tues 8-10-48

Negro Vote Estimate

John H. McCray, Negro newspaper editor and chairman of the Progressive Democrats, estimated that about 80 per cent of the 35,000 Negroes enroled would vote today.

W. P. Baskin, chairman of the Democratic party, said he expected about 350,000 Democrats to vote today. This would establish a record.

Maybank is opposed by Neville Bennett of Clio, Marcus A. Stone of Florence and Dillon, Alan Johnstone of Newberry and U. S. Rep. W. J. Bryan Dorn of Greenwood.

A majority is necessary for nomination. Thus, if no one candidate receives a majority of the votes cast, the two highest will compete in a run-off primary August 24.

Second District

John J. Riley of Sumter is running for re-election to Congress from the second district against State Rep. Hugo S. Sims, Jr., of Orangeburg. This district includes Aiken, Bamberg, Calhoun, Orangeburg, Lexington, Richland and Sumter counties.

The third district race revolves around four candidates, R. L. Gamble, former state labor commissioner; John C. Taylor, former congressman; Leon L. Rice and James B. Hare, son of former congressman Butler B. Hare of Saluda. The first three candidates are from Anderson.

The three solicitors' races include that of the first circuit where Solicitor Julian S. Wolfe, is defending his post against Andrew J. Hydrick, Sr., both of Orangeburg; of the 11th circuit with Jack D. Hall of Batesburg, challenging the incumbent, Solicitor Jeff D. Griffith of Saluda; and of the seventh circuit with John C. Mooneyham opposing Solicitor Samuel R. Watt, both of Spartanburg.

Six solicitors and three congressmen have no opposition.

And the Skies Did Not Fall!

The Courier

34E(2)

THE way the lily-white Democrats have been fighting against Negro participation in the South Carolina primaries one would have thought the skies would fall if a colored citizen ever put a ballot in a ballot box.

Last week, following the historic decision of Federal Judge J. Waties Waring, 35,000 colored voters went to the polls in the primary for the first time since Reconstruction Days and voted like other citizens.

Sat 8-21-48

From latest reports from the South Carolina sector it seems that despite this revolutionary step everything is going along just about as usual.

Pittsburgh Pa

Charleston, Columbia, Florence, Greenville and other cities are located in the same places they were before the primary.

The homicide rate has not increased and none of the leading white people have been dispossessed or exiled.

The press wire services have not reported a single instance of "a pure white lady" being assaulted by a "hulking, black brute."

In short, the South Carolina primary went off in the same way as a primary does in any other State of the Union.

So we say to the Kluxers and Dixiecrats of the Iodine State, in paraphrase of Kipling, "You never can tell 'til you've tried it, and then you are likely to be wrong."

Indeed, it is rather laughable that our white South Carolina friends should have imagined that anything more unusual and spectacular would happen than did, since there is no difference between a white South Carolina voter and a colored one, fundamentally speaking.

Sat 8-21-48

The hysteria which preceded this balloting indicates that many of the white leaders in South Carolina are losing their sense of humor or their nerve.

All Is Quiet As Many Negroes Cast Ballots

Columbia Record

Voters Line Up To Mark Long Tickets; Weather Favorable

Tues 8-10-48

Columbia S.C.

Negroes voted in substantial numbers and for the first time today in a Richland county Democratic primary election.

Chief of Police L. J. Campbell said this afternoon, "It is very quiet. There haven't been any disturbances I know ot."

The same quietness prevailed in the county outside of Columbia, Sheriff T. Alex Heise reported.

"We have received no calls of any disturbance," Sheriff Heise said.

Because of the length of the tickets, most voters required at least five minutes to mark their ballots. As a result, in the larger wards, where only three booths were available, lines of voters formed waiting their turns to vote.

With 26,000 eligible to cast ballots, it appeared a high percentage would vote.

A check of the city wards revealed that all had "normal" to "very heavy" balloting at 2 p. m., with trend continuing "heavy" after that hour.

Tues 8-10-48

The vital U. S. Senate race appeared to overshadow the local contests for Richland, although interest has been high in the House, sheriff and coroner races.

Weather Is Favorable

Sunshine and warm weather aided attendance at the polls.

The polls are to close at 6 p. m., including those in rural areas which prior to this year usually closed at 4 p. m.

Counting of the ballots will begin immediately after the close of the polls, with results to be forwarded to the county party committee in the common pleas courtroom at the Richland courthouse.

Negroes Turn Out

Negroes were among the early voters, although it appeared most of them would vote in the afternoon.

One of the early ones among Negro citizens to present themselves at the polls was John H. McCray, Negro editor, who espoused the cause of Negro voting in the Democratic primary.

A number of the candidates had watchers on duty from the time the polls opened.

Issues At Stake

House members raised a series of issues during the hot summer months when the campaign wended its course from Eastover, to Edgewood's closing invitational meeting last week.

Richland prepared to nominate seven to the House from a list of 24 candidates.

Richland's main interest from a county standpoint were in House, coroner, and sheriff races.

In those races, contestants were:

House of Representatives

Joseph M. Agnew, E. J. Bennett, Edmund G. Grant, Andrew L. Hall, Bee Harper, S. Rhea Haskell, Dr. James A. Hayne, L. Erie High, A. Ray Hinnant, M. V. Horne, J. Patterson King, Alva M. Lumpkin, Jr., G. Raymond McElveen, Walter S. Monteith, John S. Nicholson, Francis L. Rawl, Taylor B. Rion, Jr., Claud N. Sapp, Jr., L. A. Searson, Jr., William C. Simpson, J. L. Sites, Rufus A. Sligh, John T. Sloan, Jr., Frank M. Turner.

34E(2)

Coroner

Edward P. Cave, Jr., Seale Moore, William A. Plott, G. W. Tarrant.

Sheriff

Shep A. Griffith, T. Alex Heise.

Local magistrate's races also dotted the county, but principal contests were in the Columbia area between John C. DuPre and W. H. Thompson, Columbia township; and in Waverley, among L. P. Rivers, Sr., John B. Halloran, L. F. Lanford, Cal M. Lawson, A. O. Martin, George A. Schiffley and Robert C. Sharpe.

Richland's 54 precincts were larger in number than the 1946 elections, due to the re-division of Columbia from ten to 16 wards.

There was little doubt but what the 1948 total vote would run thousands of ballots ahead of 1946.

Negro voting was especially heavy in city ward 9, the Allen-Benedict region, where polls were crowded all day with hundreds of Negro citizens waiting to cast their ballots. At 1:30 p.m., there were 64 Negroes standing in line in front of the voting booths; and during the day the number varied, more or less. Some had brought their umbrellas to ward off the burning rays of the sun, others wore big hats. They stood patiently to vote for the first time in the Democratic primary.

George Elmore, Negro businessman of Columbia, whose federal suit was that aided in opening the primary to Negroes in South Carolina, was busily snapping pictures of the persons waiting in line at the polls.

RICHMOND—South Carolina white primaries were declared illegal by the Fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here Tuesday in a decision which, if upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court may have a revolutionary effect on the political, economic and social mores of Southern States.

The appeals court decision upholds the momentous decision delievered by U.S. District Judge J. Waites Waring at Charleston, S.C., last July, when he warned that "it is time for South Carolina community wherein he lives."

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond and the State executive committee chairman, W. P. Baskin of South Carolina, declined to comment until after they have read the decision.

However, Irvine F. Belser, one of the party's attorneys, said he had "no doubt that we will appeal" the decision to the nation's highest court.

Agreeing fully with Judge Waring's finding that "racial discrimination cannot exist in the machinery that elects the officers and lawmakers of the United States,' 'the appeals court reiterated that:

"The political philosophy of the Declaration of Independence is, that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed;

Sat 1-10-48

"That the right to a voice in the selection of officers of government on the part of all citizens is important;

"Not only as a means of insuring that governments shall have the strength of popular support, but also as a means of securing to the individual citizen proper consideration of his rights by those in power . . .

"The disfranchised can never speak with the same force as those who are able to vote."

The South Carolina case arose when George A. Elmore of Columbia sued officials of the State Democratic organization in Ward 9 of Columbia, and the issue was argued in Federal court there last June 3-4.

Judge Waring enjoined the State's election officials from denying qualified colored voters a voice in the primaries.

The appeal from Judge Waring's decision was based on the premise that it outlawed the white primary (private club) system maintained through special repeal laws by South Carolina to circumvent the Texas Primary decision by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1944.

Judge Waring's decision said in part:

"It is time for South Carolina to rejoin the Union. It is time to fall in step with the other States and to adopt the American way of conducting elections.

"It has been stated and I believe it is a fact, that South Carolina is the only State in the Union which now conducts a primary election solely for whites.

"Colored people are voting in Texas and even in Georgia . . . I cannot see where the skies will fall if South Carolina is put in the same class with these and other States."

Ruling specifically on the contention that Democratic clubs in the State are private organizations, Judge Waring said:

NAACP To Ask Elaboration Of Vote Order

Columbia Record

Federal District Judge J. Waties Waring will be asked at Charleston tomorrow to elaborate on his previous order opening this state's Democratic primaries to "qualified Negro electors." Columbia, S.C.

Attorney Thurgood Marshall of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People will seek an injunction against party officials in 40 counties where Negroes were not allowed to enrol for the coming primaries as party members. Wed. 7-7-48

A suit also will be filed against party officials in Beaufort county, where 34 Negroes' names were purged from enrolment books in accordance with state party rules.

The NAACP plans were announced here yesterday by state president James M. Hinton.

State party rules say Negroes may vote in primaries on presentation of general election certificates. Enrolment is limited to white Democrats, however.

Richland, Laurens, Spartanburg, Greenville, Darlington and Pickens counties enroled Negroes along with whites despite the state rules.

Georgia Leads Dixie Hunt For 'Suitable' Candidate

The Constitution

Atlanta, Ga. Mon. 7-12-48

By M. L. ST. JOHN

Constittuion Staff Writer.

PHILADELPHIA, July 11—Georgia's Democratic delegation was back with the Southern "state's rights" rebels tonight, looking for a candidate to put up against President Truman, whom they concede will win the nomination.

At the State's caucus earlier in the day, the delegates asked Judge T. Hicks Fort, of Columbus, and Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, of Athens, to invite representatives of all Southern States to join Georgia in searching for a presidential candidate other than Mr. Truman.

The "state's rights" caucus this afternoon developed into a meeting of many Southern delegates, however, with a committee looking for a suitable nominee.

Fort and Mrs. Talmadge, Georgia's representatives on the National Platform Committee, said they would seek no separate session sponsored by Georgia. Instead Georgia's Chairman James Peters—who walked out of the rebels session at Jackson, Miss., when they wanted to bolt the party—was meeting with a sub-committee of the "state's right" caucus to find a candidate. He said the committee would have a report within 24 to 36 hours. 7-12-48

The candidate may well be Sen. Russell. Alabama delegates are talking of opening the balloting with a vote for Georgia's junior Senator Russell, who disapproved of Georgia's plan to make him a favorite son. Russell reportedly was headed for Philadelphia.

Peters sat on the stage with the Southern revolters, while South Carolina's Gov. Strom Thurmond renewed a call for the South to revolt if necessary.

But Peters kept one foot back off the limb. Whether Georgia goes along with the group depends entirely upon the candidate selected, Peters said. He declared the Georgia delegation will not go along with a Party bolting move.

In the Southern caucus, a Kentucky delegate asked the South to line up behind Sen. Alben Barkley. A Tennessee delegate renewed a plea to draft Eisenhower.

Jimmy Roosevelt and Sen. Olin Johnston, of South Carolina, whose attempt to draft Ike failed, sat in the audience for a short time as observers. The Roosevelt group is seeking to get behind Florida's Sen. Claude Pepper.

The Rebels' caucus called upon the National Platform Committee to pledge state's rights and oppose the so-called civil rights program. It also asked the Party to favor state ownership of tidelands.

At the Georgia caucus, the delegates voted to carry a fight to the convention floor to restore the two-thirds rule.

This rule, abolished in 1936, required a candidate for President and a candidate for Vice President to receive a vote of two-thirds of the delegates before winning the nomination. Charles Bloch, of Macon, plans to seek the return of this rule—which gave the South major control of the party—in the National Rules Committee. That failing, the delegation expects to fight it out on the floor. All Southern States will be asked to join Georgia in this battle.

The rule, which prevailed from founding of the Party until the late President Roosevelt sponsored its abolition in 1936, was credited by Bloch with "producing such Democratic Presidents as Andrew Jackson, Grover Cleveland, Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Its abrogation "has done more to hurt the South and the Nation than anything else, because it has produced such Vice Presidential nominees as Henry Wallace and Harry Truman," Bloch continued.

Georgia's representatives on the Grayson, of Savannah, to seek to prevent adoption of a platform which would abolish segregation or indorse civil rights. If Georgia is "run over" in the Committee, Judge Fort and Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, of Athens, were asked to file a minority report.

PHILADELPHIA, July 11—Informed that Florida's Sen. Claude Pepper had announced his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination, Charles Bloch, of Macon, Vice Chairman of the Georgia delegation, said tonight Georgia "is still searching for a candidate."

CHARLESTON OPENS BOOKS TO NEGROES

CHARLESTON, July 10—(UP) —Charleston became the first of 45 counties to say definitely it would open Democratic party enrollment books after Judge J. Waties Waring said Negroes must not be prevented from enrolling pending a hearing next Friday.

In Columbia, James M. Hinton of the National Association for Advancement of Colored Jeople was urging South Carolina Negroes to enroll immediately.

Charleston County Chairman Francis F. Coleman said he would announce Monday the time and place that books would open in the county.

He added "the Democratic club books will not be reopened to white Democrats, as the order pertains strictly to qualified Negro electors."

But Coleman said whites could enroll under state party rule 12—which permits county chairmen to enter names of qualified electors who failed to sign up before the deadline due to conditions beyond their control.

Papers serving notice of Judge Waring's temporary restraining order and of the hearing were being distributed to 87 Democratic party leaders throughout the state. They were named defendants in a case brought in the name of a Beaufort county Negro, David Brown.

The Negroes seek to force the state party to allow them to join.

Many of the defendant party leaders were en route to Philadelphia for the National convention. Another squabble awaited them there. Two rival delegations were on hand to ask the convention's credentials committee to seat them.

Negroes' Names Are Purged From Beaufort Books

Columbia Record Columbia, S.C.

Fri 7-2-48

BEAUFORT, July 2—(UP)—The names of 38 Negroes were ordered purged from Beaufort county Democratic enrolment books here today in spite of Negroes' warnings that they will bring immediate court action.

The Beaufort county Democratic executive committee, after a two-hour hearing in the courthouse here, ordered the names stricken from the books in accordance with state party rules. 7-2-48

Both whites and Negroes attended the orderly meeting. All of the Negroes who signed the enrolment books were not present. A Negro attorney, Harold Boulware of Columbia, made the argument for the 38 before the committee.

The purge order signaled the Negroes to bring court action to force their way into the Democratic party, John H. McCray, state leader, said.

"It is an unfortunate thing for Democratic officials in Beaufort county. They could have avoided the court action. We have already instructed our attorneys to proceed with it."

The 38 Negroes were summoned to appear before the committee this morning to show why their names should not be stricken from the books.

Beaufort county party officials repeated their stand that they would abide by state party rules.

The Negroes signed city enrolment books here which state party rules say are reserved for whites only. Negroes are allowed primary votes by presenting general election registration certificates and taking the party's oath at the polls.

Boulware was one of the attorneys in the George Elmore case in which federal courts ordered the Democrats not to discriminate and allow the Negroes to vote in primaries.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Still pushing their contention that the South Carolina Democratic party is a "private association," the party will appeal the recent U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision that Negroes must be permitted to vote in party primaries.

The Appeal Court's ruling upheld District Judge J. Waites Waring's decree that Negroes are "entitled" to be enrolled for and to vote in the State's Democratic primaries, now limited by party rule to white persons. Pa.

The party's first counter move will be to file a petition for a rehearing before the Jan. 31 deadline, according to William P. Baskin, State executive committee chairman.

Thurgood Marshall 'Mum' On Primary Suit; State Rulers Vote To Stand Pat On Oath

34e(2)

Atlanta Daily World

Thu

COLUMBIA, S. C. — (SNS) — Dr. Thurgood Marshall, chief of the NAACP's legal staff, and who made a surprise plane trip to Columbia last Friday, would not commit himself on how soon, if at all, new court action would be slapped against South Carolina Democrats now defying the Waring decision.

Only comment from Attorney Marshall, who is known to have held conferences with associates and NAACP leaders on his brief visit, was: "Tell everybody we wont let them down. We'll go back to the courts, if necessary, in plenty of time."

GETTING FULL ATTENTION

It was learned that on his return to the New York office following the Kansas City, Mo. NAACP convention this week, Mr. Marshall is to give full time to the South Carolina case; previously, he is said to have advised a little more time to determine the real status of the revolt against Judge Waring's ruling.

Announcement that he will be back in South Carolina the first week in July touched off speculation that he would return only for the purpose of going into court on the befuddled primary situation. However, neither his associate, attorney Harold R. Boulware, nor NAACP leaders, would say what the purpose of his return at that time would be.

However, if a contempt action were brought at that time it would affect possibly the status of the party—assuming the NAACP won and the party does nothing before then on its own—of the delegation to the National Democratic convention.

In other words, if the court should hold conventions were illegally held and Negroes wrongfully excluded, another convention would have to be held, preced by club and county conventons, in which Negroes would be present.

All of this was in the realm of speculation, however, but it could well be that the NAACP action, expected to be timed to hurt wrongdoers most, has been timed to develop at this moment.

ACTION NOW APPARENT

This much was certain, however: Unless white Democrats opposed to the oath and other changes made by the May 19, state convention, controlled by party reactionaries, initiate similar action within the next 15 days, some NAACP action in court was a strong possibility.

Associates did say that Dr. Marshall was confident courts would overrule attempts to circumvent the Waring ruling and, that Negroes would be able to enroll, attend club meetings, hold offices and aspire to offices within the Democratic party.

6-24-48

STATE STANDS PAT

Meanwhile, in the face of challenges from six counties which have made their own rules and oaths, both contrary to May 19, rules adopted, and the threat of a second section of the party being officially launched here June 29, the executive state Democratic committee, ignored pleas of chairman William P. Baskin last Thursday for middle of the course road, for honoring the Waring ruling and voted to stand at or both the oath and membership rule.

Under the latter, Negroes must not enroll, excepting in counties which have defied state rules; they can only vote on the basis of election certificates. Whites cannot so qualify to vote. They must enroll and need not be qualified voters.

Both the NAACP and Progressive Democrats have urged Negroes not to take the oath, promising full instructions in plenty of time on this before primaries are held in August.

Tuesday, the Richland county executive Democratic committee was to act on demands from candidates in the August primaries for a revision of the oath, which has held enrollment to a pitiful minimum over the state. After a heated session Tuesday morning, the body adjourned until five o'clock. It is expected however that some revision of the oath will be made. In starting the state-wide bolt from the state organization, Richland amended it rule on membership to establish identical procedures for both races. Greenville, next to walk out, amended the oath while it adopted identical membership rules for both races.

Spartanburg, Pickens, Laurens and Darlington counties have also bolted the state party, in so far as rules on membership and the oath are concerned. Jasper has dispensed with enrollment and is requring both races to present general election certificates to vote in the primary.

In Sumpter, Charleston, Marlboro and Georgetown counties, however, Negroes seeking to enroll have been rejected. Eight did enroll at Bennettsville but state committeeman N. W. Edens said their names would be purged. 6-24-48

ENROLLMENT EXTENDED

An extension of the enrollment period in counties which have defied the state rulers appeared probable Tuesday. This was one issue Richland was to settle late in the afternoon. Greenville and some of the others in revolt have already set July 6, as closing time while in conforming counties books closed on Tuesday, June 22.

This will of course add more fuel to an already blazing fire. What will be the decision of the state committee on votes so cast remains to be seen. Greenville, for example, has yet another item to be handled. It has allowed 18 year-olds to enroll; the state age this year is 21.

MAY RELENT

Speculation also existed on a possible reconvening of the state convention by chairman Baskin. Insiders said that if he took this action, he would have to relinquish his post. One high party power, it is reported, kept yelling in Thursday's closed meeting: "The only thing wrong in South Carolina now is there are too many nigger lovers."

There was the possibility also that general pressure might crack party rulers.

Equal Qualification Rules Asked in Suit

Sat. 7-17-48

HEARING, JULY 16

Party Split on Issue

Only 4 Counties Fair

CHARLESTON, S.C.—Judge J. Waties Waring of the U.S. District Court, Eastern District of South Carolina, has issued a restraining order in the suit filed by NAACP attorneys against 89 officers and members of the State's Democratic Party, who the complaint alleges, have sought to deprive colored citizens of their right to vote.

The restraining order ask both the defendants and the plaintiffs to appear in court July 16 to present both sides of the case.

May Enroll in Party

Judge Waring also enjoined the defendants from denying the plaintiffs, David Brown and other citizens, the right to enroll in the Democratic Party on the same terms as whites and from denying them full and equal participation in the Democratic Party primary.

This suit follows by three months the NAACP victory in the case of Elmore V. Rice. In this case, Judge Waring held illegal the refusal of the Democratic Party to allow qualified voters the right to participate in the primary.

His decision was sustained by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals and last April U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the decision.

Continued to Infringe

Following these decisions, the Democratic Party determined to continue its infringement upon the right of citizens to vote in the primary.

It passed rules prohibiting any colored person from joining Democratic Party clubs and required them, upon registering, to present a general registration certificate and to take an oath to uphold racial segregation and oppose Federal fair employment practices legislation.

The plaintiffs in the present suit are those whose names were purged from the Beaufort County enrollment books last week. It asks $5,000 damages and a permanent injunction against denying colored persons the effective exercise of their right to vote.

Want Rules Outlawed

An outlawing of the rule making colored persons show their general election certificates and requiring them to take the jim crow oath was also asked in the suit. 7-17-48

To date only four counties Spartanburg, Greenville, Laurens and Pickens, have defied party rules and permitted colored persons to enroll.

NAACP attorneys handling the case are Thurgood Marshall, special counsel; Edward R. Dudley of New York, and Harold Boulware of Columbia, S.C.

Negroes Ask Probe Of Purge At Beaufort

Columbia, S.C.

Mon. 7-5-48

An investigation by the United States Justice department of the striking of 34 Negroes' names from Beaufort county Democratic club rolls has been asked by the South Carolina Negro Citizens' committee.

Action against the county chairman "and other officials" also was asked in a letter written by J. M. Hinton, committee secretary who also is state president of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People. 7-5-48

The Negroes' names were purged from the club rolls last week in accordance with state Democratic party rules, which bar Negroes from enrollment but which permit them to vote in primaries on presentation of general election registration certificates.

Hinton's letter to Assistant United States Attorney General T. Vincent Quinn said the Beaufort Negroes "enrolled regularly as required by the South Carolina democratic party, and as was decreed by the federal courts . . ."

The court order was that "qualified Negro electors" could not be denied the right to vote in Democratic primaries because of race or color.

"The South Carolina Negro Citizens' committee contends that the decision of the courts gave Negroes all of the rights and privileges enjoyed by any other citizens of South Carolina and that party participation is the only means of exercising full franchise in the meaningful election in South Carolina," Hinton's letter said.

"Any denial of this right is gross discrimination....Negroes are asking that immediate action be taken to give those whose names have been purged the rights enjoyed by whites."

South Carolina To Let 'Qualified Negroes' Vote

Montgomery Advertiser

BISHOPVILLE, S. C.—(AP)—Every "qualified Negro elector" may vote in the South Carolina Democratic primary this year, Party Executive Committee Chairman W. P. Baskin promised Monday. Jul. 5-25-48

Montgomery, Ala.

As state chairman, he said, he would "see that the rule (enabling qualified Negroes to vote) is carried out."

Electors must take the party oath and present a registration certificate.

The party oath requires voters to swear that they "believe in and will support the social, religious and educational separation of races."

Voters also must swear that they are not members of any other political party and that they oppose and "will work against any F. E. P. C. law and other federal law relating to employment within the states."

The rule to which Baskin referred complied literally with a U. S. district court decision that "qualified Negro electors" had the right to vote in party primaries.

'Full Participation' Fight Aired Friday

Thu. 7-15-48

Negroes' fight for "full participation" in the South Carolina Democratic party will be aired in federal court tomorrow at Charleston.

Judge J. Waties Waring will hear David Brown's plea to be enroled on party books, with the membership privileges to which enrolment entitles a voter.

Brown will protest the State Convention rules granting Negroes voting privileges but excluding them from party membership.

The party tomorrow must show cause why it should not be permanently enjoined from banning Negro enrolment. Waring inflicted a temporary injunction last week which is returnable tomorrow.

The issue at stake involves two sets of rules for voting in the primaries, one for Negroes and one for whites.

Waring, in a decision later upheld by the United States Supreme Court, ordered the party to permit all qualified electors to vote. This was a case brought by George Elmore in Columbia. Richland county is permitting Negroes to enrol and vote.

The state rules specify that white Democrats of the proper age, 21, and residence may vote by enroling on the club books of the precinct in which they live.

Negroes, not permitted to enrol (which entitles a person to party participation as a member), must present general election registration certificates indicating that they are qualified electors.

Both Negroes and whites are required to take an oath pledging favor of the party principles and disfavor of civil rights legislation.

Brown brought suit after the Beaufort county Democratic party refused him enrolment privileges. However, 87 party officials are named in the complaint.

State executive committeemen and county chairman of 45 counties and Chairman William P. Baskin were served papers. Richland was exempt because it was sued originally and is now permitting Negro enrolment.

County parties have adopted at least six varying methods of complying with the original court order issued by Waring. They are:

1. Most clearcut of all is Jasper's complete discard of enrolment books. Jasper will permit anyone, white or Negro, who presents a general election registration certificate, to vote in the state's August 10 and 24 primaries.

2. Most counties have been following the state party rules, adopted at a biennial convention here May 19 in an effort to meet Waring's original order specifically, and at the same time to restrict party membership, as in the past, to white Democrats. Under this system, whites enroll, Negroes present general election registration certficates—evidence that they are qualified electors—to vote in primaries.

3. Six counts bucked the state party by enroling Negroes. They are Richland, against whom the original suit was brought, Greenville, Darlington, Pickens, Spartanburg and Laurens. Thu. 7-15-48

4. Bringing up another method of handling the situation is Colleton county. Instead of opening its enrolment books to Negroes after Waring's recent temporary order, it is offering them the privilege of signing a petition saying they wish to be enrolled.

5. Several counties — Beaufort, Chesterfield, Marlboro and Orangeburg among them, according to claims of Negro leaders—have refused to open their enrolment books to Negroes since Waring's recent temporary order.

6. The final group includes those that followed the state party rules up until Waring's recent order, but since have opened their books to Negroes, as have Charleston and Florence, among others.

Waring's order failed to specify that enrolment books be reopened so that Negroes might enrol. It simply said that primary voting privileges should be on an equal basis for Negroes and whites.

Party leaders in counties that had excluded Negroes felt, in most cases, that reopening the books was the only way to comply.

Jasper, never having had its books open, feels it is according equal privileges to both races.

Richland and the other counties that have had their books open to Negroes all along, feel they have met Waring's order also.

Judge Waring restrained the state party from preventing Negroes to enroll until tomorrow's hearing. The 87 officials were ordered to show cause why he should not issue a permanent injunction to replace that restraining order.

The party officials, led by State Democratic Chairman William P. Baskin, remained silent as to their plans for defense.

They met this week to discuss the case and Baskin's only comment afterward was, "defendants are arranging for their counsel and their defense." Columbia, S.C.

Meanwhile James M. Hinton, state president for the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, urged Negroes to enroll this week while the restraining order sheltered them.

Hinton said Negroes had been refused permission to enroll normally in some instances, for one reason or another, in the counties of Orangeburg, Sumter, Marlboro, Chesterfield, Beaufort and Colleton.

The Negroes who were refused sign affadavits which will be presented at tomorrow's hearing, Hinton said.

Richland county was the only excluded in the Negro lawsuit. But Negroes had been permitted to enroll, along with whites, in Spartanburg, Pickens, Greenville, Laurens and Darlington.

So Pickens and Greenville have asked Judge Waring to dismiss the cases against them. They filed the contesting proceedings pointing out allowed Negroes to participate in party affairs, even though they defied state party rules to do it.

Other counties in the state named defendants in the lawsuit were allowing enrolment of Negroes under the restrained order.

Packed Trial Set Tomorrow On Negro Vote

Columbia Record

Thu 7-15-48

CHARLESTON, July 15—(UP) Negroes will take their fight for the right to join the Democratic party into a federal court hearing packed with political significance here tomorrow.

Defendants to be heard by Judge J. Waties Waring are 87 leaders of the South Carolina Democratic party.

David Brown, a Beaufort Negro, charged in Judge Waring's court last week that he had been barred from joining the party. The suit was filed in an effort to open party enrolment books to all Negroes for all time.

S.C. White Democrats May Be Hauled Back To Court

Light House & Informer

Prospects of another round on federal court on the presently muddled Democratic party of South Carolina, loomed late Tuesday as NAACP and Progressive Democratic leaderships awaited action of the Democratic state convention on Wednesday.

columbia S.C.

James M. Hinton, state NAACP President, the organization which supplied attorneys for the George A. Elmore decision, told the press Tuesday that any action by the convention which sought to limit full party rights to Negroes "will take us back to court in full speed."

HINT ONLY VOTING

[illegible]

Mr. Hinton was commenting on reports that the convention would rule that only registered Negroes would be allowed to vote in primaries and would be prevented from attending club meetings, serving as delgates and officers in the party, and also from offering for offices on the Democratic tickets.

Following the refusal of the U S. Supreme Court to intervene in the Waring decision on April 19, state Democratic chairman ruled that registered Negroes in Columbia could, under the Waring decree, vote in a municipal primary on April 20. However when the East Dillon Democratic precinct elected eight Negro delegates a week later Mr. Baskin ruled the action out, and was supported by the Dillon county convention. Much discussion. Most of it in opposition to Baskin's ruling on the Dillon incident has been heard. Actually, rules of the state party do not cover the question of who shall and who shall not be admitted into reorganization meetings of local clubs.

DILLON CASE STUDIED

NAACP attorneys took the Dillon case under study immediately but after a conference, NAACP leadership announced it had instructed its lawyers to await action of the state convention, meeting May 9. Mr. Hinton said Tuesday it was probable that this case may be used as the jumping off point for new court action. Both he and John H McCray, state chairman of Progressive Democrats, have declared that nothing less than "full integration" will satisfy the Waring decision and satisfy South Carolina Negroes.

Speculation was also that the state Democratic convention would soften any proposals for educational test, only for the reason these would affect adversely a large number of present white primary voters. Under party rules, there is no present literacy requirement.

We Should Enroll For Primary

In most counties, if rules of the Democratic party of the state are adhered to, primary registration, or enrolment books will be closed on and and after June 22, that is this coming week. Columbia, S.C. Sun. 6-20-48

We want our people in all counties to go to enrolment places, at every one of these and get their names on the books--or try to get their names on these books--not on the basis of a general election certificate, but on the same basis as white Democrats in the State.

As we said from the beginning of the fight on the primary, we want our people to have the same privileges of white party members, a view which Judge Waring included in his opinion. Greenville and Richland counties are allowing this--in defiance of party rules. Where it is not being done we can inflict damage and perhaps contempt suits. But let's go down an enroll to vote in this summer's primaries. Let's do it by Tuesday June 22 if that is our last chance or, do it before the books close.

rimary Ruling Regarded As enediction By Carolinians

Journal & Guide

By MODJESKA SIMKINS

[illegible] anxiously awaited decision of the Fourth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in the "white primary" case fell like an expected benediction on thousands of life-long disfranchised South Carolinians. Negroes from one corner of the state to the other had little doubt that the Waring decision would be upheld. They have that much faith in the integrity of the gentlemen of the court and their understanding and interpretation of the U. S. Constitution.

Beyond that, others concluded that with the eagle eye of the entire world on the maneuverings of this nation, the country is in little mood to continue rolling obviously loaded dice in this democracy game. So it is with pardonable pride and increased belief in the triumph of right and justice thru trials and struggle that the con[illegible]tollers for constitutional freedom in South Carolina pursue their unfinished task.

Victory in the "white supremacy" primary case, even if carried to the U. S. Supreme Court, must not suffice. In the greater task now before us, South Carolinians must be made to feel inescapably responsible for qualifying to vote, and for voting in every election. They must learn to vote for principles and not men, and against opportunists, whether black or white. Without exception, wherever Negroes have voted in this new era of balloting, they have voted progressively. Any evidences of bloc voting were the result of voting as a phalanx for constructive, progressive thinking.

* * * *

NEGRO VOTERS must develop a burning desire not only to vote but also to be voted for. And black and white voters must learn in this emerging political era that demagogues, grand rascals, and opportunists do not hunt a special hole or hide to crawl into. Therefore a principled and sensitized Negro electorate would refuse to vote for a weak, scheming Negro in preference to a white man they believe to be of integrity, promise and strength.

In marked contrast to the large number of "half-pint" priced voters and voters who will now sell out for a one dollar "Frogskin" right here in South Carolina on white primary election days, there will be found hundreds of Negroes who not only know how to vote, but who will vote the dictates of their consciences.

I know they will. I have that faith despite what cheap politicians claim. The fact that politicians fear Negro voters is proof sufficient that they fear risks at the polls.

* * * *

ALL OF THIS sounds like a lot of futile "chewing of the fat," I know. But 1948 is here. In a political sense, it is to be a crucial, cruel, surprising, and satisfying year. It is the year that some white men and some black men of integrity and stamina should begin to clear the air by seeking political office in South Carolina.

For 70 long years this state has been beguiled, belittled, befounded and utterly disgraced by mediocre and mean men. Other men who would have served their counties, districts, and the state with dignity in the legislative halls of their state and nation have been embarrassed, frightened, and politically debilitated by many who stooped to win by riding into office

South Carolina Primary Draws Many Negroes

The Courier Journal

Senator Maybank Leads 4 Opponents

Louisville, Ky

Wed. 8-11-48

By the Associated Press

Senator Burnet C. Maybank forged into a definite majority lead over four opponents last night with about half the precincts reported in South Carolina's Democratic primary.

It appeared he might win without a runoff.

Negroes cast ballots in the state in considerable numbers for the first time since 1876, with no reports of race clashes.

In Arkansas' runoff Democratic primary former State Attorney General Jack Holt and Garland County Prosecutor Sidney McMath were running nip and tuck for the gubernatorial nomination on early returns. The Governorship race attracted most attention there.

In both states Democratic nomination amounts to election.

Idaho Also Votes.

Idaho Democrats also voted in a primary but late closing vote boxes held up the count.

In South Carolina's Second Congressional District State Representative Hugo Sims had a sizable lead over Representative John J. Riley, seeking reelection.

In the Fifth District Representative James P. Richards was comfortably ahead of Roy C. Cobb.

Wed 8-11-48

The Third District race, which Representative W. J. Bryan Dorn quit to run against Maybank, saw James B. Hare forging ahead of former Representative John C. Taylor and two other aspirants.

Dorn was second man in the Senate contest.

Returns were meager in Arkansas' only Congressional race, in the Third District between Representative J. W. Trimble and Charles B. Ivy.

Inflation Hits Candidates.

Idaho had only two Democratic Congressional races after a campaign in which observers blamed inflation for the relative scarcity of candidates. The unusual claim was made that candidates failed to file in the usual numbers because salaries of public officials have not kept pace with those in private business or living costs.

A Federal Court decision by Judge J. Waties Waring granting Negroes the right to participate in the Democratic primary was the main talking point in the South Carolina Senate contest. candidates.

Opposing Maybank, who went the Senate first by appointnt in 1941 as successor to es F. Byrnes, were Dorn, Neville Bennett, Clio farmer; attorney Alan Johnstone of Newberry, and Marcus A. Stone, Florence lumberman.

Dummy or advisory ballots distributed at the voting booths here pointed to some organized Negro support for Bennett in the Senate race, and for Representative Riley of the Second District one of the State's three congressmen with opposition. The ballots were prepared on a duplicating machine.

State President James H. Hinton of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said the only way to make the Negro vote effective was by such "recommendations."

2 Plead Ignorance of Ballots.

Both Bennett and Riley said they had known nothing about the ballots.

Wed 8-11-48

So far, two Democratic senators, Umstead of North Carolina and Stewart of Tennessee, have been defeated for renomination, and two others, Hatch of New Mexico, and O'Daniel of Texas, have decided to retire voluntarily. Five Republican senators also are not running this year—Bushfield, South Dakota; Capper, Kansas; Hawkes, New Jersey; Moore, Oklahoma, and White, Maine.

G.O.P. Incumbents Unopposed.

Wed. 8-11-48

The two Congressional races in Idaho involved only Democrats. In the First District, former Representative Compton I. White was opposed by Burnis B. Brigham, a farmer. Two newcomers ran in the second, Bert M. Inwegen, 26-year-old schoolteacher, and Asael Lyman, World War glider veteran.

Republican incumbents, Representatives Abe Goff and John Sanborn, were unopposed, as were incumbents Henry C. Dworshak and Bert H. Miller for the Republican and Democratic senatorial nominations.

Tues 8-3-48

Atlanta, Ga

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 2—(AP) Decks appeared to be cleared of possible court action today for the Aug. 10 South Carolina Democratic Primary.

Attorneys for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announced that court-ordered enrollment for Negroes for the primary apparently had been accorded.

Enrollment books were opened July 19 to Negroes by Federal District Judge J. Waties Waring. They closed July 31. Investigation of reported violations failed to reveal any, the NAACP attorneys said today after a conference at Charleston with Waring.

Tues 8-3-48

A U. S. Senate race, the only Statewide contest, heads the list of campaigns that will culminate with the primary. A second primary will be held Aug. 25 for contests in which no candidate gets a majority of votes.

They will be the first primaries in South Carolina since 1876 in which Negroes have voted freely..

State party officials were anticipating reports this week on final enrollment figures from the counties. Estimates were that the 453,000 enrollment figure of two yea go would be exceeded.

Heavy Negro Turnout In S. Carolina Voting

New York Star

Wed 8-11-48

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 10 (UP)—Negroes voted in large numbers in the South Carolina Democratic primary today—for the first time since reconstruction days. Favorable weather contributed to heavy balloting which was reported as peaceful and orderly.

In the sen al r , incumbent Burnet R. Maybank faced Rep. William Jennings Bryan Dorn, Alan Johnstone, an attorney; Marcus A. Stone, a businessman, and Neville Bennett, a farmer-lawyer.

In North Augusta, James M. Hinton, state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, reported that two fiery crosses—symbol of the Ku Klux Klan—appeared outside a church last night while he instructed Negroes in the use of the ballot.

Some 500,000 voters had registered for the primary, including about 35,000 Negroes who were given the right to participate in the party primary by Federal Judge T. Waties Warning.

Waring Called Dictatorial

Waring's ruling brought a storm of criticism from the five senatorial candidates. Dorn and Johnstone blamed Maybank for Waring's appointment to the bench. Maybank answered that he was the first to criticize Waring's ruling.

Stone also denounced Waring, and Bennett called the judge "arrogant, dictatorial and untrue to the traditions of judiciary."

Dorn, who left his House seat undefended to make the Senate race, came out against European aid but all the other candidates favored it.

Wed 8-11-48

The Negroes knew they were making history in participating in the primary. Long lines formed outside polling places in Columbia.

The Negroes used the same books and booths as whites but since these polling places were predominantly Negro sections most of those in line were Negroes.

on the naked bare backs of Negroes from whom they had helped to steal every vote.

Those not quite so unprincipled, but lacking in manhood and statesmanship, floated with the polluted tide. The death struggle of these inferior men of the inflated ego to preserve and maintain the white supremacy primary is, therefore, not the least surprising. The time is fast approaching when the race-hate war whoop in political campaigns will have lost its "conjur." The boys must begin to "lay the bucks on the barrel-head." Some thinking must be done.

S. C. Solon Seeks Waring Impeachment

Daily World – Atlanta, Ga.

Sat. 7-31-48

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—A South Carolina congressman has shown his utter contempt for civi liberties as guaranteed by the United States Constitution by demanding the impeachment of Federa Judge J. Waites Waring, who recently ordered the South Carolina Democratic organization to open its enrollment books to Negroes.

The congressman is Rep. W. J Bryan Dorn, who supports the policies of Dixiecrats J. Storm Thurmond, who along with Mississippi's Fielding Wright, is running on a Fourth Party ticket against Pres. Harry S. Truman and Republican nominee Thomas E. Dewey.

In a statement in the Congressional Record, Dorn said, Judge Waring "has not and is not now qualified from ability or temperament for the high office of U. S District Judge."

Dorn already has introduced a resolution calling for a House investigation of Waring's conduct in office."

Sat. 7-31-48

"If Judge Waring is guilty" said Dorn, "as I believe he is, and as I now charge, of usurpiug the rights of South Carolina in attempting to force down their throats his own ideas of governmental mattrs, it will be the duty of this congress to prefer articles of impeachment."

Dorn's anger was over Waring's ruling against South Carolina Democratic Party officials, who were denying Negroes participation in primary elections and the requirement of an oath pledging opposition to FEPC.

Sat. 7-26

COLUMBIA, S.C. (Special to the AFRO)—In this South Carolina city, rent by a bloody race riot some two years ago, colored and white citizens this month stand in line together at the courthouse to register to vote in the primary elections to be held this fall.

Here, it seems, the ruling of the U.S. District Court clarifying the right of all citizens to vote in the primaries of any party, regardless of race and color, and the upholding of that ruling by the U.S. Circuit Court, has been fully understood and complied with by authorities.

Record Registration

The fact that colored citizens are taking advantage of the opportunity to qaulify themselves to vote can be gained from the statement of the venerable official who on Feb. 4, watching the hundreds of persons in line to register, said:

"Not since reconstruction days have I seen colored people in this State register in such great numbers." No segregation was practiced at the registration office either at the line outside or within the office itself, where clerks were courteous to all.

To Use Votes for Rights

Two white men standing in the mixed registration line said they thought the granting of the right to vote to all was the best thing that had ever happened to colored persons in the history of the State. Three colored would-be-voters, when asked, what they were going to do with their ballot, answered:

GEORGE ANDERSON, Columbia—"I am going to try to make South Carolina a place where colored persons can live without fear."

Sat. 7-31-48

FRANK BOYD, Columbia—"I might not know who I am voting for, however, I will not cast my ballot for anyone who has been against us in the past."

ANDREW BROWN, Camden—"I am going to use my vote to fight segregation."

South Carolina Jurist Invokes Strict Order Against Discriminators

Defender
Chicago, Ill.
Sat. 7-24-48

CHARLESTON, S. C.—A stormy session in which a candidate for United States senatorial nomination was expelled from the courtroom for interference, marked a momentous judicial decision here last week when United States District Judge Julius Waties Waring, declared and so ruled that Negroes had the right to vote in South Carolina's Democratic primary and to participate fully in party affairs.

Judge Waring is a Charleston Democrat. This decision was the outcome of a suit by David Brown, a Negro of Beaufort, S. C., to compel election officials to restore his name.

During the stormy court session the Judge also asserted that any disobedience in either the letter or spirit of his ruling would be punished by imprisonment.

Grants Injunction 7-24-48

"My order will grant the prayer for the preliminary injunction," the judge said. 'It will bar racial discrimination. It will provide that the books be open to all parties regardless of race or religion and will fix a reasonable time for the books to be open."

The books referred to by the judge are the enrollment books of Democratic clubs of South Carolina's 46 counties. Sat.

This decision by Judge Waring is looked upon throughout the South as the opening wedge for complete enfranchisement of Negroes in this section. It does away with the poll tax and the Grandfather clause which has long been used by southern poll officials to bar Negroes who sought the right to vote. In Judge Waring's ruling no tests are required, to participate in the coming primary which will be held August 10 and the run-off primary August 24, is to place their names on the books to become eligible to vote. 7-24-48

"Disgrace and Shame"

"The time has come when racial discrimination in political affairs must stop," Judge Waring asserted from the bench. "Let me tell you that any disobedience to the letter and spirit of this ruling will result in contempt proceedings. The parties responsible for any violation will be punished by imprisonment. It is a disgrace and a shame when you must come into a court and ask a judge to tell you you are an American."

The judge declared that he intended to make sure that his order was broad enough to cover "religious discrimination" because "if I don't, the next time they will bar some of the Jews and some of the Roman Catholics."

When Judge Waring returned to the bench, his first action was to dismiss Democratic officials of Greenville, Pickens and Laurens counties. He said these counties had already opened their books to Negroes in compliance with a temporary restraining order he issued last week. Defender

"I feel quite ashamed that there are only three counties in the state which recognize our authority," he said. "Yet I am glad to see that these counties have men who have patriotism enough to carry on their activities despite pressure and coercion." Chicago, Ill.

Two witnesses, David Brown, the plaintiff, and William G. Baskin, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee, were called. Syd Tyson, Baskin's attorney objected to the manner in which the court was questioning Baskin and was told by Judge Waring to "sit down. I am going to ask what I want." 7-24-48 sat

The man ejected from the court was Alan Johnstone of Newberry, S. C., a former attorney for the federal works agency in Washington. "This meeting is called for a judicial determination, not a campaign speech," Judge Waring said. A deputy marshall led Johnstone from the courtroom and he was detained in the United State's marshall's office.

Judge Waring was appointed to the bench by President Roosevelt in 1942. He was United States attorney in Charleston from 1914 to 1921 and city attorney of Charleston from 1933 to 1942. He has lived in Charleston all his life. He received a degree of Doctor of Laws from the College of Charleston from which he graduated in 1900. He is an Episcopalian.

Democrats Ordered To Open Books To Negroes

Sat 7-17-48

CHARLESTON, S. C., July 16.—(UP)—Federal Judge J. Waties Waring Friday angrily ordered South Carolina Democrats to admit negroes to the party and had a protesting United States senatorial candidate ejected from his court.

Waring, nemesis of the state's "white primary" advocates, signed a preliminary injunction opening the party registration books to negroes. Jail awaits any party leaders who defy the writ.

The suit was filed on behalf of negroes who said their names were purged from the party books after they registered in accordance with the United States Supreme Court decision giving them equal ballot rights.

As the negroes complaint was read Alan Johnstone, who is running for Senator Burnet R. Maybank's seat, rose to speak.

"This is not a political rally," Judge Waring snapped. Johnstone tried again and Waring said "you are not going to be heard in this courtroom." 7-17-48

The judge glanced at the bailiffs and a couple of them came up and hustled Johnstone out of the court.

Why this hysteria, which more than anything else resembles the hysteria with which the labor unions greeted the enactment of the Taft-Hartley law although it contained few things that the majority of workers, organized and unorganized, did not approve?

Is it intended to divert attention from the real issues of the campaign, or the issues that should be real? 7-24-48

The wrath of the candidates ought to have been directed at the Democratic party leaders of South Carolina who have played their cards wrong from the beginning and have got the party and the primary in a mess today from which it can be extrated only by a special session of the General Assembly. They had plenty of time to work out some reasonable solution, such as North Carolina and most of the other Southern states have arrived at.

When the last of the primary laws was repealed in 1944 and the Democratic party was moved over to the country-club set, the party leaders were warned that all they were buying was a little time. For the supreme court of the United States in the Texas decision, the case of Smith v. Allwright, which the South Carolinians were trying to get around had warned that if any state found a way to evade the court's requirement that Negroes be allowed to participate in primary elections the court in its turn would find a way to hold this evasion unconstitutional.

"The United States is a constitutional democracy," the supreme court declared in the Allwright decision. "Its organic law grants to all citizens the right to participate in the choice of elected officials without restriction by any state because of race. This grant is not to be nullified by a state through casting its electoral process in a form which permits a private organization to practice racial discrimination. Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be thus indirectly denied."

This was fair warning of what was to come, as soon as a case might be brought to test the lawless primary. The Democratic party of South Carolina should have used this time to work out a system whereby the comparatively few Negroes who wanted to vote might have been taken into the party, eliminating thereby racial discrimination as a factor in South Carolina primaries and at the same time eliminating the Negroes' cause of action. 7-24-48

But nothing was done. South Carolina proceeded blithely on its way, hugging to its bosom the vain hope that it had solved the Negro voting problem in the negative, inviting the Negroes to sue and be damned.

The case of Elmore v. Rice, et al., resulted. Judge Waring heard this case and decided that the Negroes were entitled to vote in the South Carolina primary. But it would not have made any difference if Judge Waring had decided, as he might have, that he didn't have jurisdiction under the civil rights cases and dismissed the action. For that decision, like the other decision, would have been appealed and Judge Parker and the circuit court of appeals instead of affirming Waring's decision, as they did, would have overruled it. No lawyer who has studied the recent opinions of the circuit court of appeals relating to elections and voting can come to any other conclusion. And the supreme court would have affirmed the circuit court of appeals decision, as it did. The Record

The Democratic party had almost its last chance to settle the controversy amicably at the state convention by conforming its rules to the Elmore decisions. It might even have reconvened the convention and corrected the mistakes made there and thereby avoided the final ignominy of being called into court and told specifically how to obey the law. And it had the example of six counties in which the law was being obeyed. But the party leaders did nothing. They sat waiting for the suit they had invited and expected and now they are howling as if the court said something new in the Brown case, when in simple truth it is and was nothing more than a reiteration of the Elmore decisions. Columbia, S.C.

Judge Waring had no choice. Every issue involved in the injunction petition was for all practical purposes res judicata. It had been the law of the United States ever since the supreme court refused to hear the South Carolina Democratic party's appeal.

And, as The Rec also warned, this last ditch fight, this futile charge of the Light Brigade in another Balaklava blunder has had the effect of defeating the purpose of the Democratic leaders who adopted it. By making the Negroes fight for the right to participate in party affairs, by making them win this right in the courts the party leaders have magnified the attractions of voting to the Negroes, who feel that they must get something for the energy and money they have had to spend, something for the victory they have won. The result has been, as could have been anticipated, a higher proportion of Negroes apparently enrolling in the counties that resisted as compared with those that did not. 7-24-48

This attempt now to keep the issue alive, to make a play on racial prejudice is fraught with danger. It is playing into the hands of the Communist agitators who may be coming to South Carolina to try to convert the primary into an explosion. Sat.

The need now is not for inflamatory language nor bitter speeches, but for sane, calm leadership, for wise leadership.

Those senatorial candidates, trying to make political capital out of blaming Judge Waring, are acting like children. But they are also playing with dynamite.

Promises Jail to Violators

Court Orders S. C. Democrats To Allow Negroes to Enroll

The Post.

Charleston, S. C., July 16 (AP).—The South Carolina Democratic Party was directed today in a Federal order to enroll Negroes and grant them full rights in party affairs. Washington. DC

William P. Baskin, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee who had led the State delegation at the national convention in Philadelphia in condemning civil rights proposals, said the order "will be carried out fully."

The directive was contained in a preliminary injunction issued by Federal Judge J. Waties Waring on petition of a Beaufort Negro, David Brown, who asked that Negroes be allowed to participate in the party.

"It's a disgrace and shame when you must come into court and ask a judge to tell you you are an American," Judge Waring snapped. Sat. 7-17-48

He warned 87 State and county party leaders, who were named defendents, that imprisonment awaited any party official who failed to comply fully with the spirit and letter of the decision.

Judge Waring asserted the order "will bar racial discrimination . . . provide that the (party) books be opened to all partes regardless of religion (and) will fix a reasonable time for the books to be opened."

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

JUDGE J. W. WARING

Judge Waring, member of a widely known Charleston family and himself a Democrat, added: "The time has come when racial discrimination in political affairs must stop. The Post.

"Let me tell you that any disobedience to the letter and the spirit of this ruling will result in contempt proceedings, the parties responsible for any violation will be punished by imprisonment."

He declared he would include in his order a reference to the rights of religious groups. "If I don't," he observed. "Next time they may bar some of the Jews or some of the Roman Catholics."

State Party Still Has A Choice And A Chance

When Senator W. Branfley Harvey of Beaufort, chairman of the rules committee of the hold-over executive committee, appeared before the state Democratic (Politicians') party convention to present the politicians' plan to conform to the letter but violate the spirit of the federal court decisions, he frankly confessed to the convention that he anticipated that there might be "further" court action as a result of the decision being made. Tues.

For the plan suggested and adopted, as Senator Harvey did not point out, deliberately continued the discrimination between whites and Negroes solely on the basis of race, which the two federal court opinions, already then affirmed by the supreme court, made clear could not be done. 7-13-48

The qualifications for voting and for club membership, until then identical, were divorced from each other and two classes of voters were created: one, the members of the party, white Democrats, who were to be enrolled as usual without regard for registration and the other, the qualified Negro voters, denied the right of party membership and participation in the party organization, allowed to vote only if they were registered for the general election. This segregates the Negroes on a purely racial basis. Columbia, S.C.

In addition all voters both whites and Negroes are to be required to take a thought-control oath, devised to inhibit Negro voting, but having the effect of preventing many white voters also from participation in the primary, white voters who object to setting any precedent to allow the state convention or the state executive committee to impose thought-control provisions upon participants in the primary even though they agree to most of the provisions of the oath. The Negroes, of course, were not represented in the devising of the oath and can not logically therefore be required to subscribe to it. The oath, under these circumstances, becomes simply a thought-control oath for white voters.

Incidentally the rules are devised so as to work a hardship upon qualified white electors. Unlike the Negroes, who may vote on their registration certificates, they cannot vote unless they are also enrolled as club members.

It was, as The Record has pointed out, a plan to invite a new suit in the federal courts, the suit which Senator Harvey predicted.

Now that action, which Senator Harvey foresaw, but which he did nothing to avoid, has been initiated. At Charleston before Judge J. Waites Waring, who heard the original case of Elmore v. Rice, et al., attorneys appeared Thursday to ask for an injunction restraining the party, the party leaders, their servants, agents and all persons in active concert or participation with them from denying Negroes the right to enroll in the Democratic party clubs on the same terms as white Democrats, from denying Negro Democrats the right to full and equal participation in the Democratic party primary on terms identical with those accorded whites and in party activities and affairs because of race or color, from requiring Negroes to subscribe to the thought-control oath. The Record

It takes no prophet nor son of a prophet to predict that the Negroes will win this case as they won the case of Elmore v. Rice, et al. The politicians' plan for maintaining control of the party and denying Negroes membership in it obviously violates both the spirit and the language of the Elmore decisions. It still maintains discriminations against Negroes on account of their race or color. Tues. 7-13-48

The wiser course would have been for the party, as The Record suggested, to have accepted qualified Negro Democrats as party members and so given them representation in the county and state conventions. But the party, under the politicians' leadership, elected otherwise.

It would still have been the course of wisdom to have reconvened the state convention thereafter and allowed it to undo the mistakes made. The Negro Democrats were more interested in the primary than in the club meetings and the conventions and they generally abstained from attempting to attend the club reorganization meetings. They could have been satisfied, easily, cheaply by simply conforming the rules to the federal decisions. And The Record also suggested as much. But the politicians in control were deaf to sound advice.

And now it would still be the part of wisdom for the party to recognize the error of its way and reconvene the state convention after the national convention, as originally anticipated, not only however to take whatever action may be necessary as a result of the national convention, but also to annul and undo the mistakes made and to bring the rules into conformity with the court decisions, opening the enrolment books again, canceling and repealing the thought-control oath. Columbia, S.C.

The alternative to this is to allow the injunction proceedings to take their course, with the party still pursuing its head-in-the-sand policy in a vain attempt to so escape the inevitable, to do nothing that it isn't compelled to do.

The results under either plan will, of course, be identical. And there is no virtue in simply being bull-headed. The party can still surrender with the honors of war or it can be driven from its present craven position by the order of the courts. That is the choice. And to South Carolina Democrats who are not afraid that somebody will lose government jobs the choice is clear and plain.

Waring Also Goes Back To The State Constitution

The Record

Implicit in the Waring-Parker decisions in the Elmore case, the original Negro voting case, was the idea that the primary is an election in South Carolina and that therefore the constitutional requirements for electors should be met by any person voting in it.

The same idea is embodied in the Waring decision in the Brown case, decided last week at Charleston. Sat. 7-24-48

In delimiting the areas to be covered in the voters' oath Judge J. Waties Waring included as one of the permissible adjurations: Columbia, S.C.

"That the prospective voter meets the qualifications as an elector as set out in the constitution of South Carolina."

If this were included in the voters' oath nobody could vote who could not meet the constitutional qualifications for voting, in other words no one could vote who isn't qualified to support the nominees of the primary in the general election. Sat.

Therefore, if the General Assembly of South Carolina were to meet in special session and write into the primary law the general election requirements for voting such an act would be in accord with Judge Waring's decisions. 7-24-48

And it makes sense. Why require a voter to take an oath to support the nominees of the primary in the general election if he cannot meet the qualifications for voting in the general election? What kind of support do most South Carolinians, who do not vote in the general election, mean when they take the oath?

Beaufort Democrats Supply The New Court Test

Tues.

Judge J. Waites Waring in the last paragraph of his opinion in the case of Elmore vs. Rice, et al, declares that Negroes are entitled to be "enrolled and vote" in the Democratic primary in South Carolina.

In accord with this decision 34 Negroes enrolled as Democrats in Beaufort county.

Last Friday over the protest of attorneys the names of these 34 Negro voters were purged by the Beaufort county Democratic executive committee and eliminated from the club rolls.

Columbia Record 7-6-48

The Beaufort committee's position was announced by J. B. Cope.

"It is our opinion that we are not depriving anyone of their rights as laid down by the court," Mr. Cope said. "The committee does not feel that in striking the names from the rolls we are violating Judge Waring's order. We must abide by the rules of the state executive committee."

7-6-48

It is perhaps significant that Mr. Cope used the words "the rules of the state executive committee." The party rules are not supposed to be made by the state executive committee but by the state convention, but Mr. Cope is right. These rules which Beaufort county follows are however the state executive committee's rules. They were concocted in an executive session of the old state executive committee, the hangover executive committee from the 1946 convention, and they were amended, in violation of their own terms, by the 1948 executive committee.

Columbia, S.C.

This action by Beaufort county makes it possible for the Negroes who want to participate in the Democratic party affairs in South Carolina and to enroll to vote in the Democratic primary to go now before Judge Waring and ask him to clarify his order or to issue a new order providing for the enrolment of Negroes as well as for their voting. And there is not much doubt that the order will be issued. The logic of Judge Waring's original opinion, as affirmed by the circuit court of appeals and by the supreme court, is that Negroes are entitled to participate in the Democratic primary on the same basis as whites. The Democrats of South Carolina could have avoided this new court action by conforming their rules to the letter and the spirit of the Waring-Parker decisions. They should have. The times and common sense demanded a few concessions, made to the Negroes voluntarily, as evidence of good will. Instead the Democratic (Politicians') party elected to conform to what the politicians considered to be the letter of Judge Waring's order while nullifying its spirit, setting up two Democratic voting qualifications, one for whites who are the party members and the other for Negroes who are not.

Tues.

And the Democratic (Politicians') party is simply leading with its jaw, inviting a knockout. It would have been the part of wisdom, of course, to have settled this controversy now as it will eventually be settled. And it would have been the better part of wisdom to have settled it by voluntary agreement. This course the state convention on the advice of the hangover executive committee rejected. It will agree to nothing that it isn't required by the courts in plain language to agree to. Judge Waring has no choice now, therefore, except to make his new order so plain that not even the politicians, concerned about their jobs for one more term, cannot misunderstand it. The Record hesitates to think of the language that he may use.

Why Not Have A Little Faith In South Carolina?

The Record

34e(2)

Nearly every other Southern state, with the possible exception of Mississippi, has been confronted with the Negro voting problem and has worked out satisfactory solutions of it—solutions satisfactory to the whites, satisfactory to the Negroes, satisfactory to the courts, satisfactory even to the politicians.

Some of these states, which solved the problem long ago—North Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee—and solved it easier because, of course, they had a smaller proportion of Negro population than some of the others, seem to have profited under if not by the solution. They get a higher level of office holder than appears to be general in the South. Certainly they have come to no harm.

Columbia, S.C.

In none of the Southern states where the Negroes now vote—and the list at last includes Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Texas—has there occurred anything that even looked like a revolution. The skies didn't fall; the politicians won as before. Life went on as usual. Segregation continues to exist. Miscegenation is still a crime. Government is in hands of the whites and a fair proportion of them are first class men, able, honest.

The Record believes that the people of South Carolina are capable of doing likewise, that they are capable of finding a reasonable solution of this problem, conforming to the law and to the political facts with which they have to deal. It does not believe that the people of South Carolina are any the less resourceful, any the less able, any the less honest or courageous than the people of our sister Southern states. It doesn't even believe that the politicians of South Carolina as a class are any more venal than the politicians of Georgia or Tennessee. They have been tested under the lawless primary system which no other state dared to try.

Tues. 7-27-48

And because The Record has faith in South Carolina and faith in South Carolinians it isn't afraid for South Carolina to do what the other Southern states have done. It believes the General Assembly of South Carolina can be reconvened and can enact a proper primary law under which life and politics in South Carolina will go on as usual or better, if the racial issue be put aside. And when it is done some of those who are now worrying themselves sick about things that will never happen, unless South Carolina bungles the job as no other state has done, will laugh at themselves and wonder how they ever allowed their prejudices or the oratorical fears of politicians, intent on keeping their jobs or getting new ones, to so confuse and confound them.

Tues.

All that South Carolina needs now is for its citizens frankly to face the facts and recognize that the Waring decision is not only the law in South Carolina, but everywhere in the United States. Then let the General Assembly of South Carolina meet and do what the other states have done. We have already wasted too much time with talk, hysterical talk some of it, senseless, harmful.

7-27-48

And the time is here for action. Cannot South Carolinians trust South Carolinians? Cannot they have confidence in South Carolina which has come through greater crises than this, met graver problems and solved them?

"O, ye of little faith" try South Carolina and see if South Carolinians are the craven cattle you pretend to think they are.

Negroes Again Vote in Carolina; Forrestal Bid Seen as Share

34e(2)

Developments in the Negro people's war against Jimcrow this week netted two runs and one probably foul ball.

- April 19, the U. S. Supreme Court ruled that Negroes could vote in the South Carolina primaries despite a 1944 statute, limiting primary voting to "white Democrats." Lower courts in that state had already affirmed Negroes rights to vote, but a group of South Carolina Democrats were appealing from these decisions.

The Supreme Court justices issued no written opinion. They merely noted their refusal to hear the appeals.

- On April 20, in Columbia, S. C., Negroes cast ballots in an important election for the first time since 1876. Of the 4,890 persons with registration certificates, about 500 Negroes voted in the City's Democratic primary, to nominate two Council candidates.

- But Defense Secretary James V. Forrestal, smarting from nationwide protest against Army Jimcrow, called 15 prominent Negroes to Washington for "discussion" of race relations in the services. The banker-politico's move instantly roused suspicions, one informant of The Worker expressing the opinion that Forrestal may propose a separate mixed unit as an "experiment," and that this may prove attractive to certain half-a-loaf leaders among the fifteen.

Forrestal ignored Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, who has introduced legislation banning military Jimcrow; George Murphy, Negro veteran leader; J. Finley Wilson, Negro Elks leader, Councilman Benjamin J. Davis, and other leaders who have vigorously fought Jimcrow Also omitted from Forrestal's list were A. Philip Randolph, and Grant Reynolds, who have urged a campaign of civil disobedience against Army Jimcrow.

The 15, reportedly hand picked by Lester B. Granger, Forrestal's chief Negro apologist, include Mordecai Johnson, Charles Houston, John W. Davis of West Virginia State College; Truman K. Gibson, Jr.; Walter White, Channing Tobias, and Mary McLeod Bethune.

White told The Worker, "There is no thought of compromise in my mind."

Wrong, In The First Place

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

34C(2)

Wed. 7-21-48

South Carolina's Federal District Judge J. Waites Waring, made his order complete Tuesday by ordering the Democratic Party of that State to abolish its Voters' Oath and stick to nothing save the qualifications set forth in the Constitution.

Under the artificial device of the Democratic Party of South Carolina, Negroes were required to swear their belief in the principles of the party, declare against social and educational seperation of the races, states' rights and opposition to a Fair Employment Practices law.

David Brown, a Negro citizen of Beauford, S. C., resented the imposition of these extra-legal requirements and hence went to court to have them declared unconstitutional. Not only did judge, rule out artificial devices, he toldBrown "It is a shame and disgrace that you have to come into a court to ask a judge whether you are an American." Whereupon, he ordered Party officials, some 87 in all, to open the books to Negroes or go to jail for failure to obey both the "letter and spirit" of his order.

Judge Waring is helping South Carolina to get in line with the march of America to freedom and justice for all citizens, although the fight is a slow and tedious one against the damagogues like Gov. Thurmond, who, it might be said, is the most reactionary voice in the South today.

We do not think it is necessary for Negroes in Georgia or in other Southern States to test the validity of their claims to full and equal Party affiliation and representation. It ought to be clear to party leaders in other states without a test case since the precedent in South Carolina should be quite sufficient. But if it becomes necessary, there is not the slightest doubt that cases can be made.

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

The ultimate effect of the order by Judge Waring is that due notice is being given to all southern states that the right of the Negro to full political equality cannot and must not be denied by any group and that artificial divices, such as educational tests, which are being created only because a few Negroes are beginning to vote, as well as other devices, must be stopped.

Maybank Leading In Carolina; Negroes Pile Out To Ballot

34C(2)

Advertiser, Montgomery, Ala.

By The Associated Press

Senator Robert R. Maybank set the pace for his four opponents in early returns from Tuesday's Democratic senatorial primary in South Carolina.

Although Negroes voted in nubmers for the first time in more than 70 years in this state, there were no reports of race friction.

Wed. 8-11-48

Maybank, a member of the Senate since 1941, received 11,300 votes in the first 157 of the state's 1,559 precincts to report. Rep. W. J. B. Dorn, of the Third District, had 6,277; Neville Bennett, Clio farmer, 2,505; Marcus A. Stone, had 1,068 and Alan Johnstone, 2,012.

8-11-48

Negro leaders estimated the vote of their race at 30,000. The total vote was expected to be something above 300,000.

Dummy or advisory ballots distributed at the voting booths here pointed to some organized Negro support for Bennett in the senatorial race, and for Rep. John J. Riley, of the Second District, one of the state's three congressmen with opposition. The ballots were prepared on a duplicating machine.

State President James H. Hinton of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said the only way to make the Negro vote effective was by such "recommendations."

Both Bennett and Riley said they had known nothing about the ballots.

Arkansas Democrats decided a two-man run-off for governor and a congressional race in the Third District. Nominations in Arkansas and South Carolina Democratic primaries are equivalent to election.

8-11-48

Idaho had only two Democratic congressional races after a campaign in which observers blamed inflation for the relative scarcity of candidates. The unusual claim was made that candidates failed to file in the usual numbers because salaries of public officials have not kept pace with those in private business or living costs.

A federal court decision by Judge J. Waites Waring granting Negroes the right to participate in the Democratic primary was the main talking point in the South Carolina Senate contest. All five candidates, including Senator Maybank who is seeking hi ssecond full six-year term, took exception to the ruling.

Three U. S. representatives had no opposition for renomination in South Carolina. They were L. Mendel Rivers, First; Joseph R. Bryson, Fourth, and John L. McMillan, Sixth District.

8-11-48

Arkansas Democrats picked a new governor in a run-off-race between Sidney McMath, 36-year-old Garland County prosecutor, and Jack Holt, 45-year-old Little Rock lawyer. The third district House contest was between Rep. J. W. Trimble and Charles B. Ivy.

Heavy Negro Balloting In South Carolina Is Held Likely Tomorrow

The News

Mon. 8-9-48

By DEL BOOTH

B'ham, Ala.

COLUMBIA S. C., Aug. 9—(AP)—Negroes in this state of the Deep South will have their first general voting since the carpetbagger days of the 1870s in tomorrow's Democratic primary to select a nominee for the United States Senate.

About 35,000 Negroes are among the estimated 480,000 persons enrolled on the party membership books for the primary, and a heavy Negro vote is expected. Their vote could materially affect the senatorial and other contests.

The Negroes won their primary voting rights, then their party membership, in decisions by Federal District Judge J. Waties Waring of Charleston.

* * *

THE U. S. SENATE RACE was highlighted in its closing weeks of the five candidates' county-to-county oratorical tour by attacks on Waring and his decisions.

Newberry Atty. Alan Johnstone, former Federal Works Agency counsel, led these attacks, accusing Incumbent Sen. Burnet R. Maybank of Charleston of having had Waring appointed.

Maybank replied that the late Sen. E. D. (Cotton Ed) Smith also was in the Senate when Waring was named. He further declared Waring's decisions were "deplorable."

U. S. Rep. William Jennings Bryan Dorn of Greenwood, a third candidate, introduced a resolution at the special session of Congress to investigate Waring's "conduct in office."

Mon. 8-9-48

The other two candidates in the race, only statewide contest for the primary, are Neville Bennett, a farmer of Clio, and Marcus A. Stone, a lumberman, of Florence who also have taken issue with Judge Waring's decisions.

Second Primary Tuesday Holds State Interest

Columbia Record

Mon. 8-23-48

South Carolina Democrats, white and Negro, will vote in a second primary tomorrow to nominate candidates for six state Senate and 34 state House of Representatives seats.

24C(2)

Voters in the third congressional district, composed of Anderson, Abbeville, Greenwood, McCormick, Edgefield, Saluda, Oconee and Pickens counties, will choose a candidate for the United States House of Representatives.

Columbia, S.C.

James B. Hare of Saluda and former Rep. John C. Taylor of Anderson are in the second race for the congressional seat vacated by Rep. W. J. B. Dorn of Greenwood, an unsuccessful candidate for the United States Senate.

Both Hare and Taylor are lawyers and both attended the University of South Carolina. Hare is the son of former Rep. Butler B. Hare. The two survived a four-man field in the August 10 first primary, with Hare in the lead.

No statewide offices are involved in the second primary, since United States Senator Burnet R. Maybank swept to renomination in the first primary over four opponents.

Nominees for five of the state's six congressional seats also were chosen in the first primary. Incumbents L. Mendel Rivers in the first district, Joseph R. Bryson in the fourth, James P. Richards in the fifth and John L. McMillan in the sixth and war Veteran Hugo S. Sims, Jr., in the second were chosen.

Sims defeated incumbent John J. Riley.

Candidates for 17 state Senate and 88 state House of Representatives seats also were selected in the first primary.

Negro Vote Is Heavy in S.C. Primary

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(U.P.)—Senator Burnet R. Maybank, never a loser in a South Carolina primary, swung into a majority lead over four opponents as returns rolled in from Tuesday's Democratic senatorial primary in which Negroes voted for the first time.

Detroit, Mich.

With more than half the state's precincts reported—857 out of 1,565—Maybank had 78,302 votes to 34,355 for former Rep. William J. Bryan Dorn, 22,646 for Neville Bennett, 8,140 for Alan Johnstone and 6,855 for Marcus Stone.

A TIDE OF Maybank votes from Charleston, where he was former mayor, enabled him to establish his majority.

Negroes voted heavily in the larger cities, their unqualified voting rights assured for a primary for the first time since the Reconstruction.

Negro Says He Was Knifed And Beaten After Casting Vote

The Columbia Record

A South Carolina Negro minister filed an affidavit with United States Attorney Tom Clark today, in which he declared he was beaten and knifed as he left a Calhoun Falls polling place after the Democratic primary of August 10.

Mon. 8-23-48

24C(2)

The affidavit gave details of the alleged attack by a group of men, described as carrying knives. One, the affidavit declared, beat the minister with a club. The Negro was taken to a hospital for treatment, the minister's statement continued.

Columbia, S.C.

James M. Hinton, state president of the Nataional Association for the Advancement of Colored People said the object of the affidavit was "to bring criminal prosecution."

No reports of any violence in South Carolina had been made on the day of the first primary, and Democratic party officials had expressed themselves as highly pleased at the orderliness of the election.

And what would be accomplished by adopting the nominating convention system in South Carolina as a means of preventing Negro participation in Democratic party affairs?

34e(2)

For the convention, like the primary, under Judge Parker's decision, would have to allow for Negro participation .

In the decision, as published Saturday by The Record, Judge Parker quoted with approval the concurring opinion of Justice Pitney in the case of Newberry v. United States: Mon 1-12-48

"It seems to me too clear for discussion that primary elections and nominating conventions are so closely related to the final election, and their proper regulation so essential to effective regulation, of the latter, so vital to representative government that power to regulate them is within the general authority of Congress . . ."

The federal courts, by this token, do not make any distinction between primaries and nominating conventions. The Record

The South Carolina Democratic party has decided to carry the appeal in the South Carolina primary case to the supreme court of the United States. Sat. 1-24-48

34e(2) S.C.

The party has lost in two courts—the United States district court of Judge J. Waites Waring and the United States circuit court of appeals at Baltimore—and it probably has no expectation of winning before the supreme court.

But there are issues in the case involving more than the right of the Negroes to participation in the white Democratic primary in South Carolina. The case isn't simply a test of Negro voting. It is an action for damages brought against 60 white citizens, officials of the Democratic party in South Carolina.

These individuals, now in jeopardy as a result of the Waring and circuit court of appeals decisions, are entitled to have their case heard by the supreme court. They acted, at least under their understanding of what the supreme court decisions of that day said.

Both South Carolina and the Negroes of the South are probably entitled to a supreme court decision which can settle the matter, not only for South Carolina, but for every state. And both sides are entitled to have a decision, which evades none of the issues raised, a closely reasoned decision, which neither the Waring nor the Parker decision is. Judge Waring and Judge Parker had to guess what new law would be made by the supreme court if the case should reach that court. The supreme court is under no such compulsion. It may declare the law, overruling, if necessary, decisions that conflict with its new opinion, which then becomes the law.

The Record
Columbia, S.C.

And the supreme court decision will settle the debate. South Carolina has gone as far as any state could to escape the necessity for permitting Negro voting. No other state can go beyond it and none so far has equaled it. Sat. 1-24-48

The House of Representatives has given its approval to a bill to provide for a secret Australian ballot in the general election in South Carolina.

And it is a wise decision remedying a condition which has long needed remedying. The Record

The general election is now the only election in South Carolina if the arguments of the attorneys defending the South Carolina primary case be true. The primary is, they argue, not an election. It is conducted not to select state and federal officers, but to name the Democratic party nominees. The real election is the general election. Columbia, S.C.

And it may be this year. The time has come to consider it a real election. Tues. 3-9-48

Two Negroes Send Cash For Primary

Columbia, S.C.

Two local Negro leaders today contributed five dollars each toward the expenses of holding a municipal Democratic primary here this spring.

They were James N. Hinton, president of the South Carolina conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and John McCray, editor of the Negro weekly newspaper, "The Lighthouse And Informer."

W. Felix Wheeler, chairman of the executive committee of the city Democratic party, said today that he had received checks from Hinton and McCray, but "the only thing I have the power to do is present them to the committee for a decision at their next meeting Thursday night." 1-24-48

The contributions from McCray and Hinton followed action here Thursday night by the city Democratic executive committee when it was agreed that an $8,000 gift from city council should be returned to the city and that the party would raise by solicitation the necessary $8,000 for primary costs. About $30 was collected at the Thursday meeting with an additional $300 pledged. Sat. 1-24-48

A finance committee was appointed, consisting of Walter H. Smith, a University veteran student, city recorder John I. Rice and J. H. Haithcock, Jr., vice president of the Young Democrats of Columbia.

Letter From Hinton

Hinton said in his letter to Wheeler, "I notice that the city Democratic party is in need of funds to operate the city Democratic primary.

"I am a registered voter and an enrolled Democrat in Ward 9. I say enrolled, since I do not consider the purging of my name valid.

"It is my desire to share in the responsibilities of operating the primary, as well as enjoying the privileges that are incidental to same. I am therefore enclosing by check for $5.00 as a donation to the expenses of the primary.

"Negroes are going to vote this year in the city primary for the first time, and many of them will share in the expenses and responsibilities of running the city Democratic primary." 34e(2) S.C.

McCray said in his letter, "As a subscriber to the tenets of the Democratic party, and as one interested in the successful undertakings of that organization, I am inclosing my contribution of five dollars to help underwrite expenses of the forthcoming city primary.

"I am sure there are many others like me who wouldn't mind contributing a similar sum to insure a primary this year, and, who have noticed in newspaper reports that the city organization presently lacks adequate funds for the primary." 1-24-48

South Carolina Democrats Appeal Adverse Rulings on All-White Primary

New York, N.Y.
Fri. 3-12-48

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, March 11—The Supreme Court was asked today to upset lower court rulings that would permit Negroes to vote in the South Carolina Democratic primaries, which are held under the "private club" plan.

When the Supreme Court in 1944 said that Texas could not bar Negroes from the Demicratic primaries, South Carolina wiped its primary laws from the statute books. Thereafter, the Democratic party in the state was turned into what the officials appealing to the Supreme Court today called a "private voluntary association of individuals, mutually acceptable to each other," and not created by state law.

Negroes immediately fought back, and last July, Federal Judge J. Waties Waring ruled in Charleston that they could not be excluded despite the "club" system.

"To say that there is any material differenc ein the governance of the Democratic party in this state prior to, and subsequent to 1944, is pure sophistry," he stated.

His opinion was sustained Dec. 30 by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals at Richmond. Judge John J. Parker held that no election machinery could be legal if its purpose or effect was to deny the Negro, "on account of his race or color, an effective voice in the government of his country or the state or the community in which he lives." The Times

Party officials in Richland County (Columbia) brought the appeal ot the Supreme Court. They said that the Circuit Court had no authority, inasmuch as "there was no state action involved, and the primary was not required by law, and was not an election." The Democratic party, they argued, is wholly unregulated by state law, and the primaries are carried on "merely under party rules."

Further, they asserted, the Supreme Court has heretofore "left open the question of the inherent power of a political party when uncontrolled and unregulated by state law to determine its own membership." New York, N.Y.

The lawyers said that the "sixty residents and citizens" they represented had the legal "freedom to think as they willed and to express their thought as a means indispensable to the discovery and spread of political truth." Fri.

Disposition of the appeal is a matter of conjecture. Should it be granted and arguments are heard, it might not be possible to decide the issue before the contemplated Supreme Court adjournment in June. On the other hand, if the petition were denied, the refusal would automatically uphold the Circuit Court ruling. 3-12-48

New test. South Carolina white supremacists have asked the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals to reconsider its decision nullifying the "country-club" method of excluding Negroes from voting in the Democratic primaries.

The court's action is a milestone toward Negro suffrage in the South. If upheld, it will put an end to judicial enforcement of the "all-white primary" in the South. Every state with election laws like South Carolina's is deeply interested in the result of the demand for a rehearing. N.Y., N.Y.

In 1944, South Carolina circumvented previous decisions handed down by courts in Texas, Louisiana and Georgia by having an "Extraordinary Session of the General Assembly" repeal all statutes relating to primary elections (about 150). In their place, the Democratic Party state convention adopted a complete new set of rules. Mon. 2-9-48 has held absolute control of the choice of elective officers in South Carolina and that therefore "the real elections within the state have been contests within the Democratic Party, the general elections serving only to ratify and give legal validity to the party choice."

The appeal will be watched with special interest in Alabama and Georgia. Alabama's "Boswell law" requires prospective voters to "interpret" rather than merely read or write the Constitution. The catch is that persons must interpret the organic law to the satisfaction solely of the local registrars. Mon. 2-9-48

As fast as the courts reject as unconstitutional Southern voting laws, new restrictive practices will be tried, but Negro leaders are prepared to press for their rights.

The Convention System

The Record

If as a result of the decision of the circuit court of appeals, upholding the right of Negroes to participate in South Carolina's Democratic primaries, the party abolishes the primary there would not be very much that the Negroes could do about it.

34e(2)

For the Negroes themselves through the Republican party and more recently the Progressive Democratic party have helped establish the precedents for this very thing. Both the Republicans and the Progressive Democrats have on occasion entered candidates in various races, but none of the candidates of these Negro-dominated parties in South Carolina have been selected in primaries. Columbia S. C.

And there is talk, of course, now of returning to the convention system of nominating candidates, the system in use still in some of the two-party states and in use in this state until Tillman's day. There was even talk of it when the special session of the General Assembly was called to repeal the state's primary laws as a means of getting around the supreme court's decisions. That was the Charleston News and Courier's plan in 1944. Thu. 1-8-48

There is nothing wrong with the convention system in a two-party state. It has some advantages over the primary system in such states since the party nominees tend to be generally men picked by their fellows for some reason likely to appeal to the voters in the general election campaign. The primary choice, on the other hand, may be made on party issues appealing to the party members, but ineffective in the general election. 1-8-48. Thu.

But South Carolina isn't a two-party state and the adoption of the nominating convention system in this state would mean the practical disfranchisement of whites as well as Negroes. How much influence do you suppose organized labor could exercise in the choice of candidates in South Carolina under the convention system?

So most of the opposition to the adoption of the convention system in South Carolina will come from the whites, not from the Negroes.

Time To Act

34e(2) S.C.

The General Assembly of South Carolina, meeting next week, had better make up its mind to face the issue created by the Negro voter.

Thu. 1-8-48

The South Carolina Democratic party hasn't, of course, decided whether to appeal the decision of the circuit court of appeals to the supreme court, but everybody knows what the decision, when and if the supreme court writes one, will be. There isn't any real reason to expect that the court would grant the writ of certiori if it should be asked. So the case, even if an appeal be taken, may be finally decided long before the primary elections. Columbia Record

The sensible course is for the legislature to write into law again statutes to govern any nominating primaries to be held hereafter in the state, making the requirements for voting in the primaries identical with the requirements for voting in the general election. No man should vote in a primary who cannot support the nominees of the party in the general election.

Columbia, S.C.

Thu. 1-8-48

It might even be advisable to strengthen some of these voting qualifications. And the time to act is now. There is nothing to be gained by waiting until a special session is called to act at the last minute and in haste and hysteria.

Incidental

34e(2) S.C.

One of the incidental results of the decision in the South Carolina white primary case will be, it seems safe to guess, a considerable increase in the volume of general election registrations in South Carolina and of course in the income from the poll tax.

Beneath The Dignity Of The Party And The State

There are some lessons to be learned from Tuesday's general election to name two members of city council for Columbia.

Columbia S.C.

Only 1,517 votes were cast in the election, the real election, as compared with some 10,048 votes cast in the first Democratic primary, and 7,837 cast in the second primary. Sat. 5-15-48

And the Democratic candidates won by the overwhelming majority of 1,501 to 16. Lester L. Bates and Colin S. Monteith, the Democratic nominees, are now the elected members of council.

Forty-seven Negro voters participated in the election and 31 of them voted the Democratic ticket, only 16 for the Republicans. The largest number, 30, voted in Ward 9, only four of them for the Republicans.

More than 400 Negro citizens are qualified electors in Columbia. Having taken the trouble to register, they could have voted. Ninety per cent of them did not. Sixty-six per cent of those who did voted Democratic.

Here is concrete evidence for the fearful-and-trembling South Carolina Democratic party misleaders that the Negroes of South Carolina are not of one mind but are divided as all other voters are divided on issues and on personalities. And this, of course, is what every intelligent person expected. Here also is evidence that the Negro Democrats of South Carolina will take their primary oaths seriously. For the 31 Negro votes cast for the Democratic candidates in the general election is a higher percentage of the Negro primary vote than the 1,486 white Democratic votes were of the white primary vote.

The Columbia Record

Columbia S.C.

Sat. 5-15-48

Columbia's experience with Negro voting both in the Democratic city primary, in which Negroes were allowed to vote, if they were qualified electors, despite the fact that they could not enroll in the time after the supreme court's decision was announced, and now in the general election supplies the demonstration that Negroes in the state can be admitted to the primary, as they have always been eligible for admission to the general election, without resulting in the revolution which some of the politicians profess to fear.

And the people of South Carolina, who make up the Democratic party, have got to take over from the politicians and the ex-politicians who now control the party and who are now cooking up plans to advance the primary date and to shorten the enrolment period, as if by this act they could prevent some Negroes from enroling and voting, as of course they also will prevent many whites from enroling and voting.

The Columbia Record

Columbia S.C.

This would be to force the party to run away from the courts' decisions and such cowardice on the part of the Democrats of South Carolina is beneath the dignity of the party and of the state.

Sat. 5-15-48

The scheme, of course, has one advantage, or a sort. It gives every incumbent office holder the edge in the campaign. It virtually prohibits the development of any real issues in the primary. Not enough time would be allowed for any real campaigning. The voters would in most instances simply be reduced to the device of accepting the man already in office because they knew him best and could be certain at least that they would be getting no worse than they already have.

Maybe this is the real explanation of the brew; it is a politicians' dish, not for consumption by the voters—it will give them indigestion. Sat. 5-15-48

Let's Get Ready Now

Record Columbia, S.C. Thu. 1-8-48

On Friday of this week the U. S. District Court of South Carolina for the Eastern District will rule whether or not Negroes will have the legal right to enroll in Democratic clubs and thereby qualify to vote in the primary on the same basis as whites or, in plain words, have federally secured their right to a "meaningful" ballot.

34e(2)

During the week Negroes had the chance to affix their names to club books without registration certificates, under a temporary order from Judge Waring. The number of them doing so is not known but if they didn't get around to doing it then and the court shall keep the books open longer, they should drop everything also and enroll for the primary.

Negroes had a delegation in Philadelphia this week to claim their voting rights were taken away; but anybody is liable to find a possession removed if he lets it lie carelessly about and at the mercy of anybody wanting to pick it up and take it off.

We do not say the delegation should not have been sent for it should have; but we are saying that Negroes should begin to take more advantage of rights already established, and made available to them by people who sacrifice social and other standings. The least that should be expected is that the sacrifices be repaid in full by use made of the rights.

There's absolutely no sense nor health in standing on corners praising somebody or laughing at somebody. The only thing which is going to settle the Negro's voting problem in South Carolina is voting by the Negroes. In other words, by Negroes themselves.

So let us now get ready to vote in primaries next month. Let us build up a big vote; an impressive one. And the matter is so important that every church, organization and individual ought to give full time to it in the few days left before the primary.

WHILE 19th Century Southerners are making that anti-Negro noise in Birmingham it is good to hear a South Carolina Federal judge reminding everybody that the U. S. Constitution still applies in South Carolina.

Judge J. WATIES WARING was ruling on the petition of DAVID BROWN, a Negro from the lovely tidewater town of Beaufort, to be allowed to vote in the South Carolina primary. Since the primary is the only election that counts for anything in South Carolina, if BROWN can't vote in it, he can't vote effectively at all. Judge WARING was indignant. 7-19-48

Courier-Journal

"The time has come when racial discrimination in political affairs must stop," he declared. He lectured the party leaders named as defendants, telling them it is "a disgrace and a shame when you must come into court and ask a judge to tell you you are an American." Racial or religious discrimination in the active franchise must stop at once, he said, or the discriminators will go to jail. That's all there is to it—no beating around the bush, no foolishness about white primaries being like activities of a private club.

Louisville, Ky.

What Judge WARING says is only what anyone should, if he regards the Constitution as more than a historic curiosity. Because of that it really shouldn't make any difference what Judge WARING's background is. But in view of the violence of feeling which recently has sprung up about so-called states' rights—a euphemism meaning right to oppress an underprivileged race—his background is illuminating. Mon.

Judge WARING was born in Charleston 68 years ago this month. He was graduated by the College of Charleston. He has lived in Charleston all his life and practiced law there continuously until he was appointed to the Federal bench in 1942. He was no Damyankee judge interfering with the right of white South Carolinians to run elections as they please. He was typical of that great group of Southerners, sometimes outshouted but always growing, who believe what the Constitution says about citizenship and the dignity of man.

Party Holds Waring Overstepped Power

Columbia, S.C.

Thurs. 7-29-48

CHARLESTON, July 29—(AP)—South Carolina Democrats, replying to an action brought against the state party by a Beaufort Negro, David Brown, today denied the right of United States District J. Waties Waring to open party enrolment books to all qualified electors.

In a formal answer to Brown's suit, demanding the right for himself and other Negroes to membership in the party, the Democrats contended that the party and the party primary "do not become the property of every person in the state simply because the members of that party have been the only ones who have the character, ability, vigor and communitiy of interests to associate themselves together as citizens to exercise their constitutional right to work together for public and governmental principles and objectives."

"Any contention or holding to the contrary," the Democrats said, "is believed by these defendants to be in derogation of their constiutional rights."

Brown's petition for a preliminary injunction against the party was granted July 19, by Judge Waring in an order forbidding any discrimination at the polls.

Hearing To Be Held

The preliminary injunction will continue in force until a hearing is held on a permanent order. Such a hearing probably will come at a regular term of Federal court. The next session is set for October 11.

The Democrats this morning set forth four principal reasons why they believe such a permanent injunction will be unjustified.

Thurs.

They charged that Brown is guilty "of unwarranted delay" in instituting the action which resulted in the reopening of primary enrollment books. 7-29-48

The party charged that Brown and many of the persons for whom he sues are members of "another party, namely the Progressive Democratic party, which party is not in sympathy with the fundamental principles and governmental objectives of the Democratic party of South Carolina."

They claimed the right to restrict party membership to "those in sympathy with its principles."

Continuing their defense, the Democrats noted that in as much as Brown had brought suit in behalf of himself and "others similarly situated" following his enrolment and purging from the Beaufort rolls, that the court's decision granting relief should be confined to those who had been similarly affected.

The Record

Not Restriction

The Democrats said they did not construe the decision in the Elmore vs. Rice case, in which a Columbia Negro won the right to vote in Richland county primaries, as holding that the Democratic party could no longer restrict its membership, "but only a holding that Negroes who were qualified electors must be given the right to vote in its primaries."

Columbia, S.C.

The requirement of producing general election registration certificates "was merely a procedural requirement in reference to the persons seeking to vote evidencing their right to do so," the party said.

The party said it had "the right to make a condition of membership sympathy with its principles."

It added, "the oath prescribed by the state convention was a proper and legitimate exercise of that right, at least so far as enrolling and becoming members of the party is considered." Thurs.

7-29-48

By United Press

The answer, filed in Judge Waring's court, was signed by four party lawyers—Eugene S. Blease of Newberry, Robert McC. Figg, Jr., of Charleston, S. S. Tison of Bennettsville and George Warren of Hampton.

Judge Waring Also Has To Make Three Tries

Judge J. Waties Waring couldn't do any better than General Dwight D. Eisenhower. It took him three tries also to write a decision that the politicians of South Carolina could not misunderstand, even if they set out to misunderstand it.

34e(2)

There was his decision in the Elmore case, which was clear enough to ordinary citizens and lawyers, even some newspapermen. The politicians, however, insisted on misreading it and persuaded the Democratic party of South Carolina to emulate John L. Lewis in defying the courts.

Columbia Record

The decision in the Brown case, the result of this ill-starred attempt at defying the federal courts, was handed down last week. The Democratic party's lawyers, able men, correctly read the order and interpreted it as it was meant to be interpreted. But some of the Low Country politicians persisted in misreading it. They set up a howl that it required the Democratic party to include in the voters' oath an adjuration that the voter would support the national nominees of the party, including Harry Truman. No such thing was intended or could in logic be deduced from Judge Waring's words. Mon. 7-26-48

So the judge had another try at it. And this time he spelled it out at some length and where possible in words of one syllable, not once, but twice.

"It is reiterated," he concludes, "and distinctly understood that it is optional with the defendants to require an oath containing the whole or any part or parts of the foregoing (customary Democratic party oath) or to forego requiring any oath at all."

And that is what his first order meant. It is what the party lawyers understood it to mean.

"Judge Waring's order," they wrote to Senator W. P. Baskin, the state party chairman, "does not require the administration of any oath; it merely limits the scope of whatever oath the party may see fit to administer." The Record

They point out also that Judge Waring ruled that neither the state chairman nor the executive committee, the party's privy council, may usurp the functions of the state convention, as they tried to do, and amend the rules. They suggest therefore that the entire oath, including even those provisions of it which Judge Waring holds to be lawful, be abandoned. Mon

This, of course, is a change in the party rules, which may be changed only by the state convention so far as the party is concerned. It excises practically the whole of Rule 36.

Columbia Record

And other changes are in fact being made in the rules to bring them into conformity with the court decisions.

S.C.

. But the state convention, which was merely recessed not adjourned, and which was expected to meet again after the national convention, isn't being reconvened to do these things in an orderly manner.

Somehow the politicians are still wary of calling the convention back. Of what now are they afraid?

Negro Vote In S.C. Ordered

The CIO News

Washington, D.C.

THE South Carolina Democratic party has been ordered for the second time in a year to stop excluding Negroes from membership.

Mon. 7-26-48

The order was issued last week by U. S. District Court Judge J. Waites Waring. A similar decision last year was carried by the county Democrats to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which sustained the Judge. That case arose in Richland County.

Obviously angered by the Party's refusal to conform to his original order, Waring emphasized in court: "Let me tell you that any disobedience to the letter and spirit of this ruling will result in contempt proceedings. The parties responsible for any violation will be punished by imprisonment. Mon.

"It's a disgrace and a shame when you must come into court and ask a judge to tell you you are an American," he exclaimed. 7-26-48

Waring ordered the registration books, which were closed on June 22, to be reopened. Immediately Negroes flocked to the registration booths.

34e(2)

In granting a preliminary injunction, Waring said his order would "bar racial discrimination . . . provide that the books be opened to all parties regardless of race or religion and will fix a reasonable time for the books to be opened. The time has come when racial discrimination in political affairs must stop."

In addition, the Judge ordered the party to abolish the state Democratic Party's voters' oath. Democratic Party members were required to swear their belief in the principles of the state Democratic party; support of social and educational separation of the races; belief in the principle of states' rights and opposition to the proposed FEPC.

Mon.

In 1943 and 1944 the state legislature repealed primary election laws in an effort to transform the state Democratic party into a private club with the right to choose its own membership. Thereafter Negroes were excluded.

Carolina Negroes Enrolling Slowly

The Times-Picayune
New Orleans, La.

(The Associated Press)

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 17.—Negro enrollment in the South Carolina Democratic party, enforced by a federal court order, apparently was proceeding slowly today. Sun. 7-18-48

A full-scale movement of Negroes to put their names on party books was not expected until after next Monday. Copies of US District Judge J. W. Waring's order will be ready by then for service on county party officials by US marshals.

An estimated 2000 Negroes have enrolled in Charleston county since last Monday, when Waring issued a temporary order pending yesterday's hearing of a Beaufort Negro's suit against the state party's double-standard primary voting rules.

Some counties, notably Florence and Charleston, opened their books immediately after the temporary order was handed down.

Other counties, among them Spartanburg, opened their books today. Sun. 7-18-48

Threaten Suit If Names Removed By Beaufort Officials

BEAUFORT, S. C. — Threats of individual damage suits against officials of the Democratic party in Beaufort county were made here Monday in the event the names of Negroes on city enrollment books were purged on Friday of this week as county officials said they would be. Sun. 7-4-48

Democratic chairman J. B. Cope said 38 Negroes had placed their names on the city enrollment book in violation of state party rules, suggesting this was done without knowledge of the enrollment secretary. However, Jos. M. Wright, one of the enrollees, said his name was placed by consent of the secretray in charge, who opened the book and showed him where to sign.

Mr. Wright said he believed this was the case with the others who enrolled.

Originally, it was estimated that 250 persons had enrolled. A check, however, showed that this number was confused with the number of persons who registered for the general election at one drive 7-4-48

Dr. Montgomery P. Kennedy, Beaufort county Progressive Democratic chairman, issued a firm warning to Mr. Cope and other county party leaders Tuesday, declaring that no time would be wasted in taking their case into court if a single name were purged. At Columbia, both John H. McCray state PDP chairman, and James M. Hinton, state NAACP president expressed the same intention. Sun.

In line with this determination it was announced that Thursday night, attorney Harold R. Boulware of Columbia, will confer with the enrolled persons and address a mass meeting in the Methodist Church, and will also remain over to appear before county party rulers in the Beaufort county court house on Friday morning. 7-4-48

White Demos Divided Over Race Vote Issue

34e(2)
The Lighthouse and Informer
Columbia, S.C.

GREENVILLE, S. C. — (SNS) — A political upheaval that threatens to break the Democratic Party wide open looms in South Carolina over the controversial question of primary voting privileges for Negroes.

The whole fight stems from an intraparty dispute involving a racial segregation oath and a double-standard primary voting rule. Sun.

These double-barrelled issues have camps and has resulted in a spirited defense of Negro voting rights that is unprecedented in the annals of the South. 7-4-48

The story dates back to May 19 when the State Democratic Convention adopted two sets of primary rules. One permits Negroes to vote in the primaries on presentation of registration certificates for the general election showing they are "qualified voters." The other set permits white Democrats to vote in the primaries by enrolling on the club's books.

The major bone of contention is a rule which requires both races to take an oath that they belive in separation of races socially and educationally and are opposed to a Federal Fair Employment Practices legislation.

The break with the party came when six upland counties, reprsenting one-sixth of the population, opposed convention rules. Lowland counties favor it.

Here is what happened: Greenville, Greenwood, Laurens, Pickins, Richland, and Spartanburg counties took action through their executive committees to defy the state convention and opened their books to Negroes and whites on the same basis. Several of the counties refused to apply the new oath for applicants. The Lighthouse + Informer

But when the party enrollment in the five upland counties fell off so badly because of the refusal of voters to take the new oath, the upland counties had to keep their deadline to accept enrollments with-books open beyond the June 22nd deadline to accept enrollments with out the oath. Columbia, S.C.

It is generally believed by the upland counties that the convention rules, if adopted and carried out, will result in court tests invalidating election results. The prevailing opinion of the upland counties is that it is now time to recognize that the Negro's voting rights are going to be supported by the courts and that "party leadership" should be provided for the Negro voter. Sun.

South Carolina's veteran political observers insist that the "defense" of Negro voting privileges by the upland counties does not stem from any "liberal beliefs," but that the uplanders' traditions of strong individualism and inherited dislike for tidewater or lowland political direction has rebounded to the political benefit of the Negro. 7-4-48

It was [illegible] out that the uplander [illegible] to the traditional [illegible] ways, mores and pattern [illegible] segregation, but they are strongly reluctant to put themselves on record by signing an oath setting forth such views. Their strong religious and individualistic natures oppose the oath. 7-4-48

Moreover, they have not forgotten that the federal courts recently ruled against South Carolina's strategem of removing the primary voting laws and directed that "qualified Negro voters" had the right to vote in Democratic primaries.

Time To Face Facts

The Record Columbia, S.C. Wed. 2-3-48

Representative W. J. B. Dorn of Greenwood was instrumental in having the state Democratic executive committee abandon the proposal for holding the Democratic primaries in June instead of August or September.

The earlier primaries would, he argued, be unfair to those candidates, of which Mr. Dorn may be one, just beginning to think about running.

In addition, he argued, an attempt to hold the primaries before the federal courts may act on the pending appeal of the South Carolina Democrats would tend to put the South Carolina party in a bad light with the courts.

The Record Columbia, S.C.

Mr. Dorn's arguments, like nearly everybody else's, are conditioned by his own interests, but in this instance he is right. Wed. 2-3-48

The idea of holding the primaries in mid-summer in order to escape the necessity for allowing Negroes to vote was simply a suggestion of desperation, an attempt to postpone for one more election the day of reckoning that is coming to South Carolina.

South Carolina ought to be bigger than this. The time is here when it must face facts, not evade them. Wed. 2-3-48

Union Negroes Sue For Right Of Registration

The Record Columbia, S.C.

Action was today on file in Union county by Claud Copeland of that county as petitioner, and other lawful electors of the Negro race, declaring that they have been denied their lawful rights and suffrage, by allegedly being refused the right to register for the general elections. Fri. 2-6-48

Named as defendants in the action which was brought in Common Pleas (civil) court were W. T. Vaughn, D. L. Gault and J. Boyd Lancaster, as and constituting the board of registration of Union county.

The notice in the action calls for a return scheduled for 10 a. m., February 23, before Judge E. H. Henderson of Bamberg, presiding judge of the seventh judicial circuit.

The petition alleges that the registration was open to electors February 2, 3 and 4 at Union and that the elector (Copeland) presented himself with proper credentials and requested to be registered, "but the respondents thereupon failed and refused to register or allow your petitioner to be registered upon said books of qualified electors in their charge solely because of his race and color, so stating to your petitioner, and further advising your petitioner that no provisions had been made for the registration of electors of the Negro race."

The petitioner asks the court that the books be required to be opened to the petitioner and others for a three-day period in February; and that at other times when the books are opened the right to register shall not be refused upon grounds of race or color.

Harold R. Boulware of Columbia is attorney for the petitioner.

The action was believed the first of its type in South Carolina in which it was specifically stated that the registration was denied by reason of color. Fri. 2-6-48

No Need To Wait

The Record Fri. 1-16-48

Representative B. M. Gibson of Greenville correctly diagnoses the problem when he suggests that the state of South Carolina should re-enact its primary laws as a result of the federal courts' decisions in the South Carolina no-primary law case. Columbia, S.C.

"The federal district court and the court of appeals have already ruled that by placing the primary control in the hands of the party rather than the state we could not evade the Negro vote issue," Mr. Gibson said.

"If the supreme court also takes this view, we will have no course to follow but to place some legal restrictions around primary voting. To open the primaries to all comers, with no legal control, would be unthinkable."

And there is no need for the legislature to wait until the supreme court acts and no necessity for a special session to do in haste what could be done now.

For the result of an appeal to the supreme court is, for all practical purposes, foregone. It can be predicted, both from the tenor of the district court and the circuit court of appeals' decisions but also from the decisions of the supreme court itself on this subject. If any state finds a way to evade the constitution in this matter of Negro voting, the supreme court declared, it will find a way to prevent that evasion. It was a fair warning. The Record

South Carolina, however, paid no attention to this warning, but it ought at least to perceive now that there is no virtue in continuing to butt its head against a stone wall. Fri. 1-16-48

Question For Council

The Record Columbia, S.C. Mon. 1-19-48

It is pretty hard to understand the thinking of J. M. Hinton, secretary of the Negro citizens' committee, in questioning the act of the Columbia city council in appropriating $8,000 for the financing of the city Democratic primary.

It may be, of course, that the Negro citizens' committee didn't intend to suggest that the city council should recognize the Democratic party as a private club, although its secretary's first question seems to be capable of this interpretation. It has been the contention of the Negroes that the Democratic party is not a private club—the Elmore case was brought to persuade the federal courts to adopt the idea that the Democratic primary in South Carolina, in the language of the plaintiff's attorneys and of the court, is the only "meaningful" election in the state—and therefore that Negro voters may not be excluded from it.

The Negro citizens' committee should, it seems, have welcomed the city appropriation as evidence to support their position.

The white defendants and their attorneys in the Elmore case, however, will object to the appropriation. The city's act cuts the ground from beneath them. It identifies government with the party. And they have not yet decided what their next step in the case will be. More than one course is open to them; the decision of the circuit court of appeals isn't necessarily final. Nor is it necessary that the party hold a primary. The Record

The appropriation was granted without very much thought on the part of city council, even if the suit were not still pending. For if the city appropriates money for one party primary, it must in logic appropriate an equal amount for every other party primary. What would city council do if the Republicans wanted to hold a nominating primary in Columbia and asked for $8,000 to finance it? Mon. 1-19-48

NEGRO VOTE SPLIT IN SOUTH CAROLINA

The Times New York, N.Y.

White Upland Counties Back New Privilege in Break With Customs of the South

Mon. 6-28-48

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GREENVILLE, S. C., June 27—The controversial issue of granting party primary voting privileges to Negroes in the South is being highlighted in this state with overtones which make it the focal point of socio-political interest in Dixie.

In recent weeks there has been a political upheaval because of an intra-party dispute involving a racial segregation oath and a double-standard primary voting rule. It has split white voters into opposing camps and resulted in a spirited defense of Negro voting rights unparalleled in Southern annals.

The breach involves an unprecedented break with Southern customs and traditions since reconstruction days. It also follows the historical division between tidewater aristocrat and upland farmer and worker which has marked Southern development since colonial days and was a principal issue in early Jacksonian democracy.

Its immediate significance to the South rests in the fact that South Carolina was the first state to adopt the procedure of setting aside all primary voting laws to circumvent the 1944 Supreme Court decision that Negroes were entitled to vote in party primaries.

Individual Spirit Involved

The Times

Veteran political observers insist that the "defense" of Negro voting privileges by the upland counties does not stem from any "liberal beliefs" but that the uplanders' traditions of strong individualism and inherited dislike for tidewater or lowland political direction has rebounded to the political benefit of the Negro.

The party split has already resulted in increased Negro primary enrollment, a record drop in overall primary enrollment, discussions of possible court suits to "protect" Negro voting privileges and party threats to refuse to count votes cast in the counties which have kept their party enrollment books open beyond the prescribed deadline. New York, N.Y.

The Federal courts recently ruled against South Carolina's stratagem of removing the primary voting laws and directing that "qualified Negro voters" had the right to vote in Democratic primaries. Mon. 6-28-48

On May 19 the State Democratic Convention adopted two sets of primary voting rules. One permits Negroes to vote in the primaries on presentation of registration certificates for the general election showing that they are "qualified voters." The other set permits white Democrats to vote in the primaries merely by enrolling on the club's books.

Separation Oath Ordered

The convention rules also require voters for both races to take an oath that they believe in separation of the races socially and educationally and are opposed to proposed Federal Fair Employment Practices legislation.

Discord flared throughout the state, and six upland counties, representing about one-fourth of the population, opposed the convention rules. Generally, the lowland counties, where Negroes predominate, favored the rules, and the upland counties, where whites predominate, opposed the qualifications.

The Times

Greenville, Greenwood, Laurens, Pickens, Richland and Spartanburg Counties took action through their county executive committees to defy the state convention rules and opened their party enrollment books to Negroes and whites on the same basis. Several of the counties refused to apply the new oath for applicants.

6-28-48

The upland counties generally feel that the convention rules, if carried out, will result in court tests invalidating election results. It is now time, they say, to recognize that the Negro's voting rights are going to be supported by the courts. Mon. 6-28-48

Papers Served On Democrats In 45 Counties

The Record
Columbia, S.C.
Fri. 7-9-48

Papers were being served today on South Carolina Democratic leaders of 45 counties to permit Negro enrolment and Party Chairman William P. Baskin postponed a scheduled trip to the national Democratic convention pending developments.

34(e)(2)

Baskin had no comment early this afternoon on steps to be taken by the party. He said that party officials and attorneys to represent them would confer later.

Meanwhile, Baskin who had not seen a copy of Judge J. Waties Waring's order requiring Negro enrolment until July 16, said he expected to leave for Philadelphia either tonight or tomorrow morning for the national convention.

Baskin had no comment on whether or not he would leave the convention to be in Charleston July 16 for a hearing for the Democrats to show cause why they should not be permanently enjoined from preventing Negroes to enrol in club books. 7-9-48

Enrolment Opened

The Waring order yesterday temporary enjoined the party in 45 counties to permit Negro enrolment.

The May 19 state convention adopted rules permitting white Democrats to vote by enroling on the club books and permitting Negroes to vote by presentation of registration certificates. Thus, Negroes, by not being enroled on the club books, would be denied participation in party affairs.

State Sen. Brantley Harvey of Beaufort, chairman of the party rules committee, also was expected in Columbia today. Christie Benet, Columbia attorney, heads the party's battery of lawyers in the matter. The Record

Party leaders have been ordered to appear at a hearing at Charleston July 16—during the time the national convention will be in session—before federal district Judge Waring. Columbia, S.C.

The hearing will be on a request by a Beaufort county Negro for a permanent injunction against the party's refusal to enrol Negroes. The Beaufort man's name was purged from club books there.

Meanwhile, Waring issued a preliminary order opening party enrolment books to Negroes. Fri

Only Richland county was exempted from the order. This apparently was because Richland was the county against which an original action was directed that resulted in an order from Waring opening party primaries to Negroes. 7-9-48

Richland since has enroled Negroes, and has abandoned a state party voting oath pledging support to racial segregation. Several other up-state counties have taken similar action, yet were named in the temporary injunction hearing order.

Negroes Urged To Enrol

Negroes all over South Carolina were urged by their leaders today to enrol in the state Democratic party during the next week.

James M. Hinton, state president of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, said all South Carolina Negroes were being told to present themselves immediately for enrolment.

Democrats in South Carolina Bar Negroes With New Rules

The Christian Science Monitor
Boston, Mass

34(e)(2)

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

Columbia, S. C.

The Supreme Court has said, in effect, that Negroes must be permitted to vote in South Carolina's "private club" Democratic primary, but since then it has become increasingly apparent the minority race's fight for a full measure of participation in the State's politics has just begun.

The Court decision held that "qualified Negro electors" must be allowed to vote in the primaries. W. P. Baskin, Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee, has construed this as meaning those Negroes qualified to vote in the general elections.

Qualifications for voting in the general election are different from those for voting in the primary.

Even before South Carolina's Legislature stripped all laws governing the primaries from the statute books in an attempt to get around the Texas case decision, the Democratic Party in South Carolina has made its own rules. These rules restrict membership in the Party to persons of the white race. 5-17-48

So, while a relatively small number of Negroes will vote in the Democratic primaries this summer, it is evident that, without further court action, they will be unable to participate in Party affairs—county and State conventions—or to place the names of Negro candidates on the Democratic Party primary ballots.

Conceivably the State Democratic Convention meeting here May 19 could change the rules to permit Negroes to become members. However, this is regarded as improbable, in view of the sentiment expressed in the recent county conventions. One county convention—Dillon County—refused to seat eight Negro delegates, acting in accordance with an order by Mr. Baskin.

At other county meetings, the belief was expressed that the recent court decision had no direct bearing on admittance of Negroes to Party membership. Mr. Baskin ruled that only enrolled members of the Party could serve as county convention delegates. Hence the nonadmittance of the Negro delegates. The Christian Science

The leaders of Negro organizations in the State have let it be known that they will resort again to the courts, unless Negroes are taken into the Party membership and can enter Negro candidates for office on the Democratic ballot. In South Carolina, political parties, rather than the State, furnish ballots. Boston, Mass.

The qualifications for voting in the Democratic primary are negligible. But to obtain a registration certificate to vote in the general election — which heretofore has been a mere ratification of the primary result—one not only must show a poll tax receipt, but also must be able to understand any part of the constitution.

While no statewide total is available, registration for the general election this year seems to be heavier than ever before. 5-18-48

The South Carolina Regulars Will Be Seated

34(e)(2)

The weaknesses of the position of the regular South Carolina Democratic (Policians') party delegation, seeking the South Carolina seats at the Philadelphia convention, are obvious.

Columbia, S.C.

The party was set up, the Democratic club meetings held, the county and state conventions held, the delegates picked all in violation of the orders of the federal courts. Negroes were not permitted to participate in club meetings—except of course in the one East Dillon club, and in this case their participation was later held to be in violation of the rules and cancelled—and had no part in the naming of delegates to the conventions. The party is still a white party and the delegates to Philadelphia do not represent any Negro voters. Fri. 7-9-48

The delegates are pledged on the civil rights issue and the state organization served notice upon the convention that South Carolina Democrats will participate in the convention only if they are allowed to do the pitching. In addition it also served notice upon the convention that it will bolt the Democratic ticket should President Truman or any other like-minded person on the civil rights issue be nominated. This is notice to the national party that there may be no Truman electors in South Carolina's election should the regular Democratic party delegates be recognized.

On the other hand the group of dissident Democrats who met in Columbia and sent a delegation, representing both races to the convention, cannot claim that their choice originated with the club meetings. For it did not. They did not have time, after the regular organization refused to reconvene the state convention as requested, to conduct club meetings. They could only assemble a few Democrats from as many counties as possible and hold a convention for themselves, adopt party rules conforming to the court decisions and pledge their support to the Democratic nominees, whoever they may be. The Record

The third delegation is from the Progressive Democrats, largely controlled by Negroes, and representing therefore a definite minority of the Democratic voters. This group is not asking that all of their delegates be seated, but only that they be given proportional representation in the convention. The Progressive Democrats have however never been allied with the national Democratic party, represented traditionally in South Carolina by the regular state Democratic party. Columbia, S.C.

There are precedents in Democratic conventions for seating such delegates elected by irregulars. The Huey Long delegation, elected by a special state convention distinct from the regular Louisiana convention, was seated in 1932. But that was done simply because Mr. Long had picked Roosevelt and Roosevelt, although controlling the convention at that time, needed the extra votes. Fri. 7-9-48

Truman will be the Democratic nominee and Truman is a politician. He does not need the South Carolina votes and will have no compelling reason therefore to unseat the regular delegates. And politicians have an affinity for politicians, even then they are on opposite sides. They all speak the same language.

So the odds are that the regular South Carolina delegates will get the South Carolina seats. The others are simply going along for the ride or to be there in the event of a miracle.

Changing the Richmond Picture

The Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Reporting to the annual meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People last week, Dr. J. M. Tinsley, a board member from Richmond, Va., reported that 50,000 Negroes had been added to the voting lists of Virginia's capital and adjoining communities within the past year.

34e(2)

If this is true, then the political picture in Richmond will certainly be changed in the forthcoming elections, and Virginia must look forward to seeing some brown faces in its next Legislature. Sat. 1-17-48

If all these Negro voters actually vote, they should be able to have a whole lot to say about how and by whom the capital of Virginia will be governed in the future.

There has been a great deal of talk about the high cost of color caste in the United States but not so much about the economic advantages of it to the group responsible for maintaining it.

For example, in a city like Richmond there must be scores, perhaps hundreds of jobs of various kinds indirectly due to political control, and those who holds the jobs are paid.

When such jobs are available to only a section of the population while a large minority is barred, this is a great economic asset and advantage to the group monopolizing the political life.

There are many other economic advantages not so obvious at first glance but nevertheless important.

As more and more Negroes qualify to vote in Southern cities and towns, and actually exercise this right, the old white monopoly will break down, and not only will new blood enter the governing class, but this healthier political competition will make for better and more democratic government.

Progress in the South is primarily dependent upon Southerners, but for the past seventy-five years at least a third of the Southerners have been prevented from making any political contribution to that progress.

Now that the political picture is being changed, in Richmond and elsewhere below the Potomac and Ohio rivers, colored Americans have a great opportunity and responsibility to vote intelligently in the community interest to make their respective cities and States the kind of places they want them to be. Urge Active Role Of Women In Politics

Atlanta Daily World
Fri. 6-18-48

WASHINGTON—(ANP)— The women's division of the Democratic National committee is workinig hard to bring women full recognition in every phase of public life, Mrs. India Edwards, executive director, said last week in telling what the Democratic party is doing for women in this country.

Her division, Mr. Edwards said, provides many services such as the publishing of speeches made by party leaders, a monthly magazine, the Democratic Digest, and booklets on how to make a speech and the achievements of party women in public life.

Scheduling of speakers for groups interested in the candidates and issues of the party are also part of the women's division's activities, she said.

In urging women not only to vote but to run for office and take active roles in politics she spoke of Mrs. Thomasina Johnson:

"The work of Mrs. Thomasina Johnson as chief of the minority groups section, United States Employment service, to which Mrs. Johnson was appointed in December, 1946, by President Truman, is a cause for satisfaction of all women interested in government careers." 6-18-48

To get a booklet on how Mrs. Johnson and other Democratic women got ahead, Mrs. Edwards said write to the Democratic Organization, samples of the Democratic Digest, monthly magazine on party activitis and mimeographed copies of speeches made by such party leaders as President Truman, J. Howard McGrath, national committee chairman; and Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas.

These speeches will be sent out free. One of the most intertaining, she said, is Mrs. Douglas famous "market basket speech," which she made to Congress April 28 with a grocery basket filled with items and their price tags. She asked congress to do something to reduce the high cost of living. 6-18-48

Mrs. Edwards advised groups to write to headquarters for information on speakers if they wanted a party leader to speak before them. Her department as present is in a drive to get women out to vote, she said.

"The Democratic party has always recognized the importance of women in politics," she said.

Women Democrats to Campaign in South

The Christian

By Josephine Ripley
Staff Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Washington

Plans for a special campaign to bring the women of the presently un-solid South back into party ranks behind President Truman are already under way in the women's division of the Democratic Party. Fri.

A picked corps of its best southern women speakers are poised to pour down over the Mason and Dixon's Line for intimate house-to-house heart-to-heart talks with feminine members of the dissident group. Boston, Mass.

The women do not underrate the seriousness of the party split or the job ahead, but party leaders here are confident of bringing the fair sex around to the polls on the Truman ticket, come November. 7-16-48

"I feel confident," declares Mrs. India Edwards, Executive Director of the Women's Division, "that during the next few months, by straightforward contact with the bulk of the women down there, we will be able to build up a big women's vote in the South for Truman."

Mrs. Edwards figures that the women may be more easily brought back into party line than the men.

Loyalty Split

She sees the women of the South as "torn between party loyalty and devotion to their men leaders who have bolted the ranks," but she thinks that women are "inclined to be a little more realistic and broader in their point of view." 7-16-48

In fact, Mrs. Edwards reported that "in all of the anti-Truman talk that went on before the convention, there was not a single woman leader in any of the states where the men were against Truman—not a single woman leader who stood publicly with their men in that point of view."

They did not come out openly in opposition, she explained, "but they called me personally and said that 'the women are not with this—they are with Truman!'"

Mrs. Edwards averred that "that happened in every single case" and she thinks "it is a very encouraging sign," and that it may hold true in this situation, too.

'Hopes' Held

7-16-48

That is not to say she feels that Alabama and Mississippi—the states whose delegations walked out on the convention—can be converted easily. In their case, she only says she is "in hopes" they may be brought around.

It is not Mrs. Edwards' view that the women who do not come back into the Truman fold will vote Republican. It is her opinion that they will vote Democratic, by a write-in for Senator Richard B. Russell (D) of Georgia.

It will be the purpose of the women speakers who go into the South to break down the "hysteria" which Mrs. Edwards feels has been built up behind this civil-rights issue by party leaders and carried on by the press and radio.

Personal Contact

She feels that by personal contact with the women of the South, it will be possible to convince them that this civil-rights platform "is no different from others we have had in the past—and civil rights goes right back to the Constitution."

"It is not as if this were a drastic plank in the platform," she argues.

It is Mrs. Edwards' contention that although civil rights is "spelled out" a little more in detail this year, it is essentially the same program which the party has had right along. Thr.

It is her hope and confidence that southern women of the dissident element may be brought to see this. Christian Sc. Monitor

"I think the women have a big job in this campaign," she states, "and I am excited about it."

That the women of the party have the stamina for this "big job" there is no doubt. After the wind-up sessions of the convention lasting from 11:30 a.m. July 14 to 2:30 a.m. July 15, the ladies were up and "on with the show" by 9 a.m. for the final session of the campaign school.

Speeches Rehearsed

Boston, Mass.

Campaign speeches were being rehearsed before Mrs. Hugh Butler, the professional speaking instructor employed by the division, in preparation for the coming campaign months. Fri.

So important is this professional training considered that the carry-over session was announced from the convention platform to the thousands of women assembled there. 7-16-48

The actual turnout for the classes, however, has been small in comparison to the total feminine attendance. For one thing, they have been held at an early hour so as not to conflict with convention sessions, thus leaving the women little time for rest in the morning after late evening meetings. Also, it is recognized that it is difficult in the midst of so much confusion and activity to pin the women down to serious effort involving the learning and rehearsing of speeches.

Mrs. Butler feels that much better results would be obtained if she were to have opportunity to go out into the various communities in coming weeks and conduct her classes on the spot in a quieter atmosphere. 7-16-48

Making Political History in Brooklyn

By Doxey A. Wilkerson

The Worker

Real political history is being made in Brooklyn's 10th Congressional District where Ada B. Jackson is running for Congress on the American Labor Party ticket. And the people sense what they are doing to send this wonderful community leader to Washington—thus extending the frontiers of Negro freedom still another mile in the direction of full democratic rights. Sun. 10-24-48

Especially is there unprecedented enthusiasm for the campaign in the Bedford - Stuyvesand area, where Mrs. Jackson's 25 years of struggles on scores of political and civic issues have endeared her to tens of thousands of Negroes, Jews and all others who fight in the cause of the common man.

Cold registration figures reveal that 50 percent of the 17,000 voters in the 17th A. D. are Negroes, ten percent more than in previous elections. But behind these statistics lie many warm, human-interest stories of hundreds of "little people" aroused to a higher level of political activity than ever before—eager to do their part to "send Ada Jackson to Congress."

New York N.Y.

ILLUSTRATIVE is the tall, dignified, middle-aged Negro man who entered the Jackson Campaign headquarters at 1495 Fulton Street several weeks ago. He wanted help in preparing for the literacy test required of new voters. The next day he returned, proudly displaying his literacy certificate, and handed campaign manager "Tony" Tully a dollar bill — "to help elect Mrs. Jackson." When Mr. Tully pointed out that this dollar could make him a member of the American Labor Party, he turned down the proposal, explaining:

"I'm not educated enough to join a political party. I never had a chance for schooling; but I'm making sure my three children get that chance. They'll be in ALP." Then, with tears welling up in his eyes, he added: "I never voted before in my life; but this time I want to vote—for Mrs. Jackson and Henry Wallace. I appreciate what you did to help me pass the test." Sun. 10-24-48

★

SO IT WAS with hundreds of new voters who came for help to the joint headquarters of the 17th A.D. American Labor Party and the Bedford - Stuyvesant Wallace-for-President Committee. Several came in wheelchairs. Many stood timidly on the sidewalk outside, a little shy at revealing their lack of schooling; but entered eagerly when a campaign worker went out to invite them in.

Mrs. Jackson is a masterful campaigner, because she is, indeed, a part of her people. She understands and gives expression to aspirations which they hold in common.

MRS. ADA B. JACKSON

"I am no politician," she declares; "I am a mother who is determined to fight for the things all of us in the 10th Congressional District want. Let's do our fighting together!" And the crowds respond with roars of approval.

★

SHE TALKS to them about peace: "I don't want my son to go back to fight another war." She talks of prices: "I know what it means to go to the butcher shop and come out empty-handed." She talks of schools: "My children, like yours, need playgrounds and modern schools. Together, you and I can solve these problems." She speaks of discrimination: "When the lash of discrimination strikes at the Jewish or Italian peoples, I know that the same hand holds the same whip, and I feel it in my flesh."

Sun 10-24-48

She tells them about Henry Wallace: "There is no man in public life more devoted to the cause of the common man than Henry Wallace. I am proud that his Party honored me as its candidate for Congress."

This is the message which brings scores of new volunteers to the Jackson Campaign headquarters, timidly offering to help canvass, "if you'll show me how."

★

THIS IS THE MESSAGE that led two dozen young people from Camp Wo-Chi-Ca to enliven the headquarters with songs of the Progressive Party while they got out a mailing of 60,000 Ada Jackson brochures in record time.

This is the message which is arousing Bedford-Stuyvesant to a high pitch of political activity unparalleled anywhere else in Brooklyn.

Sun 10-24-48

Mrs. Ada B. Jackson, who still recalls vividly the lynching of a girl playmate and her family back in Georgia, has a very real chance to become the first Negro woman ever to sit in the U. S. House of Representatives.

The Negro people love and respect her; and will vote for her. The decisive 2,000 Jewish voters in the District, disgusted with Representative Sommers for his "100 percent" backing of Truman's betrayal of Israel, are turning in ever greater numbers to her support.

What is now required for victory was simply expressed by Mrs. Jackson to her campaign committee last week: "I am giving all I can," she said. "We all have got to give just a little bit more—and we'll come through on top."
